Russia's Seizure of American Sealing Vessels—Free Mail Delivery Granted Western Towns—Wisconsin's Apportionment Invalid—Canada's Exhibit—A Mayor Shot.

ONLY A PRETENCE

Was Russia's Seizure of American Sealing Vessels.

Toronto special: It is reported that the captain of one of the British Columbia's sealing vessels seized by Russia in Behring Sea is here for the purpose of furnishing the Government with affidavits of his seizure and information as to others, and that he states that he understood the Russian language and while a prisoner on board the Russian gun boat learned from the conversation and actions of the Russian officers that they were instructed to make only a pretence of seizing American vessels, the real object being to assert such rights in Behring Sea as would materially assist the United States in the approaching arbitration. Be this as it may, cablegrams regarding these seizures are passing daily between the British and Canadian Governments.

Free Mail Delivery.

Postmaster General Wanamaker has issued an order to establish the free delivery service, to commence December 1, 1892, at the following places:

Decorah, Ia.; Shelbyville, Ind.; Baton Rouge, La.; Louisiana, Mo.; Laredo, Tex.; Oklahoma, Okla.; Bucyrus, O.; Greenville, Mass.; Peru, Ind.; Troy, O.; Media, Pa.; Braddock, Pa.; Michigan City, Ind.; Bellefontaine, O.; Laramie, Wyo.; New Whatcom, Wash.; Yankton, S. D.; Ironwood, Mich.; Stevens Point, Wis.; Danville, Pa.; Mason City, Ia.

The necessary boxes, satchels, books, blanks, and furniture will be furnished provided that if any of the foregoing cities fails to comply with the regulations in regard to posting the names of the streets at the intersections thereof or as to numbering of houses, etc., by or before November 30, 1892, the establishment of the free service at such office or offices shall be postponed.

Slaughtered the Infants.

San Francisco special: A short time ago a man calling himself Dr. Henry C. Beall, his wife known as Nellie Haven, and Hattie E. Graham were arrested charged with the murder by malpractice of Mary Carrol, the young daughter of a Plumas County farmer. Beall forfeited $10,000 bail and disappeared, but the women are still in prison. It is said, according to the story of a Mrs. Montrose, that Beall has committed a great number of murders in this city. The woman says that Beall used her house for ten months as a private hospital. During that period he had about fifty patients and there were no fewer than forty children born alive in the house, not one of them being permitted to live. Beall either chloroformed or drowned his helpless victims, weighted their bodies and threw them into the bay or cremated them.

Canada's Exhibit.

The statement that a probability exists of the Canadian exhibit at the World's Fair in Chicago not being first-class, is, according to Prof. Saunders, the dominion commissioner, groundless. "In fact," he says, "already over 100,000 feet of space has been applied for, more than has been allotted by the World's Fair Directors to Canada. The total amount of space granted to the dominion is about 100,000 feet."

Apportionment Invalid.

The Wisconsin Supreme Court has rendered a decision declaring the apportionment made by the extra session of the Legislature invalid. Justice Winslow dissents. Another session will doubtless be called and the Legislature will make another attempt to conform to the ruling of the court.

A Mayor Shot.

At Wheeling, W. Va., Mayor John J. Martin was shot by R. P. Harr, the keeper of a "speak easy," who fired at him through the court-room window while his wife was being tried for selling liquor without a license. Harr escaped but subsequently surrendered and was jailed.

A Buffalo Insurance Company Wrecked.

Examiner Michael Shannon has found a shortage of $690,000 in the accounts of the Life and Reserve Association of Buffalo, N. Y., and a motion was made for the appointment of a receiver. There are over 5,000 members who carry insurance aggregating $7,091,000.

Burned Over Half a Town.

A fire, supposed to have been started by children, swept the whole eastern side of the business street of Howard, S. D., causing a loss, estimated at $100,000: insurance, 30,000. R. B. Allensmoth and wife an old couple, lost their life-saving household goods.

Arrived with a Rescued Crew Aboard.

The Ward line steamer Yucutan which arrived in New York, recently, from Mexican ports brought as passengers Captain V. Smith and nine sailors of the British bark Feuchny. In a terrible storm on September 18 the bark foundered near the Isle of Pines.

Terrible Accident.

Ed Frolinger of Alcony, Champaign County, Ohio, met with a horrible death at Springfield. In running a wagon down a steep embankment one of the front wheels struck a rail and threw the wagon tongue violently around, striking Frolinger in the stomach. He lived but a few hours.

Choked to Death at Dinner.

John M. Patterson, an inmate of the Northern Indiana Insane Asylum, became choked at dinner on a piece of beef, and died before medical relief could be obtained.

The Scaffold Gave Way.

A scaffold on which several men were at work in the Methodist Episcopal Church at Camden, N. J., collapsed and one man was killed and two seriously injured.

Work of a Typhoon.

Particulars have been received by the steamer Belgic, from Yokohama, of a destructive typhoon that swept over the Riukiu Islands. Nearly 5,000 buildings were either destroyed or damaged, sixty junks were wrecked and a large number of sailors who are missing are supposed to have been drowned. About a third of the crops have been rendered useless.

Business Houses Destroyed.

The St. Petersburg (Pa.) opera house was struck by lightning the other night. The flames spread and burned the entire business portion of the town. Thirty-two buildings in all were destroyed.

CRUSHED AND CREMATED.

Horrible Scenes at a Wreck on the Pennsylvania in Ohio.

A most appalling railroad accident occurred on the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad one and a half miles west of Shreve, Ohio, at 4 o'clock Wednesday morning. No. 8 fast line, going east, collided head-on with a section of No. 75 freight, going west. Both engines, one express car, two postals, a smoker and one passenger car and three or four freight cars were thrown in an indescribable mass. Twelve persons were killed and cremated. The two firemen, one engineer, four postal clerks and six or seven passengers were among the killed. There was no water near the wreck and nothing could be done to extinguish the flames. The place where the accident occurred is known as Brown's cut, and is filled up for about 300 feet. The cries of the unfortunate people in the burning mass were awful, and the sight was all the more horrible because nothing could be done to assist the frantic ones. William H. Brown, of Huntington, Ind., a passenger who was slightly injured, says the front parts of the trains were thrown up on a bank thirty feet high and parts of them over a fence on top of the bank. The freight was running on the passenger's time.

TRAMPLED TO DEATH.

Four Women Killed in a Fire Panic in New York City.

Four women were trampled to death and a dozen other persons injured, several of them probably fatally, by a senseless fire panic in a Jewish synagogue in New York. The catastrophe occurred in one of the four synagogues located in a dirty and crowded tenement house at 27 Ludlow street. The synagogue is on the third floor, and was crowded with Polish and Hungarian Jews of the lowest type. The panic was the result of a bit of paper catching fire from a candle which was being used in the ceremonies attendant upon the Rosh Hashonnah celebration. The worshippers in the room numbered about 300 persons, and they were so closely packed that when a man who saw the paper blaze up cried "Fire!" none of the people could turn to get out, but forced their way over the heads of others. The men led the fight to get to the door, and women and children were trampled under foot. The men made no attempt to save women and children, but literally fought their way to the passage and struggled with one another on the stairs to get to the street.

SEIZING AMERICAN CATTLE.

Those that Stray Across the Border Confiscated by Mexican Officials.

Complaints have reached Deming, N. M., from Las Palomas, Mexico, immediately south, that the customs officials at that place are seizing large numbers of American cattle which stray across the line from day to day. Some weeks ago the Mexican Government issued an order to the effect that on and after a certain day all foreign cattle found on Mexican soil would be confiscated. The cattlemen on this side of the line made strenuous efforts to secure their stock and were in a large degree successful. At the same time the loss sustained was considerable, as the grazing in the vicinity of Las Palomas is the best within an area of 100 miles, and the cattle had gone there in large numbers. It is simply impossible to round them all up. Naturally, the cattle are returning to their old grazing-grounds, but as rapidly as they cross the border they are seized by the officials. The loss to the cattlemen by the action of the Mexican authorities will mount up into the thousands and is daily increasing.

LOTTERY SHARKS AT WORK.

They Still Have Hopes of Gaining a Foothold in North Dakota.

A Fargo, N. D., dispatch says: The startling statement is made here that the Louisiana Lottery has not given up all hope of gaining a foothold in North Dakota, and that the wires are already being pulled in certain legislative districts in order to defeat the amendment to the constitution which will come up for action at the session of the Legislature this winter, forever prohibiting the granting of any charter to a lottery. An amendment must pass two consecutive sessions of the Legislature, and then be submitted to a vote of the people, before becoming a part of the organic law, and if the bill could be defeated in the Legislature this winter it would be five years before it could again come up for action. If the bill for the amendment to the constitution goes through the Legislature this winter it will forever stop any hopes the lottery company may entertain of gaining a foothold in this State, as it would carry at the election by an overwhelming vote.

TO PURSUE THE SOUTH PORTLAND.

The Venezuelan Minister Arms a Yacht to Capture the Blockade Runner.

After a good deal of trouble and hard work, General Peraza, the Venezuelan minister, succeeded in obtaining and arming a vessel at New York with which to pursue and, if possible, capture the South Portland. She will soon be on her way after the steamer that is causing the Venezuelan government so much uneasiness. She has a large crew, mostly of Venezuelans, but among them are four Englishmen who have served in the English navy as gunners. In addition to her crew, the cruiser will have as passenger a number of Venezuelan officials and army officers, and Carlos Bolet, son of Minister Peraza. Gen. Carlos Castro is her commander. She can steam eighteen knots an hour.

HUNTING FOR THE WRECKERS.

Men Scouring the Country to Find the Santa Fe Train Robbers.

A late Topeka dispatch says: Armed posses are scouring the country in every direction for the miscreants who wrecked the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe express near Osage City. Further evidence has been secured showing conclusively that the wreck was well planned. Two through freights had passed over the track within a half hour of the ill-fated passenger train. The last one preceded the express train within five minutes, and was waiting for it to pass at Osage City. In this short time the fish plates and spikes had been removed. The robbery theory is undoubtedly the correct one. The Santa Fe Company has employed extra detectives and has its extra forces at work on the case.

Sentenced to Twenty Years' Imprisonment.

A remarkable murder trial at Gadsden, Ala., closed with the conviction of the defendant for murder in the second degree, the sentence being twenty years' imprisonment. William Welsh was assassinated at Gadsden in 1889 and Abe Lancaster was found to have slain him and sent to prison. Two years ago Talley Welch confessed the murder and Lancaster was released. Welch withdrew his confession after being sentenced to death and asked for a new trial, with the result as given.

Benefited by the Change.

Mrs. Harrison is considerably better and for the first time in many weeks the President has dared to hope for her recovery. Ever since she reached the White House she has continued to improve. She declares now she is perfectly contented.

He Criticised Diaz.

C. C. Hogue, an American merchant of Monterey, Mexico, has been expelled from the republic for criticizing the administration of President Diaz.

Blown from Bed and Killed.

At Aspen, Ohio, John Powell was killed by being blown up with dynamite. He and his wife had retired for the night and were asleep when the explosion came. Instantly they were blown out of bed to find themselves buried in the debris of their home. Mrs. Powell was uninjured and easily extricated from the fallen mass, but her husband was killed. The origin of the explosion is a mystery. Mrs. Powell says no explosives were kept about the house.

CRUSHED UNDER CARS.

A Freight Train Crashes Into a Caboose at New Hampton, Iowa.

The worst railroad accident that has ever occurred in that section of the State is reported from New Hampton, Iowa. It happened Saturday, but a short distance from the scene of the Wapsie wreck of two years ago. Eight were killed and several hurt. A freight train and crew of ten men on the Chicago and Great Western was ordered out from Elma to distribute rails along the line of the road. The train pulled into the New Hampton depot to throw off a few rails and receive further instructions from the dispatcher at headquarters at Oelwein. At the rear was the caboose with from twelve to fifteen persons in it. About 10:40 the through freight came dashing around the bend running, at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour, intending to pull right through the station without stopping. Just before pulling into the station there is a very sharp curve and the vision is also obstructed by a grove. Nothing could be seen of the train until it would be too late to stop. The through freight came crashing down. The engineer and fireman jumped, and the engine plowed into the standing caboose, knocking it into splinters, badly wrecking two other cars, and finally burying itself in three feet of earth. The killed were all railroad laborers.

"PAT" GILMORE DEAD.

The Noted Bandmaster Dies Suddenly in St. Louis.

Patrick Sarsfield Gilmore, the leader of Gilmore's Band, died at the Lindell Hotel at St. Louis Saturday night, after an illness of but fifteen hours. The members of the band were not aware of Mr. Gilmore's critical condition, and played one number of the evening concert at the Exposition before being informed of their leader's death. Patrick S. Gilmore was born near Dublin, Ireland, Dec. 28, 1829. He connected himself with military bands at the age of 15, and, after having been in command of an English band, went to Salem, Mass., where he led a brass band. After this he went to Boston, where he organized "Gilmore's Band," with which he made extensive tours. In 1861 he accompanied the Twenty-fourth Massachusetts Regiment to the field and in 1863 was placed in charge of all the bands in the Department of Louisiana by Gen. Banks. He organized monster concerts in this country, and was the projector of the great "Peace Jubilees" held in Boston in 1869 and 1873. In 1878 he made a European tour with his band. He was bandmaster of the Twenty-second Regiment of New York. He composed many marches and songs.

TRADE MUCH BETTER.

Great Improvement Noted as the Cholera Scare Dwarfs.

R. G. Dun & Company's weekly review of trade says:

The alarm about cholera has vanished, and trade in every direction shows all the improvement that was expected. The South is a little dull because cotton is low in price and late, but a little improvement has been seen during the last week. In a few quarters at the West farmers are holding back wheat for higher prices, so that collections are retarded. But the general tenor of advices is exceedingly favorable. The volume of business continues larger than a year ago. Collections are exceptionally good on the whole, and although money is in active and increasing demand at nearly all points the supply is ample for all legitimate needs. Gold exports have ceased, foreign exchange has declined, and the money market is at present without disturbing features. Speculation is not on the whole active enough to have a disturbing influence.

DETECTIVES MEET WITH FAILURE.

Cannot Find Pinkerton's Arms at Homestead, but Promise a Surprise.

Detectives who have been trying to locate the arms taken from the Pinkertons on the day of the Homestead, Pa., riot, July 6, traced the weapons to a coal mine near the Munhall Station, thereabout. The detectives made a raid on the mine, but the expected arms were not to be found. They learned the arms were removed a day or two before. They claim to know the parties implicated in their removal, and a sensation is promised soon.

Died in the Midst of Vice.

J. H. Wickes, a well-known New York millionaire, lost his life in a disreputable house on Monroe avenue, Detroit, Mich. He had entered the place early in the evening, and after drinking a quantity of liquor repaired to a small room on the second floor. He went to the window and opened it to let in some fresh air. He lost his balance and fell to the sidewalk below, breaking his neck. Mr. Wickes was the President of the Wickes Refrigerator Company, of New York, and was in Detroit on business connected with the company.

Wyoming Sheep Thieves Arrested.

Sheriff Stough, of Cheyenne, has come in from Idaho with four prairie pirates and their plunder. The prisoners stole a band of 800 sheep, and had twenty days' start on Stough. The latter went into the field alone and came upon the party just as the sheep were being sold.

Peary at Philadelphia.

The Kite, bearing Lieutenant Peary and the relief party, has reached Philadelphia.

CLEVELAND IS HEARD.

HE WRITES HIS LETTER OF ACCEPTANCE.

Tariff Reform the Principal Clause in His Creed—Sound and Honest Money and Civil Service Reform Demanded—Support of the World's Fair.

Text of the Letter.

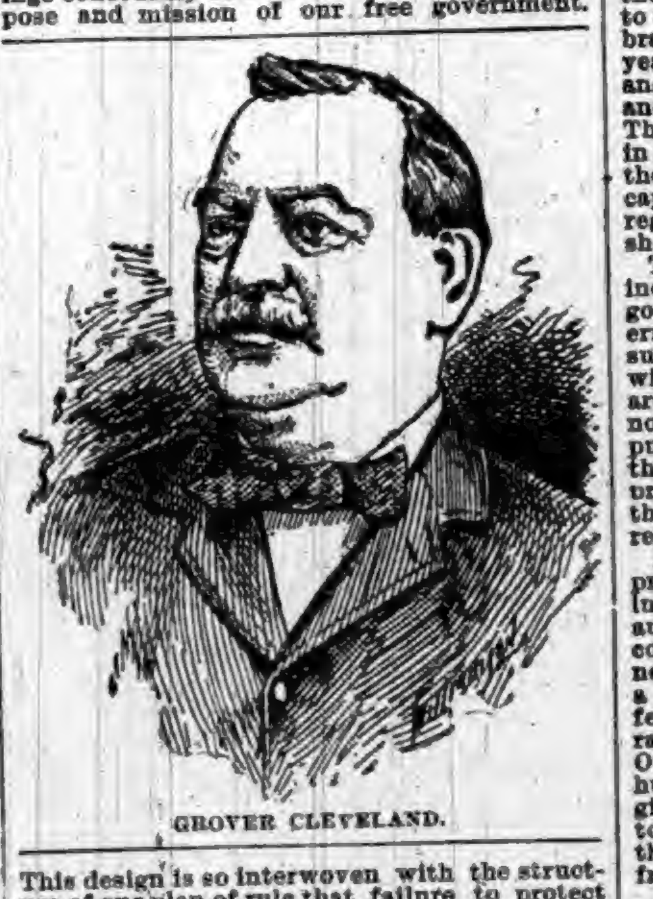
Following is the letter of Grover Cleveland accepting the nomination as the Democratic candidate for President of the United States:

To Hon. William L. Wilson and others, Committee, etc:

GENTLEMEN—In responding to your formal notification of my nomination to the Presidency by the National Democracy, I hope I may be permitted to say at the outset that continued reflection and observation have confirmed me in my adherence to the opinions, which I have heretofore plainly and publicly declared, touching the questions involved in the canvass.

This is a time, above all others, when these questions should be considered in the light afforded by a sober apprehension of the principles upon which our government is based and a clear understanding of the relation it bears to the people for whose benefit it was created. We shall thus be supplied with a test by which the value of any proposition relating to the maintenance and administration of our government can be ascertained, and by which the justice and honesty of every political question can be judged. If doctrines or theories are presented which do not satisfy this test loyal Americans must pronounce them false and mischievous.

The protection of the people in the exclusive use and enjoyment of their property and earnings concededly constitutes the especial purpose and mission of our free government.



GROVER CLEVELAND.

This design is so interwoven with the structure of our plan of rule that failure to protect the citizen in such use and enjoyment, or their unjustifiable diminution by the government itself, is a betrayal of the people's trust.

We have, however, undertaken to build a great nation upon a plan especially our own. To maintain it and to furnish, through its agency, the means for the accomplishment of national objects the American people are willing, through Federal taxation, to surrender a part of their earnings and income.

Tariff legislation presents a familiar form of Federal taxation. Such legislation results as surely in a tax upon the daily life of our people as the tribute paid directly into the hands of the tax-gatherer. We feel the burden of these tariff taxes too palpably to be persuaded by any sophistry that they do not exist or are paid by foreigners.

Such taxes, representing a diminution of the property rights of the people, are only justifiable when laid and collected for the purpose of maintaining our government and furnishing the means for the accomplishment of its legitimate purposes and functions. This is taxation under the operation of a tariff for revenue. It accords with the professions of American free institutions and its justice and honesty answer the test supplied by a correct appreciation of the principles upon which these institutions rest.

This theory of tariff legislation manifestly enjoins strict economy in public expenditures and their limitation to legitimate public uses, inasmuch as it exhibits as absolute extortion any exaction, by way of taxation, from the substance of the people beyond the necessities of a careful and proper administration of government.

Opposed to this theory the dogma is now boldly presented that tariff taxation is justifiable for the express purpose and intent of thereby promoting especial interests and enterprises. Such a proposition is so clearly contrary to the spirit of our Constitution, and so directly encourages the disturbance by selfishness and greed of patriotic sentiment, that its statement would rudely shock our people if they had not already been insidiously allured from the safe landmarks of principle. Never have honest desire for national growth, patriotic devotion to country and sincere regard for those who toil been so betrayed to the support of a pernicious doctrine.

In its behalf the plea that our infant industries should be fostered did service until discredited by our stalwart growth; then followed the exigencies of a terrible war, which made our people heedless of the opportunities for ulterior schemes afforded by the willing and patriotic payment of unprecedented tribute; and now, after a long period of peace, when our overburdened countrymen ask for relief and a restoration to a fuller enjoyment of their incomes and earnings, they are met by the claim that tariff taxation for the sake of protection is an American system, the continuance of which is necessary in order that high wages may be paid to our workingmen and a home market be provided for our farm products.

These pretenses should no longer deceive. The truth is that such a system is directly antagonized by every sentiment of justice and fairness of which Americans are pre-eminently proud. It is also true that while our workingmen and farmers can the least of all our people defend themselves against the harder home life which such tariff taxation decrees, the workingman suffering from the importation and employment of pauper labor, instigated by his professed friends, and seeking security for his interests in organized co-operation, still waits for a division of the advantages secured to his employer under cover of a generous solicitude for his wages, while the farmer is learning that the prices of his products are fixed in foreign markets, where he suffers from a competition invited and built up by the system he is asked to support.

The struggle for unearned advantage at the doors of the government tramples on the rights of those who patiently rely upon assurances of American equality. Every governmental concession to clamorous favorites invites corruption in political affairs by encouraging the expenditure of money to debauch suffrage in support of a policy directly favorable to private and selfish gain. This in the end must strangle patriotism and weaken popular confidence in the rectitude of republican institutions.

Though the subject of tariff legislation involves a question of markets, it also involves a question of morals. We cannot with impunity permit injustice to taint the spirit of right and equity, which is the life of our republic; and we shall fail to reach our national destiny if greed and selfishness lead the way.

Recognizing these truths, the National Democracy will seek by the application of just and sound principles to equalize to our people the blessings due them from the government they support, to promote among our countrymen a closer community of interests, cemented by patriotism and national pride, and to point out a fair field where prosperous and diversified American enterprise may grow and thrive in the wholesome atmosphere of American industry, ingenuity and intelligence.

Tariff reform is still our purpose. Though we oppose the theory that tariff laws may be passed having for their object the granting of discriminating and unfair aid to private ventures, we wage no exterminating war against any American interests. We believe a readjustment can be accomplished in accordance with the principles we profess without disaster or demolition. We believe that the advantages of freer raw material should be accorded to our manufacturers, and we contemplate a fair and careful distribution of necessary tariff burdens rather than the precipitation of free trade.

We anticipate with calmness the misrepresentations of our motives and purposes instigated by a selfishness which seeks to hold in unrelenting grasp its unfair advantage under present tariff laws. We will rely upon the intelligence of our fellow countrymen to reject the charge that a party comprising a majority of our people is planning the destruction or injury of American interests, and we know they cannot be frightened by the specter of impossible free trade.

The administration and management of our government depend upon popular will. Federal power is the instrument of that will—not its master. Therefore the attempt of the opponents of Democracy to interfere with and control the suffrage of the States through Federal agencies develops a design, which no explanation can mitigate, to reverse the fundamental and safe relations between the people and their government. Such an attempt cannot fail to be regarded by thoughtful men as proof of a bold determination to secure the ascendency of a discredited party in reckless disregard of a free expression of the popular will. To resist such a scheme is an impulse of democracy. At all times and in all places we trust the people. As against the disposition to force the way to federal power, we present to them as our claim to their confidence and support a steady championship of their rights.

The people are entitled to sound and honest money, abundantly sufficient in volume to supply their business needs. But whatever may be the form of the people's currency, national or State—whether gold, silver or paper—it should be so regulated and guarded by governmental action, or by wise and careful laws, that no one can be deluded as to the certainty and stability of its value. Every dollar put into the hands of the people should be of the same intrinsic value or purchasing power. With this condition absolutely guaranteed, both gold and silver can be safely utilized, upon equal terms in the adjustment of our currency.

In dealing with this subject no selfish scheme should be allowed to intervene and no doubtful experiment should be attempted. The wants of our people, arising from the deficiency or imperfect distribution of money circulation, ought to be fully and honestly recognized and efficiently remedied. It should, however, be constantly remembered that the inconvenience or loss that might arise from such a situation can be much easier borne than the universal distress which must follow a discredited currency.

Public officials are the agents of the people. It is therefore their duty to secure for those whom they represent the best and most efficient performance of public work. This plainly can be best accomplished by regarding ascertained fitness in the selection of Government employes. These considerations alone are sufficient justification for an honest adherence to the letter and spirit of civil-service reform. There are, however, other features of this plan which abundantly commend it. Through its operation worthy merit in every station and condition of American life is recognized in the distribution of public employment, while its application tends to raise the standard of political activity from spoils-hunting and unthinking party affiliation to the advocacy of party principles by reason and argument.

The American people are generous and grateful, and they have impressed these characteristics upon their government. Therefore, all patriotic and just citizens must commend liberal consideration for our worthy veteran soldiers and for the families of those who have died. No complaint should be made of the amount of public money paid to those actually disabled or made dependent by reason of army service.

But our pension roll should be a roll of honor, uncontaminated by ill-desert and unvitiated by demagogic use. This is due to those whose worthy names adorn the roll and to all our people who delight to honor the brave and the true. It is also due to those in years to come that they should hear reverently and lovingly the story of American patriotism and fortitude illustrated by our pension roll. The preferences accorded to veteran soldiers in public employment should be secured to them honestly and without evasion, and, when capable and worthy, their claim to the helpful regard and gratitude of their countrymen should be ungrudgingly acknowledged.

The assurance to the people of the utmost individual liberty consistent with peace and good order is a cardinal principle of our government. This gives no sanction to vexatious sumptuary laws, which unnecessarily interfere with such habits and customs of our people as are not offensive to a just moral sense and are not inconsistent with good citizenship and the public welfare. The same principle requires that the line between the subjects which are properly within governmental control and those which are more fittingly left to parental regulation should be carefully kept in view.

An enforced education, wisely deemed a proper preparation for citizenship, should not involve the impairment of wholesome parental authority nor do violence to the household conscience. Paternalism in government finds no approval in the creed of Democracy. It is a symptom of misrule, whether it is manifested in unauthorized gifts or by an unwarranted control of personal and family affairs. Our people, still cherishing the feeling of human fellowship which belonged to our beginning as a nation, require their Government to express for them their sympathy with all those who are oppressed under any rule less free than ours.

A generous hospitality, which is one of the most prominent of our national characteristics, prompts us to welcome the worthy and industrious of all lands to homes and citizenship among us. This hospitable sentiment is not violated, however, by careful and reasonable regulations for the protection of the public health, nor does it justify the reception of immigrants who have no appreciation of our institutions and whose presence among us is a menace to peace and good order.

The importance of the construction of the Nicaragua ship canal as a means of promoting commerce between our States and with foreign countries, and also as a contribution by Americans to the enterprises which advance the interests of the world of civilization, should commend the project to governmental approval and indorsement.

Our countrymen not only expect from those who represent them in public places a sedulous care for the things which are directly and palpably related to their material interests, but they also fully appreciate the value of cultivating our national pride and maintaining our national honor. Both their material interests and their national pride and honor are involved in the success of the Columbian Exposition, and they will not be inclined to condone any neglect of effort on the part of their government to insure, in the grandeur of this event, a fitting exhibit of American growth and greatness and a splendid demonstration of American patriotism.

In an imperfect and incomplete manner I have thus endeavored to state some of the things which accord with the creed and intentions of the party to which I have given my lifelong allegiance. My attempt has not been to instruct my countrymen or my party, but to remind both that Democratic doctrine lies near the principles of our Government, and tends to promote the people's good.

I am willing to be accused of addressing my countrymen upon trite topics and in homely fashion, for I believe that important truths are found on the surface of thought and that they should be stated in direct and simple terms. Though much is left unwritten, my record as a public servant leaves no excuse for misunderstanding my belief and position on the questions which are now presented to the voters of the land for their decision.

Called for the third time to represent the party of my choice in a contest for the supremacy of Democratic principles, my grateful appreciation of its confidence, less than ever, effaces the solemn sense of my responsibility.

If the action of the convention you represent shall be indorsed by the suffrages of my countrymen, I will assume the duties of the great office for which I have been nominated, knowing full well its labors and perplexities, and with humble reliance upon the Divine Being, infinite in power to aid and constant in a watchful care over our favored nation. Yours, very truly, GROVER CLEVELAND.

WEAVER WILL NOT SPEAK.

He Says There Is No Such Thing as Free Speech in Georgia.

An Atlanta, Ga., special says: J. B. Weaver will not fill any more of his appointments in Georgia. This conclusion he makes known in the following letter after naming his appointments:

> I find the spirit of organized rowdyism at some of the points visited within the State so great as to render it unadvisable for me to attempt to fill the engagements at the points not already reached. Personal indignity was threatened at Way Cross, but was suppressed by the attendance of a large number of our friends.
> At Albany we met with a howling mob, which refused to accord us a respectful and uninterrupted hearing. Our meeting at Columbus was a grand success. At Macon the conduct of the mob was simply disgraceful beyond description. Rotten eggs were thrown, prior to the introduction of the speaker, one of which struck Mrs. Weaver upon the head. Eggs were thrown repeatedly during the continuance of the meeting. Turbulent crowds continued to howl and hoot until past midnight. At Atlanta a similar crowd of rowdies gathered at the point of meeting, bent on tumult and disorder. Learning of this Mrs. Lease and myself refused to appear either in the forenoon or evening. I am convinced that similar treatment awaits us at the points not yet visited. I decline to meet said appointments.

In conclusion Gen. Weaver says the noise comes from young roughs, and not from ex-Confederate soldiers. He says little effort is made to protect his meetings.

Five thousand persons gathered at the State Capitol to hear Weaver. After an address by Gov. Northen urging good order, a committee was sent to Mr. Weaver to come, but he declined, saying: "I have been treated with too much indignity already." He declared that there was no free speech in the South, notwithstanding the fact that the audience assured him a respectful hearing. To this was added assurance of Gov. Northen and Chairman Atkins, of the State Democratic Committee, that he would have a fair hearing.

Nutmeg Is Poisonous.

Cases are not infrequently reported in which children, and sometimes grown persons, are poisoned by the free use of nutmegs, it not being generally known that this article of common household use is really a deadly poison. This is true, in fact, of most common condiments; but the misuse of these articles, such as pepper, capsicum, etc., is so obnoxious to the taste, except when taken in very minute quantities, that the consumer is warned in a very positive manner before he has had an opportunity to do himself serious injury. This is not the case, however, with nutmeg. This nut, which contains a poisonous principle of a very deadly character, may be consumed without inconvenience in quantities sufficient to produce fatal consequences; and it is surprising, not that death occasionally occurs from its use, but that deaths are not more frequent. A fatal case has been recently reported, in which a boy of 8 years fell into a comatose condition after eating two nutmegs, and died within twelve hours.

WRECKED BY ROBBERS.

PASSENGER TRAIN DITCHED NEAR OSAGE CITY, KAN.

Twenty-five Passengers Injured—A Million Dollars in Treasure Was the Prize Sought—Robbers Will Be Lynched if Captured—How 'Twas Done.

Four Train Men Are Killed.

A million dollars in currency.

That was the prize for which Kansas train robbers strove. An appalling loss of human life was the price they were willing to pay for it.

Passenger train No. 8, on the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad, eastbound, was wrecked early in the morning three miles west of Osage City by train robbers who hoped by that means to plunder the express car of $1,000,000, which was being transported from the city of Mexico to Boston.

A wrecked train, four men killed, and thirty-five men, women, and children injured are the only results of the attempted robbery, for the robbers secured not a penny of the treasure to capture which they imperiled so many lives.

The wreck and attempted robbery had been carefully and deliberately planned. To avoid the possibility of leaving a clew behind them the robbers stole the tools with which they did their dreadful work, instead of purchasing them. They stole a crow bar, wrench and sledge hammer from the tool house at Barclay, three miles west of the scene of the wreck, and with them removed the fish plate which joined two rails together, which would necessarily derail the train. The robbers had evidently selected with care the spot at which to wreck the train. They selected the top of a grade, up which the train would be obliged to ascend, thus lessening its speed and at the same time lessening the chances of so badly wrecking the train as to bury beneath the debris the treasure they were seeking. These precautions were unavailing, and the very thing they sought to evade thwarted their efforts.

When the train passed over the weakened track the entire train was wrecked, with the exception of the rear car, and most of the cars were piled one on top of the other above the express car, burying it, and its treasure so deep as to require several hours' digging to reach it. The engine, when it passed over the loosened rail, left the track, swayed to and fro for a second of time and then toppled over with a dreadful crash.

Four Trainmen Killed.

The engineer and fireman had no warning of their dreadful fate and no chance for their lives. They must have been killed outright when the engine was wrecked. The express messenger and express guardsmen were equally unprepared and they were killed in their car. There were some 250 passengers on the train, but not one was killed. How they escaped seems miraculous. The cars were piled one on another and composed a mass of timber and twisted iron in which it seemed impossible for any being to have escaped death. When the work of rescue was completed, however, all the passengers were found to be alive. Several were badly injured and a few may die. The $1,000,000 belonged to the Mexican Central Railroad Company, and was being forwarded to that company's headquarters at Boston. It was rescued from the wreck and turned over to the Wells Fargo company at Topeka to be forwarded to its destination.

Reward for the Wreckers.

The Santa Fe has offered $1,000 reward for the train wreckers, and several posses are searching the country in the vicinity of the wreck. Advices from Osage City and Barclay state that intense excitement and indignation prevails among the people there, who declare broadly that the wreckers shall be lynched when caught.

The train consisted of a baggage, express and mail car, two day coaches, two chair cars and three sleepers. It was thrown over an embankment three feet high and the first six cars telescoped.

BROOM-CORN TRUST FAILING.

Crop-Buyers Outwitted by Nature and the Manufacturers.

The syndicate formed by the large manufacturers and brokers in broom corn early last fall is going to pieces, and the prices of broom corn are dropping fast. The attempt being made to keep up prices and yet unload the large stock of broom corn which is stored in the Western market cannot be maintained much longer. It is expected that the syndicate will go to pieces during the first of October. The combine bought up all the crop in the States of Illinois, Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri and Tennessee last fall and put the prices from 3½ cents a pound up to 7½ and even 8 cents. They hoped to force the smaller manufacturers and others who were not in the deal to buy at their prices. But the broom corn manufacturers shut down or worked on half time, using up what corn they had in stock, and refused to buy, and the large firms who carried the stock are now anxious to unload. The price of broom corn has dropped from 7 and 6 cents a pound to 5 and 6 cents. Now comes the news from broom-corn brokers that the crop was never better, and this, it is thought, will finally swamp the combine.

A NEBRASKA BORGIA.

She Is Charged with the Poisoning of Three Members of Her Family.

Mrs. Mary Anne Armagost is under arrest at David City, Neb., charged with poisoning her first husband, A. J. Roberts; the mother of her present husband, Mrs. Mary Armagost; and her 12-year-old stepdaughter, Hattie Armagost. Hattie died last June under suspicious circumstances. An autopsy was held, but the presence of embalming fluid in the stomach prevented a chemical analysis. This led to the exhuming of the body of Roberts, who died in February, 1887, and of Mrs. Armagost, who died in 1890. The stomachs were sent to Omaha and a chemical examination revealed arsenic. A Coroner's jury was impaneled and a verdict rendered to the effect that Roberts and Mrs. Armagost came to their death by arsenical poisoning at the hands of Mary Ann Armagost. The preliminary examination will be held Saturday.

FUSION IN SOUTH DAKOTA.

Democrats and Populists Combine and Claim 10,000 Majority.

A dispatch from Yankton, S. D., says that the Democrats and the Populists have agreed on an electoral ticket, each party to have two electors. Otto Peemiller, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee of South Dakota, called the committee and the candidates to a meeting at Sioux Falls to ratify the agreement entered into with the Populists' committee. At the last election the Democrats and Populists together cast 43,000 votes, 9,000 more than the Republicans. The fusionists claim that they are certain of victory by not less than 10,000 majority.

IF YOU CAN READ

and write, and are possessed of fair intelligence, you are fully qualified to make a grand success of what we offer you. We have lately published at great expense and labor a perfect wonder in the way of an illustrated Gift Book, suitable to all classes, an ornament to any home, and at a price that brings it within the reach of all, even those of moderate means. Heretofore, only those who indulged in luxuries have felt that they could afford a book of this class, as they are sold in book stores at $5.00 and upwards. The book which we offer is not in any way inferior to those above referred to, but is far superior to hundreds of books of this nature that are sold at prices exceeding ours by an enormous per cent. It is selling with a rush wherever shown. Agents have only to show the book and mention the price, and it sells on its merits without further talking. No better Christmas, New Year's or Birthday present can be selected. It will sell, not only for holiday trade, but at all seasons of the year, for the reason that all will want it in their homes, and will have it as soon as they know the low price at which our agents can furnish them. Reader, if you need profitable employment, and a business in which you can and will take pride, as well as make money rapidly, do not fail to send for circulars containing private terms to agents and full information which will be sent FREE upon application. Old and new agents alike are making handsome salaries—yes, fortunes. Many of those who are making the best records are now at the agency business, having had no previous experience. ☞ Make a start—the field is entirely new. No such terms have been offered agents as we now offer on this wonderful book. Special qualifications not necessary, for it sells everywhere at sight. Perhaps you have at some time been unsuccessful at the agency business. If so, there is every reason why you should try this, the PRINCE of gift books, as failure is impossible if you make a START. Write us to-day, study our circulars and directions, then order an outfit and go to work with push and energy. You may make the greatest mistake of your life, if you allow this GOLDEN opportunity to pass unimproved. E. C. Allen & Co., Box 806, Augusta, Maine.

THROUGH A TORNADO.

A Tale of Adventure on a Louisiana Plantation.

BY MAURICE THOMPSON.

CHAPTER I.

We of this day cannot even imagine, much less realize, the loneliness of the Louisiana plantation mansions of 60 or 70 years ago. Those homes were set in the midst of a wilderness whose "contiguity of shade," as Cowper expressed it, was broken only by intervals of marsh still more dreary and desolate. For miles and miles, even now, the solemn, moss-draped woods stand somber and silent, given over forever to reptiles and wild beasts, and for league upon dreary league the tall grass covers the oozy, slimy marshes where no living thing is visible save the wide-winged birds and the wallowing alligators.

The effect of this strange country upon a vivid imagination is remarkable under the most ordinary circumstances. In the case of Martin Lawrence it had a triple emphasis. To begin with, his business enterprise was of the most unusual and exciting nature; a Philadelphia bank had been swindled by two sharpers supposed to be clever representatives of the Murrell organization, and the affair apparently involved the honor of two or three citizens of prominence in Louisiana. John A. Murrell was a man who exerted great personal influence in a most mysterious way, but as our story has nothing to do with him we cannot turn aside to sketch his methods. It is sufficient to say that all accounts, together with the biography written by Virgil A. Stewart, agree in making it clear that he was the greatest highwayman and leader of lawless men that America has ever produced. To tamper with any of his schemes or to meddle in any way with one of his affairs was a most dangerous thing. Lawrence realized this, and, lover of adventure that he was, enjoyed it to the full.

Young Lawrence had been guided almost by chance to the residence of Col. de Vigny, the very man whom his business errand concerned; and on the very veranda, while being hospitably welcomed by the Colonel, his eyes had fallen on a young girl whom he had met in the old world.

What hurled the thought of legal duty clear out of his head for a time was seeing Mlle. Lucie once more, and away out there in that lonely plantation house amid the cypress swamp and live oak hummocks of Louisiana.

Lucie was, if possible, still more beautiful than when she was a mere slip of a girl in Switzerland and in Paris. Her face had taken on with its slightly increased fullness a quieter, richer expression, as if life were somewhat more serious to her now.

He saw at once that she remembered him and that she desired him to treat her as a stranger. In an obscure, indirect fashion he divined her reason for wishing to be left unrecognized; at least he felt sure that some barrier would have to be broken between them greater than any mere reserve of conventional prudence.

One's mind works with lightning swiftness under such circumstances. Lawrence felt that, in some way, everything depended upon the adroitness with which he might turn the key in the lock of this mystery, and he at once set his will like a strong brake upon his impulses.

She stood before him but a moment. At first he was on the point of stepping toward her and letting go the whole, long pent-up volume of his feeling. To see her again was like regaining sight after long blindness, like stepping forth to freedom after resting for years in a noisome dungeon—no, a thousandfold more thrilling than any other experience could just then have been, was that one assured look into her beloved face.

She made some slight but significant sign with her eyes and lips. It was scarcely a movement at all; but it said, more urgently and forcibly than words could have done, that it would be fatal to all his hopes—and, oh! sweet thought! it meant that her own heart felt the mighty need of prudence and of wise forbearance at this crucial point in their two lives.

Lawrence quickly glanced at Col. de Vigny to see if he had noticed the little by-play. That facile creole was evidently quite unaware that in the space of five seconds a stroke of fate supremely important had rung out clear and strong echoing from heart to heart. His dark, somewhat mysterious face was suave and amiable, with hospitable suggestions in its mobile features.

Lucie hurried away to summon servants and to superintend the laying of a supper for the guest. Meantime, her heart leaped wildly and her brain was in a happy whirl. How long she had waited and dreamed, feeling sure that some day he would return! Now he was here, and how bold and strong and handsome!

"Wha' de mattah, chile?" inquired the old colored housekeeper, only she spoke in the French patois of the Louisiana slaves. "Wha' de mattah wid yo' now? Yo' look so comflusticated!"

"Nothing, Zilla," replied Lucie, "but isn't it too bad that we must set a guest a cold, meager little supper like this?"

"Oh, g'long, dahlin'; come late; save light, you know."

"Yes, he did come late," and there was something in Lucie's voice that gave peculiar emphasis to the word late; "but we must do our best."

"Wait twell brekfus', Miss Lucie, an' 'en we feed 'im."

Certainly Lawrence did not think the supper light or meager when he sat down to it opposite his host. Cold venison with jelly, French bread, rice cake, roast pig with baked sweet potatoes and patties of maize, preserved figs, good butter, and syrup as clear as honey—these were the dishes before him, and besides there was coffee and claret.

Lawrence did not mention his business till next morning, and, tired as he was, he could sleep but little during the night, so full was his brain of stirring emotions.

The chamber assigned to him was large and airy, with windows looking right into the great wood tangle, out of which Tom, the runaway, had led him. In one direction he could get a glimpse of the silvery bayou sparkling in the moonlight. His slumber was so fitful and scrappy that he could not be sure whether it was while dreaming or waking, but he heard the old panther scream far away in the jungle, and the words of Col. de Vigny kept ringing in his ears: "Whenever once the old fellow chooses a victim he never fails finally to eat him." Never before had he felt that words could possibly have the mystery of prophecy in them. Half asleep and half awake he let this take a sort of rhythmic swing back and forth in his brain till they came to be a part of his consciousness, or sub-consciousness rather, lying before his beautiful and tender dream of Lucie.

When morning came, gray and foggy, Lawrence arose with the confused impressions of the night not in the least obliterated. He carried them, in spite of himself, along with him to the breakfast table, where, to his surprise, he did not meet Col. de Vigny, who, as Mme. de Vigny informed him, had been compelled to set out early in the morning on a long journey; he would be gone more than a month.

Mlle. de Vigny was looking serious and a trifle pale.

"I had most urgent business with Col. de Vigny," said Lawrence. He could not entirely repress his disappointment and chagrin, and it is probable that the flash of suspicion which leaped into his mind was visible in his face; for Lucie glanced quickly from him to her mother, and the latter showed uneasiness.

"But you said nothing to father about it?" Lucie inquired, with the sweetest of rising inflections.

"Unfortunately, no," said Lawrence. "It was so late when I arrived, and I did not wish to be in an unseemly hurry."

Something in Lucie's face was warning him to be on his guard. It confused and bewildered him all the more.

"Your horse is gone," she said. "Some one has stolen it."

This very simple announcement sent the blood in upon Lawrence's heart. In a twinkling he grasped to a certain degree the truth of the situation. That is, he understood that there certainly must be some connection between the sudden departure of Colonel de Vigny and the disappearance of his horse.

In a word, Colonel de Vigny had killed two birds with one stone. By going off he had escaped the disagreeable task of explaining some illegal doings of his partners in New Orleans, and in taking away Lawrence's horse he had made it impossible for that young man to reach the city before certain evidence could be destroyed. Indeed, our young friend was not in the least surprised when, in answer to an inquiry, he was told that there was not another riding horse on the plantation, or, for that matter, within twenty miles of it.

He stood there looking at Mlle. Lucie, and on the moment the whole affair obtruded its ludicrous side. He laughed in spite of himself.

"A pretty kettle of fish," he exclaimed, with a droll shrug of his shoulders and a humorous lifting of his brows. "You will have to entertain me for a few days, mademoiselle. It seems that I am a prisoner."

"Not exactly a prisoner, monsieur," she replied, leaning over the railing of the veranda, her lovely face framed in the rich foliage of the vine. "But you must be wise and careful. Take my advice, and there will be no danger to you."

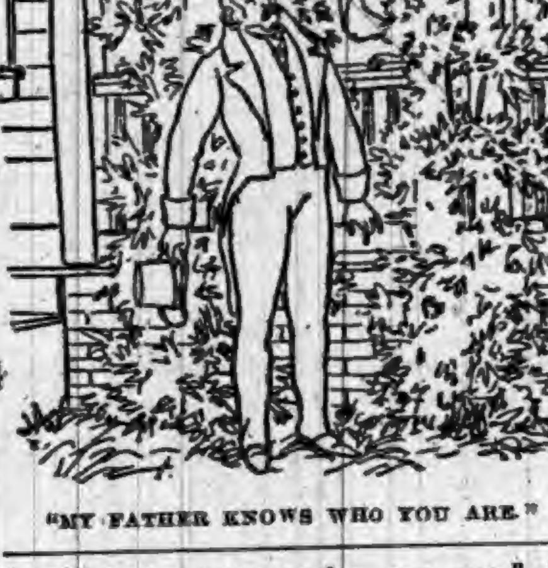
She spoke very low, and her voice betrayed the depth of her feeling.

Lawrence felt a great impulse toward taking her bright little head between his hands, but he did not dare.

"I have not come so far to be afraid of any danger that may threaten me," he said, as lightly as he could. "Things usually go my way."

She assumed a harkening attitude for a moment, glancing around meanwhile as if to assure herself that no one was near, then motioned him to come closer.

He obeyed, lifting himself so that she could stoop to his ear and whisper.



"MY FATHER KNOWS WHO YOU ARE."

"My father knows who you are," she said, "and has gone on your horse to New Orleans. He is innocent of what you accuse him of, but he wishes to save his brother, who is guilty. When his brother finds you out he will set men upon you to kill you.

"But come in, monsieur," said Lucie in her irresistible way; "come in where I can speak with you, please."

It was the same sweet, peremptory voice that so long ago had allotted to him his share of the hotel veranda in the mountains of Switzerland. His mind tugged hard to keep him in the line of duty; but his heart dragged him perforce to his love. All that a man hath will he give for his sweetheart.

Before an hour had gone by Martin Lawrence was as happy as a bird in a cherry tree when the ruby fruit is ripe. Lucie convinced him, and it was true, that to think of pursuing her father under the circumstances would be idle; and then she began to speak of the past, when he himself had feared to call up the subject.

All day long they were together nearly every moment of the time. She sang for him, played the guitar divinely, showed him the wonderful flower garden, took him from room to room of the curious, spacious mansion to let him see the pictures, and, indeed, did not permit him to think of the defeat he was suffering in his business affair.

If ever a man fell under the spell of enchantment, it was our young lawyer from Philadelphia. He looked at the antlers hanging in the hall and at the antique guns, the dark, rough walls, the paintings, the old-time curtains and rugs, the black mahogany chairs and tables, the gold-framed mirrors and the quaintly carved sofas in the parlor, and then at Lucie, sweet, inscrutable, charming—looked and felt himself a part of some mysterious and powerfully fascinating romance.

The dusk of evening came on, the mocking birds sung their vesper phrases in the orange tangle behind the blooming garden, the breeze leaped over the bayou cool and sweet and the perfumes of a semi-tropic wilderness filled all space. It was very different from the night before.

CHAPTER II.

Mme. de Vigny, Lucie and Lawrence sat on the veranda till moonrise. It would have pleased the young man better if the mother had been away, for he had made up his mind to declare his love to Lucie at the first opportunity; still the privilege of sitting near the beautiful girl was, under all the circumstances, much more than he could have expected, utter stranger to Mme. de Vigny as he was. The reader must remember, however, in this connection, that wayfaring strangers who ask for hospitality in a thinly populated country generally receive all the attention due an honored guest. This was the rule in the South during the earlier days of slavery, when the plantations were far apart and the means of travel mostly private and slow.

"I must set out for New Orleans in the morning," said Lawrence, "even if I have to go on foot."

The thought had come into his mind abruptly and he spoke it without reflection.

"But no, monsieur," exclaimed Mme. de Vigny, "it would never do. You could not do it. You would starve on the way; and then there is that dreadful panther, that terror of the Teche."

"I have not the slightest fear, madame," the young man responded. "A panther is a cowardly brute. I have killed more than one. This one is no worse than any other. Who has he ever eaten?"

"A great many people, they say," replied Mme. de Vigny. "The negroes tell the stories."

"But do you know of any particular person?"

"A traveler, I have heard, was found mangled and dead a few miles from here some years ago."

"Mme. de Vigny," said Lawrence, "your husband told me last evening that this wild beast had killed his son, one of his brothers and his cousin Felix d'Antin, besides two other relatives."

"Mon Dieu, Monsieur Lawrence!"

It was Mme. de Vigny who spoke, but both the ladies were greatly excited. Lucie, especially, was painfully agitated.

We all know that it is a trait of human nature as deep-seated as the roots of life for us to take strong delight in probing the secret wounds of those we love. Lawrence did not pause or falter when once he saw the way to wrench from Lucie the mystery after which he was reaching.

In the first place, Col. de Vigny never had a cousin living in Louisiana, much less one by the name of Felix d'Antin. As for the brother and the son, both were myths. The De Vingy family had been a slender one in the male line; the Colonel was the only one that had come from France to America. The brother in New Orleans, of whom Lucie had spoken, was of the half blood, the Colonel's mother having married the second time. Lawrence felt some obscure twinges of conscience while thus drawing out the skeleton from the closet of this isolated home. The main fact was, however, that Colonel de Vigny's mind had been recently showing signs of breaking, or rather what had once been a light hobby for it had become a monomania. Some years ago the panther had chased him one night and ever since that terrible experience the impression had been growing upon him that sooner or later the beast would destroy him. Gradually his talks on the subject had assumed the proportions of romance and his stories touching the panther's exploits took the form of family history as has already appeared. On every other subject he was perfectly sane, and even on this one his obliquity was more like the play of a vivid imagination than like the effect of disease.

Now, as Lawrence sat there in the dusk with the drowsy influence of the semi-tropic air coming over him, and saw Lucie's beautiful face shimmer like a star, it is no wonder that, with all the strange impressions of his recent experiences weighing upon him, he should feel like one in a dream, or like one suddenly drawn away from real every day life to the region of old-time story.

The three sat there chatting in a desultory way, while the moon climbed up the sky and dimmed the flare of the southern stars. Once, twice, three times Lawrence thought he heard, far away in the woods, the long wail of the old panther. If the ladies noticed it they gave no sign. Perhaps they were so accustomed to the sound that it no longer attracted their attention.

Presently a heavy, booming sound rolled around the western horizon arc, and they all saw for the first time a black cloud tumbling up the sky.

"It is a hurricane!" exclaimed a scared servant.

Lucie sprang to her feet.

"And father!" she cried, "father will be out in it!"

Mme. de Vigny was greatly excited, too, and Lawrence saw in a moment or two that there was in fact a great wind coming, bearing before it a torrent of rain, accompanied with a wild network of keen, slender lightning flashes, whose reverberations grew in force with startling rapidity.

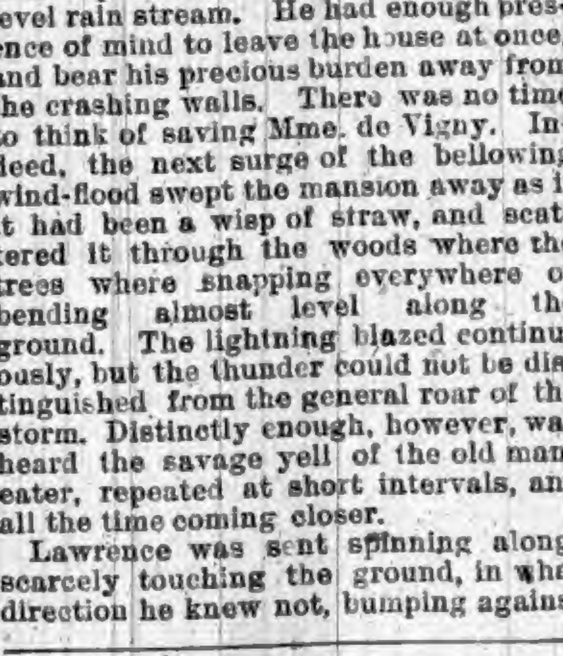
Lawrence arose and stood bewildered. Then the panther screamed near by in the woods.

Down came the first wave of the wind and churned the bayou into wreaths and flakes, at the same time jarring the mansion from roof to foundation.

Mme. de Vigny screamed and ran into the hall.

A heavier throb followed, almost lifting Lawrence off his feet as he caught Lucie up in his arms in the midst of a level rain stream. He had enough presence of mind to leave the house at once, and bear his precious burden away from the crashing walls. There was no time to think of saving Mme. de Vigny. Indeed, the next surge of the bellowing wind-flood swept the mansion away as if it had been a wisp of straw, and scattered it through the woods where the trees where snapping everywhere or bending almost level along the ground. The lightning blazed continuously, but the thunder could not be distinguished from the general roar of the storm. Distinctly enough, however, was heard the savage yell of the old man-eater, repeated at short intervals, and all the time coming closer.

Lawrence was sent spinning along, scarcely touching the ground, in what direction he knew not, bumping against this or that and struck by flying and whirling things. After the first dash there was no more rain; but the bayou was lifted and borne off in spray through the crashing trees. With the arms of love the young man held to his dear load, trying to shield it from all the terrible force of the storm and amid the blinding, crashing, howling whirl of it all he was remembering how she looked on that rainy day at the Swiss hotel when she walked away from him along the veranda.



"HE CAUGHT LUCIE UP."

THE Coroner's verdict explains the mysterious death of Charles Jones, a farmer near Wheatland, Knox County. Jones' body was found in a stable, and it was believed to be a case of murder or suicide. When the remains were viewed a circular bruise on the side showed that he had been killed by a kick from his horse.

THE 7-month-old child of James Early a prominent farmer near Burdick, was sitting on the stoop playing, when the mother came out of the house carrying a tub partially filled with boiling water. Just as she was passing the child a handle on the tub broke, throwing the water on the little one. It was fearfully scalded, and after four days' suffering died.

DR. J. H. HENSLEY, one of the leading physicians of Vincennes, was injured by a vicious horse on the stock-farm of John Monicle, east of that city. Mr. Monicle and George Barrowman were handling the horse, when the animal backed them into a dangerous position. Dr. Hensley, seeing their danger, sprang to their rescue. He saved both his friends, but he himself was injured.

AS THE second section of the special train carrying the horses from Richmond to the races at Columbus, passed over Flat-rock bridge, a stranger who was riding on one of the cars, was struck by the timbers of the bridge and instantly killed. He was hurled into the stream below, into water six feet deep. The unfortunate man is believed to be from Keokuk, Ia.

THE annual reunion of the "Old Persimmon Brigade," composed of the One-hundred-and-fifteenth, One-hundred-and-sixteenth, One-hundred-and-seventeenth and One-hundred-and-eighteenth Indiana Volunteer Regiments, together with the annual reunion of each regiment separately, will be held at Lebanon, Boone County, on Wednesday and Thursday, the 12th and 13th of October.

H. A. MILLER, a druggist at Hoagland, Allen County, returned to his store after a short absence the other night, and found it in the hands of a gang of tramps, who were ransacking the place. Miller at once attempted to give an alarm, but was caught, bound and gagged, while the bold gang went through his pockets and took everything of value. The thieves then departed, after administering a severe beating and leaving him partially senseless. Mr. Miller was not found until next morning.

ROASTER AND BAKER

IMPROVED
ROASTER & BAKER
FOR MEATS, FOWL, FISH, ETC., AND FOR BAKING BREAD, CAKES AND PUDDINGS.
BEST SIMPLEST AND CHEAPEST
THE STEAM produced by the process of cooking cannot escape, is absorbed by the article in the roaster, and acts as a basting. There is no evaporation, no drying up or burning, hence no shrinkage or loss of weight, and all the flavor and nutritious qualities of the food are retained. Tough meats are made tender, and any article roasted or baked will be sweeter, healthier and more digestible. Put the food in the roaster, place the roaster in a well heated oven; the roaster will do the cooking. It requires no attention. Can only be bought from dealers, the trade supplied by:

VOORHEES.
AT AUBURN.

Indiana's favorite orator, the "Tall Sycamore of the Wabash," will speak at Auburn on the afternoon of

Thursday, October 20,

No man, of any party, can afford to miss hearing one of the very ablest men in the United States Senate. For many years Mr. Voorhees has ranked with the highest. All come.

GREAT JOINT DISCUSSION.

On the fair ground at Waterloo next

Wednesday, October 5,

Hon. Roswell G. Horr, of Michigan, for the republicans; Hon. G. W. Bell, of Washington State, for the democrats; Hon. Ralph Beaumont, of New York, for the people's party, and Hon. Eli. F. Ritter, of Indianapolis, for the prohibition party. Everybody come. Hear all sides and see which you like best. Other speakers are expected to be there: Jerry Simpson, of Kansas, T. B. Reed, of Maine, Ex-Gov. Campbell, of Ohio, the candidates for governor, political clubs, bands. Male quartet, etc., etc. It will be the greatest contest for many years.

GOOD democratic editorials on our sixth page. While our pages are so crowded, we have arranged to have suitable editorial matters on that page, so as not to have any department neglected. Our readers should remember this and read these valuable articles with care.

THE Record still thinks the pension business is a republican private snap. We still insist it cannot show that Cleveland vetoed a single private pension bill that had merit. Publish Cleveland's reasons. It also says the last democratic congress voted away more money than did the Reed congress. Not so. The Record took that 44 million off the wrong side. The democrats would have got along with a hundred million less, and not that billion dollar congress left a big lot of expenses unprovided for, which the last congress had to take care of. And then the republican senate raised nearly every appropriation that the House had made, a considerable higher, and the House had to accept it or let the departments go without money.

COL. NELSON spoke for the republicans, in the Opera House, Tuesday evening. There was a fair sized crowd, for they had hoped to be bored by a bigger gimlet than was used on them last week. But they were disappointed. He was introduced as "one of the foremost and ablest republicans in Indiana." This is certainly an error. The state has a hundred republicans who know, more and have better judgment and ability. He used no argument, gave no important facts, and depended alone on his own bare assertion and abuse of democrats. He insulted the intelligence of Auburn republicans, who one and all speak unfavorably of his speech. As one of the leading ones said "it wasn't worth a d—n." If the South American states, where he has been our minister, judge this government by him, it is no wonder every little republic thinks it can "lick the Yankees." His assertion that "all imps of hell could not outlie the democrats," gives one an idea of his caliber. Why did he not attempt to disprove at least one of those lies?

How to Vote.

At our spring election in town, several voters stamped the small square at the left of the first candidate, the trustee in the first ward, thinking that would be voting a straight ticket. But this counted as a vote for only that one man, and nothing for the others. To vote a straight ticket, they should have stamped the big square at the head of the ticket—the one that encloses the rooster or eagle, etc. That would vote every man on that ticket. The small squares are for individuals, so that a man may vote a mixed ticket. In this case he does not stamp the big square with the eagle or rooster, but lets that alone, and goes along down the tickets, and puts a stamp in the small square at the left of each name for whom he wishes to ovte. Thus in going down the tickets, he may wish to vote for a republican congressman, a democratic sheriff and treasurer, a people's party assessor, a prohibition representative, and a republican coroner, and he stamps the little square at the left of each of these names, as he finds them on the several tickets that are printed on the big ballot.

Literary Notice.

AN IMPORTANT CHANGE—In the October number of "Peterson's Magazine" appears the announcement that the magazine is about to pass into the control of stockholders who propose to convert it into a periodical, devoted solely to literature and art. Peterson's long-continued success, its general merit, and the great improvement in its literary department during the past few years have decided the future publishers to call their periodical "The New Peterson," confident that the name will arise up for it in advance a wide host of friends and supporters. The new magazine will commence with the January number, although the December number will be issued in the new form. A full announcement of its design and a description of its leading features will be given in the November issue. We wish The New Peterson every possible success, and are certain that it will speedily become one of the most popular literary periodicals of the day.

INCIPIENT PARALYSIS,
HEART DISEASE, DYSPEPSIA, AND CONSTANT HEADACHE.
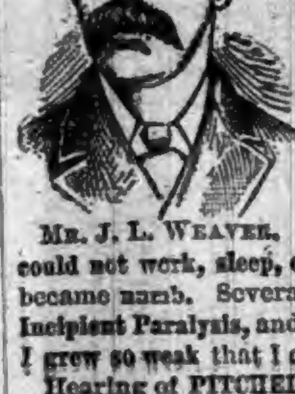
INDUCED BY LA GRIPPE.
COMPLETELY CURED BY LIVURA.



MR. J. L. WEAVER.

LIVURA M'F'G. CO.,

DEAR SIRS:—"Last winter I had La Grippe in its worst form, leaving me in a terrible condition, my Brain was confused, my Heart weak, and my legs refused to hold me up, and the muscles were so sore that it was painful to lie down. I had continual Headache, and everything I ate distressed me. I could not work, sleep, or eat, and my right side became numb. Several doctors told me I had Incipient Paralysis, and that I could get no better, I grew so weak that I could not leave the house. Hearing of PITCHER'S LIVURA I got a bottle and it helped me from the first. I took 4 bottles in all, and am PERFECTLY WELL in every way, and now work all day. I know that PITCHER'S LIVURA CURED ME."

Yours truly, JOHN L. WEAVER,
217 St. Clair St., Cleveland, Ohio. 36

National Columbian Celebration.

In obedience to an act of congress, president Harrison on July 21, issued a proclamation recommending that Friday, October 21, 1892, the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America, be celebrated everywhere in the United States, by suitable exercises, and that the schools be made the center of all local demonstrations. The president says, "On that day let the people cease from toil and devote themselves to such exercises as may best express honor to the discoverer, and their appreciation of the great achievements of the four completed centuries of American life. Columbus stood in his age as the pioneer of progress and enlightenment. The system of universal education is in our age the most prominent and salutary feature of the spirit of enlightenment, and it is peculiarly appropriate that the schools be made by the people the center of the day's demonstrations. Let the national flag float over every school house in the country and the exercises be such as shall impress upon our youth the patriotic duties of American citizenship."

It is recommended that the day be made a real holiday. Business, farm, household and other work should all be relinquished and everybody join in the festivities, etc. of the celebration. In the country the families of the district, whether patrons of the school or not, are to come together at the school house, with their picnic lunches, prepared to make it a day of memorable festivities. Each school in the county is preparing exercises for a morning celebration, and the afternoon is to be devoted to games, and to social reunions of neighbors, thus making the day a joyous one to millions of our hard working population. In the towns, for the afternoon program, it is expected that the citizens will assist in preparing suitable exercises of a patriotic, educational and religious nature, to commemorate the day. The exercises which should not be omitted in any school is the raising and saluting the national flag, and the planting of a tree in commemoration of the celebration, and the discovery of America. In the town schools a "public school review" should be one of the leading features of the afternoon, or civic, celebration.

He Got His Rig Back.

The Friday of the fair, a young man named Curtis Dirrim, came to Dell Purdy's livery barn, and hired a horse and buggy [illegible] to Angola. Saturday, the rig had not come home, and Dell became uneasy. He and his father, after talking with a man who was running a hack at the fair, and who knew where the young man lived, concluded they could find him, So at 4:30 Sunday morning, they took a Wabash train to Montpelier, Ohio, there they got a livery team, and went about eight miles into the country northeast, and found the father of the young man at home. On being questioned, he said his son had just started off with the rig. He got in with the Purdys and after an exciting chase of a mile or two, the chap was overtaken. Purdy made him get into the buggy he was in, while the father got into Dell's buggy with the latter. They returned to Montpelier, where they left the hired rig, and then to Butler. Here Dell came on home with the buggy and Purdy and the young man got home on the six o'clock evening train. The fellow staid in the jail that night and next morning pleaded guilty before Justice Walborn, and was returned to jail to wait till court begins. Purdy says the father seems like a good sort of man, and is greatly distressed at the conduct of his son. The latter claims he was going to bring the horse back in a day or two, but when caught he was heading for the Michigan line.

Lied About the Fair.

The jibboose editor of the Garrett Clipper devoted a large part of that disreputable sheet last week to lying and abuse about the Auburn fair. There is but one thing he says that anyone is likely to believe. That is, his assertion that the Auburn fair began the quarrel with him or them, whichever it may be that does the wind work over there. This is an utter lie, as we can prove by the columns of their own paper, now in this office. They served this fair as they have served other fairs, and about every other decent thing they could think of. They began by belittling, slanging and lying about the fair, its managers, and everything connected with it, We suppose their object was, to scare the managers into giving them some patronage. But the thing didn't work. The officers were not using patronage for hush money, and so the abuse went on Last year, finding the Clipper was using its pages every week to injure the fair, the officers ordered that the Clipper should be refused the recognition usually given to all decent papers. As the Clipper was filled with abuse of the fair, any advertising sandwiched in between such articles, would be of no benefit. The officers finally to show their utter contempt for the filthy sheet, ordered that the Clipper complimentary tickets should not be honored. This is the history of the entire quarrel, and its correctness, as we have said, can be proved. As to the other matter in their article, especially the remarks about "Auburn papers," we shall not notice them, and we suppose the Dispatch will not, for that paper like many others, refuses to exchange with them. It is only necessary, to give our readers an idea of their reckless lying for us to add, that after saying in one column that the "fair will be a failure unless they secure good horses," in another column they state that some of the horses made "a mile in 2:19¾."

For President,
GROVER CLEVELAND,
OF NEW YORK.
For Vice President,
ADLAI E. STEVENSON,
OF ILLINOIS.

THE g. o. p. has begun to whistle to keep its courage up.

HAVE your name enrolled in a Democratic club and get your neighbor to do the same.

IF the workingman wants to see a genuine product of protection let him look at Carnegie.

THE relations between McKinley of 1888 and McKinley of 1892 are becoming decidedly strained.

PENNSYLVANIA lawyers favor the high tariff because it gives them plenty of work in the Criminal Courts.

THE McKinley policy is becoming more penetrating as it takes the form of bayonets advanced as arguments.

A FEW years ago Mr. McKinley was denouncing the cheap suit of clothes. Now he brags that cloth is cheaper than it ever was before.

IF the force bill should ever become a law a Republican administration would have a great deal of work to let out to the Pinkertons.

PAT EGAN is another elephant Harrison cannot afford to let go or hold on to just now. His menagerie will conclude its grand tour in November.

THUS far no Republican has offered to explain why in ten years of Republicanism there were more farm and home mortgages filed in Kansas than there were inhabited houses in the State in 1890.

REPUBLICANS who do not like to compare Harrison with Cleveland may compare him with other Republican Presidents. And by doing so they will find that he is costing the country an averege of $100,000,000 a year more than Arthur did.

THE Republican rainbow-chasers are doing plenty of talking about "redeeming" the South, but they will put no money or high-grade workers there. They are simply running a bluff to which the Democracy should pay no attention.

MCKINLEY would probably say that it was an excellent thing for Canada to tax American vessels passing through Canadian canals. It would force American vessels to stay in American canals, don't you see?

THERE was a time when Tom Carter was not Land Commissioner, and it was during that time that he referred to Mr. Harrison as "a two-cent Hoosier statesman." When the campaign is over perhaps Col. Carter will recall the epithet and be able to say, "I told you so."

NEW YORK is not a doubtful State this year. There is no State of the East where the Harrison force bill will damage the Republican party as much as the one of which the commercial metropolis of the country is a part. Harrison's administration has given more unrest and disquiet to the great legitimate business interests of the East than any other in our history.

AN Iowa statistician says that "the tariff and reciprocity have brought the price of hogs in this State to 6 cents a pound." It is now in order for the statistician to say whether it was the tariff or reciprocity. And when he has solved this problem he may address himself to the task of proving that one or the other has made food cheaper for the laboring-men.

HAVING explained to the Western farmer that the tariff has raised the price of wheat he produces and sells to the American consumer, Maj. McKinley is going East to explain to the consumer that the tariff has reduced the cost of everything, including the products of the farm. Mr. Orator Puff "with two tones to his voice" was not a circumstance to the modern protectionist orator striving to fulfill the requirements of the situation.

SINCE the Alabama election the force bill is more necessary than ever to get the negro vote at the South counted for the Republican party. The Alabama election shows that nothing short of bayonets at the polls will induce the negroes to to keep on voting the Republican ticket. As for the negro vote in the border States, it will be largely a colonized vote, paid for in advance.

THE protected manufacturers ought to have been generous enough to have increased the wages for this year, at least. It would have been better for them than paying campaign contributions. After the election the reductions might begin again without injury to the industrial infants.

DURING ten years of high tariff taxes more McKinley mortgages were put on the farms and homes of Kansas and Nebraska than there were inhabited houses in these States in 1890. We have extracted this fact from the census several times before, but we intend to keep it before the McKinley people until they can make up their mind to say something about it.

TOM CARTER is said to have made his start as a book agent for "Footprints of Time," and to have closed his literary career peddling "The Royal Path of Life" through Iowa. His sudden rise to fortune and political bossism indicates that he struck the royal path, and made footprints on it at such a rapid gait that Time "wasn't in it."

A RAMPANT Pittsburg protectionist organ says that plumbers' prices are sustained at extortionate figures by combinations. Of course, plumbers' materials are not only made costlier by the high tariff, but the combinations add their weight to the load put upon consumers. Down with the high tariff, and down with the combinations to which it gives birth!

IF protection protects the manufacturer and increases the wages of the mechanic will some Republican please rise and explain why the Carnegie mills have reduced wages from 15 to 50 per cent. and transformed their works into a fort? Even Mr. Harrison in his letter to the Republican State League made no mention of this practical example of the benefits of a high tariff to the workingman.

THE Republicans are preparing to make a hot fight all along the line for the possession of Iowa in the coming election. By all means let them try their level best; it will do them good. The weather will soon be pleasant, and campaigning in the open air will not only strengthen their health but brace up their spirits against the disappointment to come in November. Iowa ceased to be a Republican State several years ago.

VICE PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE REID skips and plays, makes pretty speeches hither and yon, travels about in private cars and pleasant company, but as the campaign progresses he will be admonished quietly but pointedly by the people who made him the nominee that he was selected for a specific purpose, and that committeemen in need of money are not going to overlook the fact. The suggestion to Mr. Mills' son-in-law will be curt and authoritative: "Come down!"

COURIER-JOURNAL: "Honesty at the ballot-box," exclaims a Republican organ, "is proving very costly to the dominant party in New Jersey. It has just sent sixty very efficient Democratic workers to the penitentiary, where they can do no good to their party until this year's elections are over." Thus is another difference between the parties illustrated. Just over in Indiana, for instance, the Republican election crook, even on the bench, instead of being sent to the penitentiary is promoted.

DES MOINES LEADER: In the United States the laboring people have the right to vote. They can right every wrong peacefully through the ballot if they will only intelligently exercise their right. This being true, there is no excuse for physical opposition to established law. If certain laws are objectionable, repeal them. If incorporated capital enjoys unjust privileges and advantages, deprive it of those privileges and advantages in the legal way. Labor must learn to vote right if it would free itself from legalized oppression. The people are responsible for the statutes.

PAPERS that talk for the McKinley bill, which is not permitted to speak for itself, as its author contends, are loudly asserting that carpets were never before so cheap in this country. It is well to note in this connection that scarcely a yard of American carpet is exported, while an immense amount of foreign carpet finds its way over the Chinese wall erected by American legislation. During the last year a hundred million pounds of carpet wool was imported by the United States, and the duties paid were $2,500,000. Now, to reconcile this with the claim of cheap carpets, the manufacturers must admit that they were getting extravagant profits before the McKinley bill went into effect, or that they are using shoddy in the shape of hair, cotton and other adulterations. The latter is the true explanation, as it is in the case of the cheap clothing about which these same Republican organs make so much noise.

HARRISON'S CHANCES.

MANY REPUBLICANS NOT SUPPORTING BEN.

The Maine and Vermont Elections Have Revealed This Fact to a Certainty—Peck's Bogus Testimony—The Elwood Tin-Plate Fake—State Elections.

Outlook for Harrison.

The Vermont election revealed the presence of many Republicans in Republican strongholds who are not supporting Harrison. The general extension of the comparative falling off in the vote of the two parties in Vermont would mean a Waterloo for Harrison.

In Maine the falling off of the Republican vote is even greater and more significant than it was in Vermont. In Vermont the Republicans showed a slight gain on their vote of 1890, though they lost heavily on their vote of 1888, but in Maine they are losing heavily even from the vote of 1880. One hundred and sixty "towns," which in 1890 gave them about 10,000 plurality now give only a little over 5,000, and Manley only claims the State by 11,000 at the outside, while the latest returns from 177 towns give hardly 10,000 for the entire State.

The highest Republican vote ever polled in Maine was 77,779 for Governor in 1884. This gave them 19,779 plurality, while they had a plurality of 20,060 for President with a vote of 71,716. In 1888 they polled 73,734 votes for President and 64,214 for Governor in 1890. Their pluralities since 1884 have been as follows:

1884—Governor	19,709
1884—President	20,060
1886—Governor	12,651
1888—President	23,253
1890—Governor	18,883

In 1884 the Democrats polled 58,070 votes in the State; in 1886, 56,242; in 1888, 50,481; in 1890, 45,331. So by a remarkable coincidence the election of 1890 shows on each side a little over 13,000 "fishermen" when the comparison is made with the largest vote ever polled in the State.

The total vote of 1888 was 128,000, and according to the Manley telegram the total vote is now 12,000 less, or about 116,000. This is over 2,000 more than the total vote of 1890, while the Republicans are some 7,000 and odd votes behind their plurality of 1890.

This shows very clearly that while the Maine Democrats are "coming out of the woods," the Maine Republicans are going fishing in increasing numbers. They have polled only a sufficient vote to hold their own locally, and have not given one vote to encourage or indorse Harrison. Indeed, it is evident that the Democrats by calling out only a part of their reserves could have carried the State. This they did not care to do. It is well enough that Maine should be just as it is until November. If then the Democrats poll their full vote and the Republicans keep on fishing, the result will be the loss of the State to the Republicans.

This is not probable, however. The State will probably give Harrison about 5,000 plurality, but even conceding him twice that in Maine, it would mean his defeat in New York, in Indiana, in Connecticut, New Jersey, Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, and Michigan.

The Democrats have only to get out their votes to make this certain. The Republican party is not going to pieces at present, but there are thousands of Republicans who see that they must unload Harrison to prevent a recurrence of 1890, when it would mean complete party demoralization. The present indications are that Harrison will not poll 90 per cent. of his vote of 1888. A full Democratic vote will retire him and his radical faction from politics.—St. Louis Republic.

Elwood.

How like a pair of clowns McKinley and Chase must have appeared at Elwood, Ind. Each the Governor of a proud, respectable and wealthy State, lending himself and his office and whatever dignity his manhood has won, to the most barefaced fake that ever was projected. Never a shell-worker on circus day, greeting the granger with the level eye of simulated honesty, never a thimble-rigger with his pretense of fair dealing and his practice of theft, more faithfully played a confidence game than was played on the Indiana town by the leading Republicans of this nation.

Not a feature in the whole business from beginning to end but shames the decent men who lent themselves to the patent swindle. There is no truth nor honesty nor solidity in the Elwood mills, and the greenest spectator who waded in the yellow mud, or singed his whiskers in the natural gas torch, or loafed unconscious in the dripping rain, but knows it in his heart. Henceforth the name of Elwood will take the place of the scarcely honorable "boom" in our language. It is boom with nothing behind it but that which always lurks behind the boom—the wary sharper with a waiting trap.

Of course, the United States of America can plant a tin-mill at Elwood, and can run it with a thousand hands for a hundred years. They can sell the product for 50 cents a box and pay the freight. They can make glass bottles and blow the buyer's portrait in the side. They can manufacture window panes, and build a railroad as straight as an arrow's flight to connect the mills and the monkey who swears by them. Sixty millions of people, with treasure such as these people possess, can do almost anything they wish. But that doesn't prove that the business will pay. If the Elwood mills should prove a permanent establishment—which they will not; if they should work their imported men and their transplanted machinery on their imported tin to the fullest capacity for the next ten years, and fill our markets with American tin, it would only prove that the American people permitted themselves to be robbed.

If tin can be made in this country and sold in competition with tin from abroad, then it is a sound business and a profitable addition to the industries of America. If Americans must keep up the margin of loss between the price at which it can be sold and the price at which the imported article can be sold, then Americans simply throw away their money. The manufacturer compels an unnatural profit by robbing the purchaser of more than the article purchased was worth. By stealing a little from each citizen and adding the stealings together the manufacturer can conduct a losing business in any line. And that is all that is contemplated at Elwood.—Chicago Herald.

The State Elections.

The Republican loss in Vermont, compared with 1888, was 20-plus per cent. The Democratic loss was 1-plus per cent. From this ascertained fact the New York World makes the following deduction:

Reckoning the changes in relative strength of the great parties since 1888 by the ratios of the result in Vermont—

In New York the Democrats would have a plurality of over 100,000.

In Massachusetts Harrison's plurality of 32,037 would be wiped out, and the Democrats would have a plurality of over 1,700.

In Illinois the Republican plurality of 22,195 would be changed to a Democratic plurality of 43,935.

In Iowa the Republican plurality of 31,711 would disappear, and Cleveland would get a plurality of 6,000.

In Ohio the Democratic plurality would be 55,683.

In Michigan the Democrats would win by over 20,000.

In Wisconsin Cleveland would have a plurality of 10,885 over Harrison.

In California the Democratic plurality would be over 15,500.

The States which would be left to the Republicans of those which voted in 1888 would be Maine, Vermont, Rhode Island, Kansas, Minnesota, Nebraska, Colorado, Nevada, and Oregon. Of these, Kansas, Minnesota, and Nebraska have, in State and Congressional elections since 1888, shown a revulsion against the Republican party worse than that of Vermont last week, while Colorado and Nevada are probably lost to the Republicans on the silver question.

The showing is plausible. It is encouraging to Democracy everywhere. The result in Maine serves to strengthen the showing.

Peck's Testimony.

There is one point in Commissioner Peck's campaign venture to which Republicans will not refer with enthusiasm. The Minneapolis convention declared "that on all imports coming into competition with the products of American labor there should be levied duties equal to the difference between wages abroad and at home." The Democratic platform denounces Republican protection a fraud. Let the figures of Mr. Peck's report be taken as proof of the fraud contained in the Republican platform.

Mr. Peck says that "from sixty-seven industries covered it appears that there was a net increase of wages of $6,377,925 in the year 1891 as compared with the amount paid in 1890, and the net increase of production was $31,315,130 in the year 1891 over that of 1890." This is a reported increase in protected industries, if the slightest reliance can be placed in the figures of the Commissioner. The statistics show that while the amount paid in wages was but a little over $6,000,000 the amount of tariff levied for protection of this labor was more than twice the total wages paid in production. An estimate of 50 per cent. tariff protection on these increased products is entirely within bounds. That protection covers the total cost of labor engaged by over $10,000,000. In other words, the people were taxed by tariff barons in the sum of over $16,000,000 in order that $6,000,000 might be paid to labor.

This is the logic of Republican protection. It is the answer of even Commissioner Peck's facts to the lying pretense in the Republican platform that the duties levied should be "equal to the difference between wages abroad and at home." It is the final answer to every Republican protect who claims that protection is for the common benefit and not a special device for the enrichment of a class. Commissioner Peck should try once more to serve the frauds for whom his alleged statistics were prepared. He will probably again confuse them with his efforts.—Chicago Times.

Inventing Statistics.

When the McKinley bill was under consideration in the House, a great deal was said about its being a "farmers' tariff." Mr. Blaine pretty effectually knocked out this claim by his famous remark about the markets which the bill did not open for flour and pork. Then the reciprocity section was added in the Senate, and the talk about reciprocity took the place of that about the "farmers' tariff"—the latter having referred altogether to the rates on farm products, most of which we sell in competition with all the world.

The Indianapolis Journal, however, has plucked up courage to return to the charge, and publishes a list of agricultural imports in 1890 and 1892 to show how the importations of agricultural products have fallen off. One specimen from this table will show how much reliance is to be put on all. The imports of flax and hemp for 1890 are put at $9,523,977. We turn to the report of the Bureau of Statistics for that year and find that the imports are given as follows:

Flax	1,794,668
Hemp	102,071
Hemp, tow of
Total	$3,923,526

Under the same head is put manila and other like substitutes for hemp, of which there were imports of the value of more than six million dollars; but as these were put on the free list, and are not included in the imports of 1892, they cannot be taken into consideration.

The argument for a "farmer's tariff," therefore, is made by stating the imports of 1890 to have been about three times as great as they really were, and suppressing the fact that the free admission of substitutes for hemp has reduced the demand for it, and, of course, reduced importations.

These are the sort of "facts" by which the cause of robbery under the forms of law has to be supported.

Peck's Bogus Report.

MR. PECK will now be called upon to produce not only the methods of data which he employed in making up his report, but also the authorities on which he bases his statement that the effect of the new tariff law in New York has been to largely increase the rate of wages. With this demand the commissioner, as a State official, cannot well refuse to comply, inasmuch as the alleged information in his possession is unquestionably not his private property, but the property of the public.—Washington Post.

COMMISSIONER PECK'S report is no longer regarded even by Republicans as of any worth except as an indication that there is treachery in the Democratic camp. It is this view of the case that now excites their hilarity and fills them with hope. They make no effort to conceal their opinion that Peck's report was one of David Bennett Hill's machiavellian strokes. This view of the case may be full of encouragement, but it utterly destroys the Peck report itself as a campaign document.—Memphis Commercial.

THE report doesn't touch the question, and wage-earners all over the State know that any such representation is impudently false. All that purports to be shown is that certain selected groups of manufacturers paid more wages in the aggregate last year than the year before. This could easily happen coincidently with a decline of the rate of wages. But Peck's boomerang should be carefully examined as a matter of curiosity.—New York World.

THE Republican party never yet gained any permanent advantage by such short-sighted methods, and the present effort of a few thoughtless public journals and unwise managers to make it appear that the McKinley tariff has been finally and overwhelmingly "vindicated" at the hands of a great Democratic statesman is the very essence of political foolishness.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Vermont and Maine.

THE Republican slump in Maine was a foregone conclusion. Republican Chairman Manley knew days ago, by the rumbling of the granite beneath his feet, exactly what was coming. The Maine pines have made answer to the Vermont hill-tops, and their blended voices will sound like a wailing dirge in the camps of McKinleyism.—Philadelphia Record.

THE result in Maine is not encouraging to the Republicans, the majority for Cleaves, their candidate for Governor, showing a significant decrease when compared with State elections in previous years. Following so closely on the notable slump in Vermont, it may well cause the Republican managers anxiety as to the outcome of the Presidential contest in November.—New York Herald (Ind.).

Bad Roads, High Freights, Etc., Are Minor Hindrances—How the Farmers' Earnings Are Deposited in Custom Houses—The Sugar Trust Supreme.

Enemies of Industry.

The typical protectionists are a queer set. From McKinley down, they all continually cry, "We must protect American industry;" as if they alone, and not all Americans, were in favor of any and every policy that will protect and benefit our own people and country in preference to all other peoples and countries. But, at the same time, it is clear from their actions—when they come to substitute actions for words—that they have no correct idea of what industry is. Doubtless, some will say, "What an unfounded and impudent assertion!" "What a free-trade lie" But let us reason about it a little and see wherein is the truth.

Industry consists of two factors, or there are two elements in it. One is production (derived from two Latin words—pro, forward, and ducere, to lead)—meaning, in this connection, the drawing out of materials or products from natural resources, and the other is exchange, or the selling of the things produced; and industry can't get along without both any more than a man get along with only one leg. For example, if a farmer grows 10,000 bushels of corn, and needs only 1,000 for himself, family, and animals, and can't exchange or sell the other 9,000, he might as well not have raised it. He can eat corn, burn it for fuel and make whisky of it, but he can't clothe himself with corn husks, plow with a cornstalk, wear corn shoes, and the like. To get these other things he must sell or exchange his surplus 9,000 bushels; and he must be stupid who does not at once see that the greater the facilities afforded him for exchange, such as good roads, bridges, horses and wagons, cheap and swift railroads and steamships, low tolls, freights and taxes, the greater will be the opportunity for exchange and trade to advantage. On the other hand, poor roads, unbridged streams, few or no railroads or steamships, and high tolls, freights, and taxes all tend to restrict or destroy trade and the opportunity to sell his 9,000 bushels of corn to advantage. A 20 per cent. tariff tax may fairly be considered as the representative of a bad road; a 50 per cent. of a broad, deep river without proper facilities for crossing; a 75 per cent. of a swamp bordering such river on both sides; while 100 per cent. duty, such as is levied on blankets, window glass, cotton ties, and the like, can only properly be compared to a band of robbers, who strip the producer of nearly all he possesses and make him thankful that he escaped with his life. In short, there has never been a case in all human experience when the removal of restrictions, natural or legislative, on trade that did not result in the extention of trade to the mutual advantage of the great majority of the people concerned. The man who can get a law passed that will enable him to tax trade or exchange, always sees an advantage to himself in the restricted trade that will result. So also does his brother-in-law who sits behind a bush on the road, with a gun, and tells the farmer who has sold his surplus of 9,000 bushels of corn, You can't pass unless you give me a big part of what you received for it in exchange. But I fancy some farmer protectionist saying: "There is no one sitting behind a bush for me. I don't see him." Nevertheless, he is there, all the same.

Our farmer sells his nine thousand bushels of corn in England, and, as he wants things rather than money, and as many things are cheap in England, he concludes to take his pay in hardware, woolen clothing, blankets, starch, paints, oils, glass, salt, cordage, hats, crockery, cotton ties, and other like articles, and starts for home by way of New York. There is no man with a gun behind a bush on the wharf to lie in wait for him, but there is another man, armed with something better than a gun, who tells the farmer that he must give up more than half the value of all the things he has received in payment for his corn before he can come into possession of the other half. If he does not pay quickly or if he makes any fuss about the charges, this other man will take the whole, and not unlikely put the farmer in jail. If the farmer could pay in things instead of money, and had taken salt in exchange for his corn, then for every hundred bushels he would have had to bring and give up seventy-three additional bushels. For every yard of the cheapest carpet he would have had three-quarters of a yard cut off, and if he had cotton ties, each tie would be shortened to the extent of 90 per cent. If he had taken the commonest kind of china plates or cups, then in order to carry a dozen of them home he would have had to pay for eighteen. And so on. If our Government needed to impose and collect such taxes in order to meet its necessary expenditures, there would be some justification for such procedure. But revenue was not the object sought for in the enactment of the laws which authorize or require them, but the restrictions of trade, to prevent the farmer from selling his products to the best advantage. In short, carry out logically and to their fullest extent McKinley's views about industry, and you would have every man trying to produce a good deal and sell as little as possible.—David A. Wells, in American Journal of Politics.

Keep McKinley on the Stump.

McKinley spoke in three large cities in Vermont this year, and "was received with the greatest enthusiasm" by great audiences in each city. To show their appreciation of the Major and his blessed tariff law, these cities this year cast the following vote as compared with the vote in the corresponding election in 1888:

	—1888.—		—1892.—
	Rep.	Dem.	Rep.	Dem.
Brattleboro	1,092	456	862	403
Rutland	1,398	926	1,235	983
Burlington	1,401	1,014	1,016	1,106
Total	3,891	2,396	3,113	2,492

If the Major could have been induced by tariff reformers to have made twenty speeches in Vermont it is safe to say that it would have gone Democratic.

It is a curious fact that the farmers and laborers of this country, tax-burdened and hard pressed as they are, will not consent to shift their taxes upon the poor foreigner, and there is no surer sign that there is yet left something of that American manhood and independence that made them as unwilling to pay England's taxes in 1776, as they are now to have England pay their taxes. Justice, no more and no less, is about their size and McKinley cannot change the fit by appealing to their selfish instincts by asking them to tax the helpless foreigner; that is, providing they believe that his scheme will work. McKinley is the only stumper that is entirely satisfactory to both parties. He should be given double pay and asked to make two speeches a day until November.

Andrew Jackson's Prophetic Words.

"The corporations and wealthy individuals who are engaged in large manufacturing establishments desire a high tariff to increase their gains. Designing politicians will support it to conciliate their favor and to obtain the means of profuse expenditure for the purpose of purchasing influence in other quarters. * * * Do not allow yourselves, my fellow citizens, to be misled on this subject. The Federal Government cannot collect a surplus for such purposes without violating the principles of the constitution and assuming powers which have not been granted. It is, moreover, a system of injustice, and, if persisted in, will inevitably lead to corruption and must end in ruin."—Jackson's Farewell Address.

High Prices to Be Advanced.

The greed of the sugar Trust is unbounded. Aided by the duty of ½c per pound, which McKinley left on refined sugar for no other purpose than to swell the profits of the trust, which would have been enormous without any duty, this combine, as its power has extended, has mercilessly reduced the price of raw and raised the price of refined sugar. At present there appears to be no relief from its oppression. A few months ago the wholesale grocers of the United States, who had been in league with the trust, and had been receiving a rebate of ⅛ cent per pound for handling "trust" sugar only, became dissatisfied with the advancing prices, and threatened to erect a big refinery in Brooklyn. It now transpires that the trust people have again established friendly relations with the grocers by slightly extending discounts to them, and perhaps by making other concessions unknown to the public. As is evident from the following notice sent out by the trust on Sept. 10, the monopoly is stronger than ever before:

"We inclose herewith invoice of sugar of even date, on which a commission of one-eighth of a cent a pound has been deducted, in addition to our usual terms of one per cent. cash in seven days and one per cent. trade discount on 100 barrel lots, the understanding being that with your remittance the certificate below is to be returned duly signed by you as a voucher."

[Copy of the Voucher.]

THE A. S. R. CO.

"We hereby certify that we have not sold, nor will we sell, nor has any employe, salesman, or agent sold in any of the territory specified on the back of this certificate, either directly or indirectly, any of the sugars for which we are now remitting, for less than your daily quotations, nor on more liberal terms as to credit or cash discount."

The only independent refinery in the country is the small one of Nash, Spaulding & Co., at Boston, that can have no effect on the market. The quarantine regulations due to the cholera scare have caused the price of raw sugar to advance ½ cent per pound. Taking advantage of the situation which practically prohibits the importation of sugars, for a few weeks at least, the trust has advanced the price of refined sugar ½ cent per pound, and authorities say that prices will go still higher.

The following quotations show clearly the effects of the trust upon prices:

	96 deg. centrifugals. Cts. per lb.	Granulated. Cts. per lb.	Diff'ce. Cents.
Dec. 31, 1891	3⅜	4	⅝
April 11, 1892	3⅛	4⅜	1¼
May 25, 1892	3 1-16	4⅜	1 5-16
Sept. 10, 1892	3 9-16	5 1-16	1½

It should be remembered that there were several large refineries outside of the trust until last March. When these had all been gathered in, prices of raw and refined sugar began to diverge. The cost of refining is about ½ cent per pound. At present prices the trust is making net profits of more than $100,000 per day or $40,000,000 per year, and every additional difference of 1-16 of a cent adds $2,500,000 to this amount. Twenty millions of dollars of these profits are extracted from the people by means of the ½-cent duty, and helps to swell the pockets of the rich refiners. None of it finds its way into the coffers of the nation, though a few thousand may get into circulation through the medium of the Republican National Committee.

That Free Breakfast Table.

Whitelaw Reid said, in his speech of September 10, that, by coupling together "protection and reciprocity," his party had given us "a free breakfast table," which the Democrats propose to destroy by "restoring the revenue duties on coffee, tea and sugar."

The only thing the Republicans did to give us a free breakfast table was to reduce the duty on refined sugar from about 2½ to 1½ cents per pound. For this we would have been thankful if it had not reduced our revenue by nearly $60,000,000, to give an opportunity to impose more onerous duties upon other articles of food and clothing—duties that would not, like the sugar duty, put almost as many dollars into our treasury as it took from the people, but that would take three dollars from the people, one of which would reach our treasury and two of which would be caught on the fly by the "friends" of the administration. No, we have not free sugar yet for our breakfast tables; the ½ cent duty must be paid to the sugar trust. It is this duty that the Democrats propose to remove, and that they would have removed months ago if a Republican Senate and President had not blocked the way.

As to tea and coffee, they have for years been on the free list. The only possible effect of "reciprocity" upon them would be to reimpose duties and to tax them, as has been done by decree of President Harrison in some cases. For such a "free breakfast table" we are not especially grateful to the protectionists.

Benighted Greenlanders.

The Arctic explorers are back, and bring with them much interesting information in regard to the strange inhabitants of the northern portion of Greenland. It appears from Lieutenant Peary's reports that these Greenlanders have very few of the ordinary comforts of life. Their tables are but scantily supplied with apples, oranges, watermelons, potatoes, sugar and other ordinary fruits and vegetables. Even wheat, corn or rye bread is almost unknown there. The people are also backward in dress, and could not tell American shoddy from English all-wool goods; in fact, they pay no attention to Parisian fashions, and do not even wear collars or cuffs. They have no railroads, electric lights, self-binders, hand organs or world's fairs. What is the cause of this sad state of affairs? The lack of tariff protection. They have no Major McKinley there to teach them the art of levying duties on imported products, so that while producing any article to advantage in any climate and soil they could at the same time build up home markets, provide increased employment at advanced wages, and collect their taxes from the commercial foreigners who might seek Greenland's markets. Benighted inhabitants! Let them send their statesmen to our World's Fair next year. McKinley and his trained assistants may possibly have a school there, where instruction will be given in McKinley government, religion and morals.

IF taxing imports encourages wealth production then geographic boundaries cannot stay the beneficence of high duties. Pennsylvania ought to grow still richer were Jersey's products shut out. Where is the protectionist who dares follow his logic?—St. Louis Courier.

THE trap with the bait labeled "protection" is being set for the Eastern workman. The same cage, with reciprocity as the lure, does duty among the hayseeds.—St. Louis Courier.

SENATOR HILL'S SPEECH.

A Strong Indorsement of Democracy and the Party Nominees.

Senator Hill's Brooklyn speech is a strong and telling argument in behalf of the Democratic party and its nominees—Cleveland and Stevenson.

Having stated the historical differences between Democracy and its opponent, whether the opponent was the old-time Federalist, the Whig, or present Republicanism, Senator Hill addressed himself to the two great questions of this time—the tariff and the force bill. The Senator is clear and cogent in his presentation of the Democratic position with reference to the Republican fraud called protection. He demonstrates the position which Democracy has long held and will continue to hold with reference to the raising of revenue at the custom-houses. He assigned good reasons why a Democratic convention denounced Republican protection as a fraud. These he enumerated as follows:

1. It is secured by a palpable abuse of the taxing power of the government.
2. It inures to the benefit of the few at the expense of the many.
3. It is based upon favoritism of the worst species.
4. It tends to create fictitious prosperity, to be followed by subsequent business depression.
5. It is deceptive in its promises and unsatisfactory in its results.
6. Its principal beneficiaries constitute a privileged class, and their importunities for governmental aid lead to public scandal and demoralization.

The Senator showed that there is no purpose upon the part of the Democratic party to do other than raise its revenue substantially in the manner employed at present—that is, by custom house duties. There is no purpose of establishing free trade, an idea inconsistent with the existence of custom houses. He quoted Justice Miller of the Supreme Court: "To lay with one hand the power of the government on the property of a citizen and with the other bestow it upon favored individuals, to aid private enterprise and build up private fortunes, is none the less robbery because it is done under the forms of law and is called taxation." He quoted Judge Cooley: "Constitutionally a tax can have no other basis than the raising of revenue for public purposes, and whatever government has not this basis is tyrannical and unlawful." He stated as the Democratic position belief in revenue with incidental protection, and not in protection with incidental revenue. So far as the tariff is necessary to meet the needs of the government it may be imposed, and any other benefit which may be legitimately derived from its imposition may and does necessarily accompany it. When the Democratic party declares in favor of a tariff for revenue only it means that the proper, main and only lawful and direct purpose of the tariff is the raising of revenue alone, a logical and correct position which does not conflict with the idea of such incidental advantage as necessarily and inevitably may be received through a revenue tariff. For illustration of what the Senator says let us assume that a purely revenue duty is imposed upon coffee, which is not grown anywhere in the United States. Would that afford any benefit incidentally? It certainly would. The price of coffee being increased by reason of the tariff tax imposed upon it, just as the price of sugar is reduced because the customs tax imposed upon it has been repealed in part, the consumer would look for substitutes for coffee. These substitutes would have the benefit through enhanced price of the levy of a duty on coffee.

The Democratic party stands to-day upon this question of the tariff where it stood in 1876. It is no more a free-trade party to-day than it was when Samuel J. Tilden received more than 250,000 majority of the popular vote. Senator Hill quotes pointedly and pertinently from the celebrated tariff message of President Cleveland directed to Congress in December, 1887. What the Democratic position would be to-day were it in control of the Government of the United States is best indicated by the latest full tariff bill presented in 1888, and by the separate tariff bills passed by the present Democratic House of Representatives and received contumaciously by the Republican Senate. It is not possible to make a tariff bill in a platform, nor can one in a dozen statesmen or publicists or writers formulate a bill. That must be done in the Committee on Ways and Means of the National House, but taking its latest efforts at legislation—the Mills bill four years ago and the Springer bills of the present session—and, as the Senator indicates, they show what would be the Democratic position—

1. That the necessaries of life should be substantially free.
2. That luxuries should bear the heaviest burdens.
3. That there should be free raw materials for the benefit of our manufacturers.
4. That the tariff upon manufactured articles should as a general rule be larger where similar articles are manufactured in this country than where they are not.
5. That the tariff imposed upon all manufactured articles (other than those which for good reasons are placed on the free list) should equal the difference between the rate of wages paid in this and foreign countries so far as labor enters into the cost of their production.

Incidentally, Senator Hill calls attention to the shifting positions of the sophists who maintain the fraud called Republican protection. Five years ago they were crying that the tariff was not a tax. Now they are endeavoring to show that they have relieved us from taxation by abolishing the sugar duty. He exploded the sophistry about the protection of infant industries, a phrase which every citizen of his age has heard from his earliest years, and he suggests that it is high time that the fostering care of the Government should be withdrawn and the infant industries permitted to mature. A verdict upon McKinleyism was rendered two years ago by the people of the United States, but the Republican party has refused to obey the popular verdict. A Democratic House of Representatives has attacked the worst features of McKinleyism by passing a free-wool bill, a free binding-twine bill, and various other measures, but the will of the people, expressed by its representatives in the House, has been ignored. It is true, as Senator Hill says, that the Republicans insulted the people by asserting that the popular verdict had been produced by misrepresentation, that the people did not know their own mind, and it is true that we must appeal again in this election to the people, and ask them to renew their expression of disapproval of the McKinley law.

The speech of Senator Hill is in all respects creditable to that gentleman and helpful of Democracy and of the canvass for Cleveland and Stevenson. It will be helpful not only in New York, which may now be reasonably counted upon for Cleveland, but it will also be of great advantage to the Democracy of the West.

This and That.

WHISKY flies to a man's head and finds it empty.

IN the present Dolly Varden state of the fashions it may be expected that the Wall Paper trust will deal in big figures.

IF some persons were to bestow one-half of their fortunes in learning how to properly spend the other half, it would be money extremely well laid out.

NOT only is it difficult to say the right thing in the right place, but far more difficult still to leave unsaid the wrong thing at the tempting moment.

That Dear Old Word, Good-by,

Is a mighty sad one when it is the parting salutation between friends whom thousands of miles of salt water are about to separate. Mariners, buyers in foreign lands for heavy houses, commercial travelers who have made many trips across the stormy Atlantic, think little of an ocean voyage, but to the first voyager the initial trip is a momentous affair. Sea sickness is to be expected as a matter of course How to prevent it? The finest remedy and preventive of the nausea provoked by the tossing of a vessel, the jarring motion of the screw of a steamship, or of a locomotive train, is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, pronounced by sea captains, ship doctors, tourists, travelers, and emigrants the finest stomachic and best defense against ailments of the bowels, digestive organs and liver in existence. Malaria, rheumatism, kidney trouble, and debility are remedied by it.

In Holland.

In the strange little country of Holland the three principal cities are Amsterdam, Rotterdam, and The Hague. These cities are a peculiar medley of canals and streets, trees and masts, bridges and boats. Amid their apparent disorder there is more or less of symmetry. Amsterdam is a semicircle, Rotterdam an equilateral triangle and The Hague a square. The difference between the three cities socially has been aptly put: "At Rotterdam, they are consolidated; at The Hague, they are spent."

Not the Right Way.

The attempt to follow the right without absolutely breaking with the wrong is what leads to many disastrous failures on the part of half-way Christians. There can be no real success or progress in the service and knowledge of God unless there is an attachment to it, a longing for it so deep and strong that it envolves what the Psalmist stoutly calls perfect "hatred" of them that hate God, which means not only all persons, but all influences and habits that are against God's will.—Christian Union.

Animals with a "Pull."

The shelless limpet pulls 1,984 times its own weight when in the air, and about double that amount when immersed in water. Fasting fleas on an average pull 1,493 times their own dead weight, while the Mediterranean cockle, Venus verrucosa, can exert a pulling power equal to 2,071 times the weight of its own body. So great is the power possessed by the oyster that to open it a force equal to 1,319.5 times the weight of its shelless body is required.

God Has a Plan for Us.

God knows what He wants to do. He will shape and use us, if we will submit ourselves to Him trustfully. Luther calls attention to the fact that the invitation in the Psalms, "Rest in the Lord and wait patiently for Him," is in the Hebrew, "Be silent to God—let Him mold thee." If we are not what we ought to be, it is because we resist God's effort to make us so, and prefer our plans to His.—S. S. Times.

"The Rocky Mountain Limited" And "The Big 5."

Two Grand Trains Daily Between the World's Fair City and the Foothills.

The popularity of "The Great Rock Island Route" as a Colorado line—it having long time since taken first place as the people's favorite between the Lakes and the Mountains—has compelled the management to increase its present splendid service by the addition of a train that is one night on the road from Chicago to Denver, Colorado Springs or Pueblo. This train will be known as the "ROCKY MOUNTAIN LIMITED," and will be put in service May first. Leaves Chicago daily at 10:45 a. m., arriving at above cities in the afternoon of the next day, earlier than any of its competitors Especial equipment has been built for this train, with the view of making it a limited in every sense of the word, and best of all, there will be no extra charge. The route of this exceedingly fast train is by the Rock Island Short Line, and a few of the large cities through which it passes, are Davenport, DesMoines, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Lincoln, Beatrice, Fairbury, Belleville, Phillipsburg, Smith Center, Colby and Goodland. This makes it a most desirable route, and particularly interesting to the traveler. Another point: The popularity of our dining-car service is still on the increase, and no money spared to make this service what our patrons always say, "the best."

Our "Big 5" will continued as usual, leaving Chicago at 10 p. m. and arriving at Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo, the second morning, being but one day out, and this fast and popular train goes through Omaha.

Our No. 11 will leave as heretofore at 6 p. m., arrive at Kansas City at 9:00 a. m., and will reach Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo the second morning.

Our Colorado service is made perfect by this new "Rocky Mountain Limited" and the "Big 5," and gives to the traveling public two flyers daily.

Manitou passengers should consult the map and time tables of our line, to fully appreciate the advantages in time saved by taking this route, when on their summer vacation.

Financially Embarassed.

A large manufacturer, whose affairs were very much embarassed, and who overworked and broken down with nervous exhaustion, went to a celebrated specialist. He was told that the only thing needed was to be relieved of care and worry, and have a change of thought. This doctor was more considerate of his patient's health than of his financial circumstances. He ought to have advised him to use Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, the best remedy for nervous prostration, sleeplessness, dizziness, headache, ill effects of spirits, tobacco, coffee, opium, etc. Thousands testify to cures. WATERLOO.

Monday Mr. Huber of Warsaw, was in town.

Tuesday Editor Willis went to Fort Wayne,

Wednesday Mr. Purcell of Ft. Wayne was in Waterloo.

F. Tubbs of Pleasant Lake, was in Waterloo Monday.

J. P. Kunz and wife of Toledo, attended the funeral of Della Shoner.

J. C. Boyer has indulged in a flagstone walk in front of his residence.

Mrs. A. V. Sinclair has returned home from visiting his parents in the south.

J. McCague and wife are made happy by the birth of a daughter Saturday evening.

Mr. Duesler has improved h's residence by the addition of a piazza on the east side.

F. Nichols who has been assisting Mr. Fitzgerald a few days in Bryan, has returned home.

An infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Mergy died rather suddenly Sunday evening of cholera infantum.

Mrs. Emma McFarren of Ft. Wayne, has been visiting her relatives and friends here several days.

Next week is fair week here, and just now it bids fair to be fair for the fair, and for the fair who will attend the fair.

Richard's big rail road show and new model circus will exhibit here, Thursday, Sept. 29th, both afternoon and evening.

Rev. E F. Albertson has sent in his resignation as pastor of the M. E. church of this place, and it has been accepted, He removes next week with his family to Greencastle, where he desires to complete his theological course.

Bessie Bassett was married Sunday to a gentleman from Angola, by Rev. Moot at the home of her father, C. Bassett. We understand the young couple will make their future home in Chicago.

B. F. Kennedy will soon remove his family back here. Many of those who leave here, hoping to better themselves, not finding their expectations realized, or becoming homesick return satisfied to remain, and many others would do so if they could.

BUTLER.

J. A. Campbell and family attended the Angola fair.

Rev. Mr. Stone assisted Rev. Mr. Lamport at Garrett Sunday.

Tom Fralich and family of Garrett, Sundayed with J. A. Campbell.

Quite a number of our people attended the Hicksville fair. They report a large crowd on Thursday.

Geo. Kehrer after spending a short time at one of the Michigan cures, has returned somewhat improved.

Health remains good in town, but we hear of quite a number of cases of sickness in the surrounding country.

Will Moore has moved into his own property in town, and J. W. Lingenfelter is about to move to his farm residence.

Oviatt Campbell and wife have returned from a six weeks visit in Elkhart. Mr. Campbell is employed on the Lake Shore stone work.

But a little over one month of the campaign season remains, yet there has not been a good sized shadow of a rally here, Surely this is a still hunt campaign.

Last Sunday was a field day for the non-church attending people. We believe that every one of the five pulpits was empty, a thing that has not occurred before for many years.

A dwelling belonging to Samuel Reynolds, near the Lake Shore coal chute, had a narrow escape from fire last Thursday night. Mrs. R. accidently let a lamp fall, which broke, and the escaping oil set fire to every thing near. Timely help from neighbors, and a prompt response from the water works saved the property in a damaged condition. Insured in J. A. Campbell's agency.

The foundation for the new foundry in connection with the Butler manufacturing company's building is nearly completed. The building is 36 feet wide and sixty feet long and will be a material help to their enterprise, that seems to be getting to paying, as they have recently declared a dividend of 12 per cent. This will not be very bad news to its stockholders who have waited with some impatience for returns.

SUMMIT.

Marshal Lewis and family moved to Waterloo last week.

Mrs. Ella Hains of Waterloo, visited relatives here Sunday,

Frank Hilt and wife returned from Cadillac, Mich., where they have been visiting relatives the past two weeks.

Mrs. J. J. Baxter, who has been in Fairmont, Minn., the past few months for her health, returned home Wednesday improved some in health.

Is Tin Cheaper?

Well no, not as anybody has heard. The proof of the pudding is in eating it. We last week heard Ex-Clerk D. Y. Husselman giving a practical object lesson on this point. He had been having a little discussion on the subject, with a friend, while sitting in his office at the Eagle Iron Works, at the Junction. Mr. Husselman had asserted that under the McKinley law, tin had advanced in price. This, the friend denied, saying tin was cheaper, when Mr Husselman wheeled his chair around, reached a hook on which were hanging several bills, among others, some bills for tin of which the company buys a good deal to use in the manufacture of stoves The first bill taken off, was one dating back before the McKinley act had gone into effect on tin, and showed that the price per box of the kind they used was $6. Then he pulled off another bill, one of recent date, and on this the price per box was $7 50 Under such circumstances, the factory will have to stand this loss, or else cut down wages, or charge more for the goods made of this higher priced tin. The man who believed that taxing an article made it cheaper, had no further argument to offer. We see also, in the Ligonier Banner, a letter from Albion, in which is quoted, from a leading hardware merchant there, J. J. Martin, well known here as a reliable and clear headed man. Mr Martin told the correspondent, that nails cost now, 60 cents a keg more than they did two or three years ago. We call attention of the Butler Record to these facts, because he made the ridiculous assertion that "a duty levied on articles largely produced in this country, makes that article cheaper." The nails mentioned above are all made in this country, and if we are to believe republican editors a large amount of the tin we use is also made here. The consumer pays the advance caused by a tariff even though the article is made here. And if the article is made here, the government gets no revenue. We pay the extra price for "protection" to men who would make money faster than we can, if there were no protection. A tariff law for "protection" alone, is equal to a law to protect horse thieves. In either case, the protected party does the stealing, and the people at large, suffer the loss Who will stand up and say that such a law is right? Give us a tariff for revenue only. Then when we pay $1 to the government, we would not have to pay $4 more to the "protected" man as we now do.

THE PEOPLE'S PARTY.

The Courier Discusses in a Friendly Way, Several Questions Relating to It.

Several of our personal friends in the new party have talked with us in a friendly way, and asked what we thought of some of their points of doctrine. Others have wondered why we could not agree with them, as in some few things, we admitted they were right. We agree with them partly as to silver, fully as to the greenback, as to a lower tariff, etc., etc., but not in other things. Then, too, democrats have asked us, why the COURIER the acknowledged leader of the party in the county, does not make a fight against the new party. In all this, we have taken what we feel is the wisest and the best course. We do not agree with the people's party as nearly as we did when they were more moderate in their views, and when their leaders had more the appearance of being honest with their followers than they seem to be. But we have believed the proper way is for people to choose for themselves, and we discuss the matter now, only because we do not wish to have our own position misunderstood. In this friendly spirit, we shall speak briefly, our opinion on a few only, of the points of faith now held by the new party, and frankly, our own views on them, as reached after full and impartial study.

THE TWO PER-CENT LOAN SCHEME.

We cannot agree with the people's party in this. Government would be unwise to enter into the business of loaning money so anyone, at 2 per cent., or any other rate. It would be dangerous, even if the government had money to loan, which it has not. If it had money it would be better to pay its own debts that draw 3 to 5 per cent., than to loan it at 2. But if it loans money to all, there will have to be a new set of officers—a multitude of them, appointed. These officers will place the loans. For this, they must examine titles get the value of land, and see that proper security is taken. They must watch and see that the interest is paid, and when due, that the principal is also paid. If anyone fails to pay, they must bring suit. Law courts will be crowded, litigation will abound, and costs will eat up thousands of homesteads. And then, in many instances the government must foreclose, take the land, and again become owner of the farms it once gave out as homesteads. Can any sensible farmer conceive of a more disastrous policy? There are too many ways already of putting mortgages on property and we would be wildly unwise to invent others. Then this new horde of appointed officers, about a hundred thousand of them —what a power they would be in the hands of the party who happened to be in power! Who wants all this? We do not, for one.

TO OWN RAILROADS AND TELEGRAPHS.

The people's party believe that our general government should buy up and own all railroads and telegraphs. This is wildness run mad. Suppose the railroads will not sell, how could we buy them? Then suppose they would be willing to sell, where would the government get the money to buy with? Out of the people of course, if they got it at all. Are not the people already sufficiently burdened? However, suppose the roads are bought and paid for. Then they must be operated. Here again the president would have power to appoint a lot of officials, laborers, etc, say half a million. How could a president with all these appointees, and those under the 2 per cent. loan scheme in addition to all he now has to appoint, ever be got out of office? Again, it is all the roads can now do, to make reasonable profits while being managed by the owners who are generally able business men. How much better are they likely to be managed by a set of politicians appointed without regard to ability or honesty, but with sole regard to their fine work in politics? The people's party itself, if it had every branch of the government would not be willing to assume so dangerous a policy as this, and the 2 per cent. loan scheme. Then how can they hope to sustain a national party by advocating it?

AS TO FREE SILVER.

The new party believes in free coinage of silver." So do the democrats. Read the plank in our platform beginning "We hold to the use of both gold and silver as the standard money of the country and the coinage of both gold and silver, without discriminating against either metal or charge for mintage." This is democratic free silver. The Bland free silver bill, which we are told is what our people's party friends believe in, is different. It is class legislation of the worst kind. It says that whoever takes to the mint, silver enough to make a dollar, shall receive a dollar for that much metal. But that much metal is worth less than 70 cents. So if the few mine owners, who have silver, produce 70 millions worth of silver in a year, the government would have to to give them 100 millions for it, thus taking 30 millions from the people's pocket and putting into the pockets of a few mine owners. On this point, of course, we cannot agree with the people's party. We believe in the old-time free silver, and that is the same as advocated now in the democratic platform. And what silver we have had coined or used lately is due to democratic legislation, and such coinage Cleveland favors. During his administration we coined 2½ millions a month of silver. In Harrison's administration this has been stopped. Which do you like best, the Cleveland plan or the Harrison plan? We have only these two men to choose between. Cleveland has agreed to stand by the Chicago platform. Under Cleveland, we coined nearly as much silver each month, as we did under the old free coinage in a year. So it will be seen that free coinage is not an important question after all.

ARE BEING USED.

There have been from the start, plenty of plain indications that designing men are making use of the people's party to forward their own selfish ends, and not for the good of the new party itself. Several democrats have been disappointed in their aspirations—possibly have been unjustly treated—and they are willing to use the voters of the new party to "get even." Republican politicians are also at the game. Their candidate for treasurer, Mr. Provines, is also their county chairman. He is also an alliance man, and is working the farmer element for all their is in it, to get them to vote for him on the republican ticket, as against Mr. Sawvel, who is also a farmer. Then too, Commissioner Lockwood, elected on the republican ticket, and still a republican puts in full time keeping the people's party in line with republican interests as far as possible. For this purpose he neglects his duties on the board of commissioners, gets up quarrels with the two democratic members, and misrepresents the county's interests before the people. It makes no difference how much a given thing or course costs the county, so he can make the people believe it is all right. If the new party will watch this matter closely, they will see what a grand mistake they made, when they helped to defeat a careful man like Patterson. But if they prefer to burn their fingers pulling some other man's chestnuts out of the fire, it is their job, not ours. But this article would not be complete without a reference to it. The farmers have been bled of their hard earned dollars at every step of the movement, but if they can stand it, we can. Their latest call was for cash to start another paper. But after dropping several hundred dollars into the Waterloo Advocate, and getting but half a dozen or so weakly papers for their good dollar, they didn't bite. They probably want to know what became of their Waterloo money, first. Much else might be said, but we must close this already long article.

CAN THE NEW PARTY SUCCEED?

The Ft. Wayne Dispatch says: "DeKalb county will elect a full people's party ticket this fall." Someone has been deceiving the Dispatch, The people's party will not elect a man in this county, and every member of the party up here knows it. Why don't the Dispatch ask the members who live here. Let us give the reasons for our belief. At the last presidential election DeKalb county polled 6221 votes including 41 for the labor party, and 141 for the prohibitionists. Say the prohibitions poll 141 votes again, though they will likely poll more, and the total left is 6080 votes to be divided among three parties. Now suppose this to be even 6000, then if a party succeeds in this county it must have at least 2000 votes. But the people's party has never claimed higher than 1750. But even if they get the 2000, it will still be likely that one of the old parties would have a little over 2000, and the other a little less, and the one over 2000 would win. The successful candidates in this county, state and nation will be from either the democratic or the republican party, and people have a chance to choose intelligently which they prefer. The issues between the two are plainly joined, and no one need to make a mistake. The democratic party, as we have proved some weeks ago, made every law for the relief of the people, that has been made in this state for many years, while the republicans opposed them. A similar statement is true as to congress, only that in the national government, the democrats have not in 30 years, had full control, and could not therefore get the laws they worked for; either the senate or the president, or both, were always in the way. If mistaken people's party voters, give this election over into the hands of their worst enemies, they themselves alone are to blame. The COURIER feels friendly towards them, for it has a personal acquaintance with very many of them, and hence has had this friendly talk with them. So when the election is over they must not complain that the COURIER did not give them full information.

Don't You Know

that you can secure almost immediate relief from Indigestion, and that uncomfortable fullness after meals, by simply taking a dose of Simmons Liver Regulator? Some people think that because it is called Liver Regulator it has nothing to do with Indigestion and the like. It is the inaction of the Liver that causes Indigestion, and that fullness; also Constipation, and those Bilious Headaches. Millions have been made to understand this and have been cured from these troubles by Simmons Liver Regulator—a medicine unfailing and purely vegetable.

From Rev. M. B. Wharton, Baltimore, Md

The New Great South American Kidney Cure.

The acknowledged superior cure and immediate relief for all derangements, painfulness and decay of the kidneys or bladder, Bright's disease, diabetes or any complaint that hurts or despoils either of these delicate organs. This new remedy has been thoroughly tested by learned physicians and found far superior to any medicine yet discovered for quickly relieving all weaknesses, aches, pains and distresses arising from disease of any part of the urinary passages. It is a great relief for the old, middle aged and children, male or female. It relieves at once retention and pain in passing water, and it is very effective in relieving prostatic troubles in the old, and for nightly incontinence of water in children, or others, caused by weakness of the bladder. It may be worth to many a hundred times its cost. This is a remedy of great value to ladies, because they are very liable to weakness and pain peculiar to their sex. What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhoea and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

1865—Continued.

The newspapers of Auburn were eking out a precarious existence and losing money to proprietors. Wm. H. Dills stated that dating from the commencement of his editorial career his position had been far from enviable and that there was little compensation for incident trouble.

With the issue of the DeKalb Democrat of date Feb. 17th, 1865, he was relieved at his own request from the uncongenial duties of editor and superintendent, and publication of the paper was suspended, pending search for a publisher.

Early in May, Howard Coe previously of the Marion Journal leased the material of the office, rented of Mrs. Leasure the property on South Main street now owned by Mrs. Sophia Snell, and expressed his intention to cast his lot with Auburn people and to do his best in the conduct of a Democratic newspaper.

Declaring the previous price of the DeKalb Democrat "entirely unremunerative" he increased an annual subscription to $2, and on May 12th, publication was resumed. Mr. Coe took a strong interest in the town and used to good purpose every occasion to farther its interests. He urged improvements, commended enterprise and censured lack, with unsparing severity.

Meanwhile Mr. Loveland changed the name of his paper to The Auburn Observer and Reporter, to no advantage, became discouraged and removing his press and material to Clyde, Ohio, there started The Clyde Times.

His six years labors at publishing a paper, with the advantage of a gift of the outfit, had neither enriched, nor won him influence nor popularity, but his courageous efforts in the conduct of what must be regarded as pioneer newspaper work in DeKalb county, entitle his memory to the recognition intended in these reminiscences of bygone days.

Auburn at this time had her large woolen factory, her flouring and lumber, mills, her churches, academy and the advantage of the county buildings and business, but it was thought that more buildings were needed.

There was plenty of room and no lack of sites for them, but it was a question whether if built, they would find occupants at a rental to warrant the outlay. It was suggested that a number of the richer townsmen unite to build a brick block, three stories high in the business part of the place, the block to contain six or eight store rooms on the ground floor, the second story to be used as offices and the third for halls, and this measure was urged as a help to the town and a profit to investors.

It was felt that Auburn had a future. The trade it should control, the advantages it should possess and which together build up a town and the country adjacent would invite location here of various industries, adding to the importance of the place and the value of local adjacent property.

Although these suggestions did not materialize then, it is noticeable that when the time did come for action, the building was in consonance with them.

Looking at our streets this season of 1892, remembering the labor and material expended upon them, we may well believe the statement of Mr. Coe in 1865. "Our streets," said he, "are filthy, the alleys are obstructed, they offend the senses and endanger the health of the people. The streets need cleaning, the sidewalks are out of repair, the dilapidated condition of the old fence about the public square has become an eye-sore to resident and stranger visitor and we are wearied of seeing dog fennel pre-empting ground which might be made a beautiful park."

The criticism was timely. The streets in the spring season were almost impassable. Horses and vehicles sank deep in the mud churned by hoof and wheel into the consistency of sticky paste. Deep holes formed in the roadway and through these teams struggled or in attempted avoidance, encroached upon the domain of the sidewalk.

Summer came and cross streets were beautiful in growth of grass, but along the traveled roadways, the firm surface was covered with dust that swept in clouds against dwellings and annoyed passers by.

In the fall, some effort was made to remedy these faults and some of the few narrow, wooden sidewalks were repaired but there was no system and little appearance of the public spirit now existing.

Meanwhile, the school trustees had proved fortunate in selection of a superintendent and the Academy under what for the time must be deemed a permanent management progressed encouragingly in numbers attending and scholarship.

Spencer Dills concluded his winter term and followed it by a spring select term at the close of which he held a picnic in the grove west of town to which from the public square, the school marched with colors flying and band playing, and where, following a dinner served, literary exercises were conducted, when returning near evening to the square they were briefly addressed by James Morrison, Esq, and dismissed to their homes.

At the present time, educational facilities special and general are available with trifling cost in many localities in our state that did not exist in 1865.

The Terre Haute and the Valparaiso training schools had not been organized, much less the great number of so called normal institutes and the academies were rightly recognized as the sole available places of instruction for teachers in the district schools.

At the June term of the board of county commissioners, Mr. Dills had been appointed school examiner for a term of three years. He knew the deficiences of teachers and their disadvantages and on opening a select term Aug. 20, especially invited such as proposed teaching, to attend his school and enjoy such instruction as he was prepared to render in preparation for their work.

Actual and fanciful benefits of being taught by the examiner influenced many to attend and the precedent then set has been followed of forming in fall terms of our graded schools, normal classes to decided advantage.

(To be continued next week.)

Another Tariff Lesson.

Roofing tin gives us another object lesson on the beauties of the tariff. We were talking with W. J. Wallace, and he says that kind of tin has come up in from $9 and $10 to $12.50, so that while he has to pay about $3.00 a box more for the material, he can't get a cent more for his work. It pulls a big pile out of his pocket in the course of the year. We have not talked with our other tinners, Beuret, Rush and Lewis, but of course it is the same with them. If you put a tax on tin, it "makes wages higher," they tell us. If a tinner employs men to help him at a given price, when tin is $9.50 a box, can he raise their wages when this same tin is $12.50? No. As he loses $3.00 on the extra expense for each box, and gets no more per square for his work, he naturally pays his men less. And what is true of this industry is true of all in which the materials used are taxed.

Appoint Election Officers.

The law says certain election officers must be appointed by a certain date, as follows:

One week before election, a judge for each precinct, one for each party that cast the largest vote at the last election. The trustee appointed them, and they must not be related to any candidate on any ticket. The trustee appoints the one, that the party recommends to him. Should a member of the election board fail to appear, the other members can choose one from his party.

Five days before election, an election sheriff, one for each party. These are appointed by the sheriff, at suggestion of the two parties.

Four days before election, a poll clerk for each party. Appointed by the inspector and judges, at suggestion of their party.

Each party also appoints a challenger and a poll book holder, at any time before election. Let the committees, etc., attend to these things in time. Keep this item for reference.

At Kendallville.

The fair at Kendallville last week, was a great success, the lovely weather permitting every one to go. The display was good, and the speed department up to the average. There was a runaway in the pacing race on Wednesday, and in the double team running race on Thursday, Crandall's team ran away, going several times around the track. He was badly hurt, Barker, the Garrett man, in getting his team out of the way, was thrown out and hurt. Wednesday there was a big turn out of veterans to see Gen. Sigel, many of them having served under him. In the evening he was given a reception at Dr. Teal's where the editor of this paper, and his wife, met the general, and many other friends of the old war days, including Capt. W. P. Myers, formerly of the Auburn schools, Capt. J. E. Bradden of Ligonier, a member of the 30th Indiana, Col. Zollinger, and many others. It was a very pleasant and informal meeting for all. Gen. Sigel is a pleasant unassuming gentleman, evidently an educated man of the old school, and a very entertaining talker. Dr. and Mrs. Teal and their neighbors, made all callers heartily welcome, and have the thanks of many for a most pleasant hour at their cosy home.

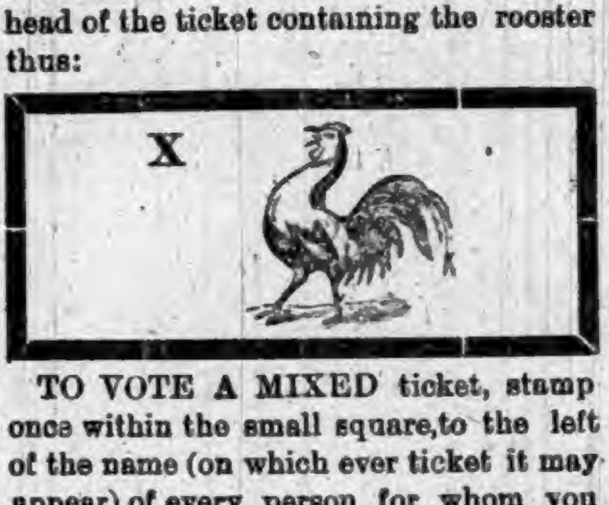
How to Vote.

(South Bend Times.)

Upon entering the election room, announce your name to the poll clerks, who are the two members of the board, that record the names of the voters and write their initials upon the ballots. One of these poll clerks will furnish you with ballots, one on red paper, containing the national and state ticket, and one on white paper, containing the county ticket. Take ballots from no one else. To have other ballots in your possession is a penitentiary offense. Retire to a booth to prepare your ballot.

If you accidentally mutilate, tear deface, mark or blot your ballot, return them at once to the poll clerks, and they will give you others. To vote a straight Democratic ticket, stamp your ballot ONCE within the large square at the head of the ticket containing the rooster thus:



TO VOTE A MIXED ticket, stamp once within the small square, to the left of the name (on which ever ticket it may appear) of every person for whom you wish to vote. In any event, when voting a mixed ticket, DO NOT stamp within any one of the large squares at the head of the different tickets which contain the rooster, eagle, plow, etc. Stamping within any one of the large squares at the top of the ballots containing a rooster, eagle, plow, etc., is to vote a straight ticket. And to vote a mixed ticket you pay no attention whatever to these large squares at the top of the ticket, but do all your stamping within the smaller squares to the left of the names of candidates.

Having stamped your ballot in the booth, there fold it so as to show the initials of the poll clerks, which appear on the back of the ballots, and do not fold you ballots so as to disclose how you have voted.

Hand your ballots, after you have folded them as just indicated, to the inspector, the member of the board who sits by the ballot box, ready to receive them. Hand your stamp to the poll clerk and leave the election room.

DO NOT stamp on your ballot anywhere except within one of the large squares at the top to vote a straight ticket, or within as many of the small square,s if voting a mixed ticket, as are to the left of the names of all the candidates and all the tickets for whom you may care to vote.

Do NOT use pen or pencil in preparing ballots.

Do NOT show anybody how you voted or try to see how others have voted.

If you want instructions, when in the election room as to how to prepare ballots, ask the poll clerks for it, or if you are physically unable to stamp your ballots, or can not read English, ask the poll clerks for aid, and they will assist you.

Cut this out and show it to your neighbors.

Court.

Judge Powers took up his old position again Monday, and the court came to order. Uncle Jerry Plum swung the gad over the grand jury as usual and said it was the last time. Well, he has had a lot of experience, but all in all, has filled his positions, coroner, sheriff, and now bailiff in a very satisfactoy way. Uncle Jimmy Latson keeps his eye on things in the court room, as bailiff, for sheriff Plum and Deputy Blum, have to be out on the road a good deal. As soon as the Judge got a good grip on the crank, Clerk Bishop was ready to say, "Gentlemen, hold up your hands. Youdosolemnlyswear, etc.," and then the wheels began to go round, and court was under way. The grand jury buckled on its armor, and began business at the old stand. The fortunate men, are: John Yard, of Keyser; Albert Buchanan, of Fairfield; J. G. Bryant, Troy; Wm. Dawson, Richland; Milford Clark, Butler township; Jas. H. Platter of Concord, he having taken the place of E. C. Potter of Franklin, who had sickness in the family. The trial jury as selected, now stands: James May, Concord; J. S. Shull, Concord; Fred. Deventer, Grant; Henry P. Stroh, Grant; Sylvester Kutzner, Union; Thos. Phillips, Jackson; Douglas Kelley, Smitfield; J. J. Thomas, Keyser, C. C. Neidig, Fairfield; Alex Seldenright, Wilmington; Charles Wagoner, Franklin; S. S. Davis, Newville.

These, of course may be changed, for some always get excused, and other persons go on in their places.

The grand jury took a rest Tuesday, but will be on hand again next Monday. Meantime, the boys would do well to "keep in the middle of the road."

Obituary.

Jacob Fretz was born in Fayette, Co., Pa., April 16, 1812, and died at his home near Shower's Corners, in Richland township, Sept. 24, 1892, aged 80 years, 5 months and 8 days He was married to Hannah Bryan in 1839, she dying in one year thereafter. He then married Mary Shelley, Nov. 9, 1842. To this union two daughters and one son were born, who with the widow are left to mourn for one they so much loved. The funeral was held in the church near Shower's Corners, conducted by Elder James Bartor. Brother Fretz was a member of the German Baptist, or Dunkard church, for forty years. He lived a christian life and died in triumph of a living faith. He was followed to the cemetery by a large concourse of sympathizing friends.

NEWS IN BRIEF GUSTS

BLOWN IN FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

Paoli, Ind., Burned Out for the Fifth Time—The President Will Not Go to Chicago or New York—Lantern Globe Works Burned—Escaped from Jail—Rich Nickel Deposits Found.

FIVE TIMES BURNED OUT.

Details of the Last Conflagration Which Swept the Village of Paoli.

Further details of the fire at Paoli, Ind., show that for the fifth time that little city has been severely scorched. The origin is attributed to incendiaryism. The mischief started in the rear of Kibler & Son's general grocery, spreading east and south on the public square, and destroying in rapid succession William Kibler's residence, Miss Mamie Shaw's millinery store, Mrs. Martha K. Andrew's residence, G. W. Thomas' general store, Benjamin Stinson's residence, the postoffice, American Express office, Mrs. Rachel Williams' residence and millinery store, Dr. Charles Pinnick's dentistry and other properties. The total loss exceeds $40,000, with $37,000 insurance. One year ago the west side of the public square was swept by flame, causing $60,000 loss. Six years ago there was a fire on the same square which resulted in $75,000 loss, and back in the 70's there was a fire on the south and west sides which caused $80,000 loss. Each time the town has been rebuilt promptly, and better than before, but with strange remissness the town authorities have made no provisions against fire having neither waterworks nor other protection.

A County Seat War.

Culbertson (Neb.) special: There is a county seat war between this place and Trenton. The Supreme Court enjoined the county officials from removing the county records from this place. Nevertheless the County Treasurer and Deputy Clerk led a posse of Trenton citizens who raided the Court House and obtained some records. Shots were interchanged, and the Trenton crowd retreated. Anticipating further trouble, the Sheriff has telegraphed the Governor to call out the militia.

A Desperado Killed.

Ed Winkley, a noted desperado who, with Al Moore, killed Constable Byron Smith at Lander in April last, was shot and killed at his hiding place at New Fork, Wyo., in the Big Horn Mountains. Winkley's cabin was surrounded by officers who called upon him to surrender. He tried to shoot, but was riddled with bullets before he could raise his guns. The officers are hot on Moore's trail and expect to capture him soon.

Lantern Globe Works Burned.

The Lantern Globe Works at Bellaire, Ohio, was destroyed by fire. It started in the box shop and soon spread to the packing-room, where the fire department was powerless to stop the progress of the flames. This factory was the pioneer of the Ohio Valley in the glass business, and the only factory making lantern globes in the valley. The loss will be $40,000, and insurance $20,000.

Rich Nickel Deposits Found.

Duluth special: It has just been learned here that the Gunflint Lake Iron Company, while exploring for iron on the East Vermillion Range, discovered large deposits of nickel. Specimens assayed here show 9 per cent. metal, which is 3 per cent. richer than the famous Sudbury nickel. The land on which the discovery was made is owned partly by the Government.

Mr. Harrison Will Not Go to Chicago or New York.

It is learned from the White House, that on account of the continued illness of Mrs. Harrison, the President will abandon his intention of participating in the World's Fair ceremonies at New York and Chicago, though he will be represented by Vice President Morton and the entire Cabinet will be in attendance.

Peculiar Accident.

Mrs. Metcalfe Beck, of Warsaw, Ind., met with a very peculiar as well as painful accident. She had been lying on the lounge, but when she arose and attempted to stand her right limb was found to be asleep, and when she put her weight upon it, her foot turned under, and the result was the breaking of one of the bones just above the ankle joint.

Horses Cremated.

Fire broke out in the stables occupied by Christopher Ronan, a truckman, at 506 East Seventeenth street, New York. It spread so rapidly that the adjoining stables, No. 508, occupied by Mr. Creedon, also took fire. Ronan lost forty-five horses and Creedon thirteen. The total damage is about $12,000.

Escaped from Jail.

Eleven confidence men escaped from the County jail at Wichita, Kan., by sawing off several steel bars. The jail has been occupied only a few weeks and was supposed to be proof against delivery.

Street Car Wrecked.

Cincinnati special: A street car crowded with people bound for the suburbs from their day's work, was struck by a locomotive at Brighton Station. Two were killed and nearly all injured.

Minister Lincoln.

London special: Minister Lincoln will sail for the United States this week on a short leave of absence. He will return in November.

The New Return Postal Card.

The new return postal card will soon be placed on sale at all postoffices. The two designs, one for domestic and the other for the International Union service, have been approved by Postmaster General Wanamaker, and the work of printing and distributing the cards will be pushed with vigor.

Killed the Officer.

It is reported that H. T. Nippall, Sheriff of Cowley County, Kansas, who last week started in pursuit of the robbers who looted the bank at Dexter of $3,000, located the bandits in Osage County, and in attempting to arrest them was shot and killed.

WHEAT-DESTROYING PEST.

The Frit Fly Responsible for the Poor Yield in Minnesota.

In seeking a reason for the poor yield of wheat in the section surrounding Crookston, Minn., an average of only about 12 bushels, Prof. Luggar, State Entomologist, has discovered that hundreds of acres of it was killed by an insect known as the frit fly. This little pest mates in the early spring, and the female deposits its eggs at the first joint of the wheat stem. As each female lays about 1,000 eggs on an average, and only one or two in each stem of wheat, from 500 to 1,000 stems will be killed by a single insect. From these eggs are hatched small maggots, which bore into the center of the stem and destroy the joint. The maggots soon reach full size and turn into cocoons, which resemble the flaxseed, and they are found over the first joint of the stem. Stems infested by such worms, while they grow to full size, do not head out perfectly, but are still heavy enough to cause a breaking off at the weak part, and by the time this takes place the maggots have turned to flies and thus make their escape. Through the broken stems in the fields of C. T. Homer, of Argyle, Prof. Luggar found almost one-fourth of the entire crop destroyed by these insects, and in other portions of Polk and Marshall Counties the damage to wheat is equally great. Until the Professor's visit to this locality it was thought that the injury to the wheat was due to the hailstorms of the past summer.

CLAIMING THE HONOR.

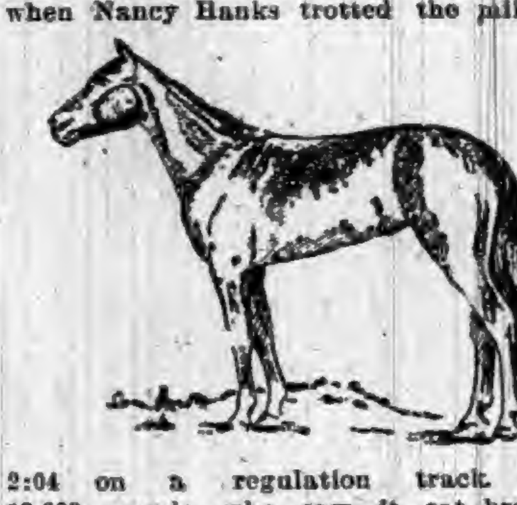
Detroit Astronomers Claim to Have Discovered Jupiter's Fifth Satellite.

Two more claimants for the honor of the discovery of Jupiter's fifth satellite have made their appearance. O. E. Cartwright, of Detroit, and another local observer claim to have observed, two years ago, certain phenomena that could not be accounted for. Correspondence was opened with the Harvard College Observatory, but no explanation was obtainable. Further observation was deferred until the opposition of the following year, 1891, when a recurrence of the phenomena of 1890 disclosed to these gentlemen the fact that this unusual occurrence could be accounted for in no other way except by allotting to Jupiter a satellite in addition to the four already known. After considerable discussion they decided that the new satellite was a fact, and over a year since wrote Prof. Holden of the Lick observatory, assigning it a position which the observation of Prof. Barnard verified. Cartwright has preserved the letters received from the Lick and the Harvard college observatories in response to his communications calling attention to the new satellite, and it would seem apparent that these letters sent to the observatories—at any rate that sent to the Lick observatory—had directly inspired the discovery of of the fifth satellite by Prof. Barnard.

NANCY HANKS TROTS IN 2:04.

The Remarkable Record Made on the Regulation Track at Terre Haute.

The world's record for the light-harness horse, either trotting or pacing, was lowered Wednesday at Terre Haute, Ind., when Nancy Hanks trotted the mile in 2:04 on a regulation track. The 10,000 people who saw it sat breathless for a moment after the little mare passed under the wire, and even Dobble, always modest of speech, declared when carried to the judges' stand on the shoulders of the crowd and called upon for a speech, that he was hoarse—"Nancy, went so fast it took my breath away."



WORK OF A DRUKNEN MAN.

He Kills His Child, Fatally Stabs His Wife, and Is Lynched.

At Castrella, six miles from Dunsmuir, Cal., Thursday night, J. W. Smith, a carpenter, while crazy drunk shot his child, fatally stabbed his wife and then vainly tried to commit suicide. He went home drunk and his wife upbraided him. He drew a pistol and shot his 5-year-old girl, killing her instantly. The mother fled, and the murderer, dropping his pistol, snatched up a knife and pursued her. She had gone but a short distance before he overtook her and plunged the knife in her neck. Her husband, believing that he had killed her, attempted to cut his throat. Before he could accomplish his purpose the frantic man was seized and overpowered by neighbors. He made no resistance, when asked if he had anything to say and thanked the crowd for putting an end to his life.

CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS' DUST.

An American Wants to Sell a Portion of the Great Discoverer's Remains.

Mr. Fred A. Ober, Exposition Commissioner of the United States to West Indies in the interest of the World's Fair, has received a letter from a New York man asking his aid in disposing of a pinch of the dust of Christopher Columbus' remains from Santo Domingo. He vouches for its genuineness. According to this Mr. Ober thinks there must be two sets of remains of Columbus, for a year ago last July he was conducted with great ceremony to and through the cathedral of San Domingo, and the discoverer's remains were then brought out for his inspection. These remains are jealously guarded, there being three keys to the casket in which they are held. One is in possession of the President of the Republic, a second is held by the archbishop, and one by the chief of the local council.

Texas Ranchmen Murdered.

Joseph Koon and Charles Moseley, two prominent ranchmen living near St. Heidery, Tex., were murdered by two Mexican cowboys named Sixto Flores and Patricio Lopez. Koon and Moseley were on their way to St. Heidery when they were waylaid by the two Mexicans and both shot down and robbed of a small amount of money. The murderers started for the Rio Grande border. They were overtaken at Stockdale and lodged in jail. There was considerable talk of lynching, and had it not been that the jail was well guarded an attempt would have been made.

White Caps Notify Tennessee Farmers.

Notices have been posted in front of the homes of some of the leading farmers of Cocke County, Tenn., informing them that unless they leave the county within ten days they will be severely dealt with. Other houses were visited and in some instances many bullets fired into the buildings. It is expected that bloodshed will result in a short time from the actions of this band of white caps.

Senator Mills Ill.

Senator Mills, of Texas, has been taken sick. His physicians do not pronounce his condition serious and ascribe it to overwork and the grip.

Mother and Child Perish.

At Westbury, L. I., the residence of Mr. Toner burned, and his wife and child perished in the flames.

Killed His Prisoner.

At Jackson, Miss., Officer Ed Gordin shot and fatally wounded James Head, a notorious character.

Fought While the Church Burned.

The Baptist Church at Deadwood, S. D., valued at $12,000, was destroyed by fire on Sunday morning. The church had but recently been completed. The fire is supposed to have been incendiary. During its progress a fireman named Clem Spurling and a physician named Naulteous became involved in a quarrel, the physician being knocked down. As he arose he shot Spurling twice in the body, killing him. The excitement is intense. The firemen threaten to lynch Naulteous. He is in jail surrounded by an armed guard. Dr. Naulteous, it is said, had killed a man at Hastings, Neb.

BERESFORD GETS SIX YEARS.

"Lord Walter" Sentenced for Forgery at Rome, Ga.

Lord Walter S. Beresford was carried before Judge Henry at Rome, Ga., to be sentenced for forgery. When Judge Henry asked him if he had anything to say before sentence was pronounced he rose to his feet and attempted to speak. His form shook with emotion, his voice faltered, and he wept like a child. Beresford begged for sentence to be postponed for a few days until he could make an appeal to the United States Court. Beresford cried bitterly during his speech, and had to pause several times to recover himself. He was sentenced to six years in the penitentiary. A sentence to penal servitude for more than two years gives a divorce in Georgia, and his wife will soon make herself Miss Maud Lilienthal again.

ARRESTED FOR TREASON.

All the Members of the Famous Advisory Board of the Strikers Taken In.

A bomb was thrown into the camp of the Homestead strikers when the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the State, Paxton, issued warrants for the arrest of every member of the famous advisory board of the strikers on a charge of high treason. When the warrants were served and five arrests were made the greatest consternation prevailed in the Homestead borough. The leaders declaimed loudly at this latest act of what they termed persecution, but before the officers left with their prisoners they had calmed down and declared that not even this was sufficient to induce them to break and return to the mill.

BUSINESS IS SERENE.

Not a Cloud Is Visible on the Commercial Horizon.

R. G. Dun & Co. say in their weekly review of trade:

Business continues larger than ever at this time of the year, and the commercial sky is without a cloud. Money is everywhere in ample supply, and collections have very rarely been more generally satisfactory. The outflow of money from Western centers for purchases in the country is larger than usual, and yet there is no embarrassment. Crop reports are uniformly favorable, and the promise is distinctly better than it was a few weeks ago. Generally business is not only large and healthy, but the outlook for the coming month is everywhere regarded with the utmost confidence.

FIVE SAILORS LOST AT SEA.

Part of the Crew of Gloucester Fishing Vessel Perish.

Captain Schmitt, of the Netherlands oil tank steamer La Campine, from Antwerp, reports speaking the fishing schooner Ada M. Hall, of Gloucester, Mass., Sept. 17. The master of the Hall reported that during the gale on the previous day he had lost two dories in which were five of his men.

Flax Fiber Factory Burned.

At Austin, Minn., the building and machinery of the American Flax Fiber Company were entirely destroyed by fire. The company is a New Jersey corporation, and it erected a large factory last summer for the purpose of reducing the flax fiber from the immense flax fields in the southern part of the State to bales and shipping it East to be manufactured. The factory was the only one of the kind in the United States and was a success last season. The loss is estimated at $35,000; no insurance.

Made Good His Ghastly Threat.

Frank Means, a machinist employed at the Santa Fe shops in Argentine, Kan., married Lillie McLanathan, of Kansas City, Mo., and told his sweetheart, Gertrude Hepburn, that his wife would be a widow within a week. Friday morning he made good his threat by putting a bullet from a 38-caliber revolver into his head, killing himself instantly.

Death of a Noted Sire.

Aberdeen, the noted trotting stallion, by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, dam Widow Machree, by Seeley's American Star, is dead at the home of his owner, James E. Clay, Bourbon County, Kentucky. He sired many game racehorses, including Alcryon, Alabaster, Kentucky Union, Abbie V., Hattie Woodward, etc. He was 26 years old.

Blown to Fragments.

A pusher engine on the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburg Railroad was blown to fragments by the explosion of the boiler near Grave Summit, Pa. Engineer Wise and Fireman Flynn were literally blown to pieces.

Four Killed by Lightning.

The residence of Samuel Adkinson, near Le Loup, Kan., was struck by lightning, killing Mr. and Mrs. Adkinson and two children, one 4 years, the other 7 months old. The house was burned.

Kentucky Embezzler.

Thomas Jones, clerk of Campbell County, Kentucky, is charged with the embezzlement of $5,701 from collection of licenses.

Senator Mills Worse.

Senator Mills' condition is worse. He may be unable to take further active part in the campaign.

PROTECTION IS A FRAUD

AN EXPOSE OF THE TIN-PLATE SWINDLE.

Some Kindergarten Tariff Lessons—Another Protection Paradox—Monuments to McKinleyism Can No Longer Fool the Farmer—Getting the Wool Out of Their Eyes.

The Tin-Plate Swindle.

In his letter of acceptance President Harrison did not hesitate to repeat the discredited assertions of the McKinley organs in regard to the tin-plate manufacture. Mingling meager statistics of the domestic production with profuse predictions, the President boasts that the tin-plate industry is already established in the country. Taking the total production of 13,240,830 pounds of tin-plate last year as a basis, the President quotes the prediction of a partisan Treasury agent that by the end of the year the domestic product will be at the rate of 200,000,000 pounds annually. In matters of this kind, as Artemus Ward remarked, it is well not to predict unless you know.

How little weight is to be given to the tin-plate authorities whom President Harrison quotes and indorses in his letter of acceptance is shown in a trenchant article by the Hon. Thomas L. Bunting, of New York. Of the 13,646,719 pounds of domestic tin plate of which Mr. Harrison and his Treasury agent boast, upward of 9,000,000 were "simply roofing iron with a mixture of lead and tin in the coating." The President and his treasury agent, who make such glib predictions on so small a margin of fact, themselves admit that of the 9,000,000 pounds of this roofing tin 3,000,000 pounds were imported plates. These imported plates, as well as the domestic, were all coated with foreign tin. During the time of this domestic production of 13,000,000 pounds of tinplate the American consumption of the commodity is shown by the official returns to have been something over 1,300,000,000 pounds. So this industry, which under the fostering influence of the McKinley tariff was in a brief space to supply the country's whole demand for tinplate, has thus far produced about 1 per cent. of the domestic requirement. Yet President Harrison eagerly clutching at the absurdly extravagant predictions of his Treasury agent, boasts of the tinplate industry as already established in the United States "in spite of the alliance between the Welsh producers and the Democratic party for its destruction."

What it has cost the American people to achieve this very moderate degree of success in tinplate production is briefly stated by Mr. Bunting. Up to March 31 last the cost of tin plates had been advanced to American consumers through the increased price of plates and doubled duties paid thereon $20,736,808. Add to this the duties paid on importations for the last quarter of the fiscal year ending June, 1892, and we have a total outlay of nearly $25,000,000. Against this enormous expenditure is to be credited the amount of wages paid imported Welshmen for tinning 13,646,719 pounds of black plates, which at the established price of twelve cents a box would be $16,376.

These indisputable facts show how dearly the American people are paying for their McKinley tin whistle. This, too, is only the beginning in the process of fraud and extortion. With the increasing need of tin plate for canning meats, fish, fruits and vegetables and for other purposes the taxation of consumers will steadily swell in volume. Whether the domestic production shall cover one or ten per cent. of the demand, the whole burden of increased tax will fall upon American consumers.—Philadelphia Record.

Protection and Fecundity.

The raising of sheep in the United States has probably been less affected by the tariff than by sun spots. It is an industry the rise and fall of which has been mainly determined by the cost of transportation, the price of land and the condition of the weather. But the "tariff on wool" has been found to be a most convenient theme with which to befuddle the mind of the farmer and make him imagine himself "protected." Perhaps the most amusing attempt in this line is a diagram prepared by a Philadelphia wool dealer "dividing the time between 1880 and 1892 into three periods in order to show the effect during each period of legislation upon the wool and sheep industry which was accomplished, as well as that projected." From 1870 to 1884 the number of sheep increased 10,000,000 under the stimulating effect of the tariff of 1867. From 1884 to 1888 the number of sheep decreased 9,000,000 because of the tariff of 1883, the Mills bill and the Democratic battle for tariff reform. From 1888 to 1892 is a period of zigzag on the diagram. There was a gain of 2,500,000 sheep under the act of 1883, working contrariwise, from 1888 to 1890, a falling off of 1,000,000 from 1890 to 1891, and a gain of 2,000,000 under McKinley auspices from 1891 to 1892.

This is excellent foolery. The waves of protection and fecundity go up and down together in the diagram, oh, so prettily.

But the cold fact is that the growth of the sheep industry depends on the accessibility of cheap land for the herdsmen. Sometimes a hard winter knocks it endwise, in spite of the tariff. In all other parts of the country, except the extreme Western States and Territories, there were fewer sheep in 1880 than there were in 1867, when the high wool tariff was put in operation. There were more than twice as many sheep in the Eastern and Middle States in 1840 as there were in 1880, notwithstanding protective nurture and a doubling of the population.

Unless it be the intention of the friends of high taxation to amuse the farmer by their diagrams their labor is lost. They can no longer fool him. After nearly forty years' wandering he is getting out of the wilderness and getting the wool out of his eyes.—Philadelphia Record.

Turning Against McKinley.

One year ago Major McKinley delivered a speech to the steel-workers of Mingo Junction from a platform built on steel bars, which were afterward rolled out and made into tin-plate at Irondale, and some of them taken and presented to Major McKinley, who was termed a public benefactor in the presentation speech. About three weeks ago the Irondale tin-plate men had to strike, but were compelled to accept a reduction after being in operation only six months. Mayor Scott, who presented the tin coffee-pot to McKinley, made from Irondale tin, has turned a picture of McKinley to the wall since McKinley interfered and sent the Eastern Ohio Insane Asylum into Stark County against the protests of all Eastern Ohio. He has written on the back of the picture, "Died in Steubenville, Sept. 7, 1892."

On the first anniversary of McKinley's speech, which was heralded all over the country, the men who were told how much the tariff benefited them received their first pay after a shut-down, and this pay was a reduction of wages. The men are asking, "How is this?" They are getting their eyes opened.—Pittsburg Post.

Kinder-Garten Tariff Lessons.

A simple little tariff lesson from the Baltimore Sun (Dem.): "The reason shoes are so cheap is that there is no tariff tax on imported hides. Sugar is cheaper because raw sugar is free of duty. The McKinley reciprocity plan is to say to foreign governments: 'If you refuse to reduce your duties on American manufactures and other things, we shall put a high tariff on your hides and sugar.' In other words, shoes and sugar shall be high to the people of the United States if foreign governments don't choose to alter their tariff laws to suit the President. Who gets punished? The people of the United States."

The Elwood Affair.

Political tin-making would doubtless have reached its high-water mark at Elwood, Ind., had not several untoward occurrences kept down the enthusiasm. In the first place, a pelting rain-storm set in, and though "thousands standing ankle-deep in mud," waited to see Gov. McKinley in his great act of dipping a foreign-made black plate in a bath of foreign tin, they were disappointed. The Governor made them several speeches, which "materially strengthened the feeling that Indiana will go Republican in November," but he dipped no tin. A year ago, it will be remembered, he dipped tin in Ohio, and thereby demonstrated to the dullest intelligence that the great industry was "established." Perhaps the reason he did not repeat his performance in Indiana was that he heard of the resolution of the Democrats to "attack the quality" of American tin, and distrusted his ability to produce an article beyond suspicion. But what the Democrats did attack was the value of the investment which some of them had been induced to make in the new tin-manufacturing company. One dissatisfied stockholder served notice on the Republican managers that if his money was not refunded by ten o'clock he should apply for a receiver. The alarmed political tin-makers took his stock off his hands, but that only brought another angry investor upon them, who threatened to auction off his stock from the very stand where McKinley was speaking. In fact, directly opposite the orator's eyes was a large poster signed by four stockholders, offering stock "at a discount." This was fully as depressing as the rain.

What all this tin politics masquerading as business is costing the public may be seen from facts brought out in a recent issue of the National Provisioner. It states that "fully 90 per cent." of the reported production has been in roofing plates—that is, terne plate which we were producing before McKinley's law was ever heard of, and which an obliging Treasury Department ruled might be included in the returns of the industry "treated" by the doubled tax. The same paper also quotes prices in the New York market for the present time compared with two years ago, as follows:

	Price, August, '90.	Price, Sept. 8, '92.
I. C. 20x28 charcoal terne:

Monuments to McKinleyism.

Numerous monuments are being erected every week to the memory of McKinley. On September 11 it was announced that four of the biggest paper bag factories in this country were about to form a trust. On September 12 the Philadelphia Record said that the new Wall Paper Trust had absorbed two more plants, and would, probably, soon gather in the only remaining two, after which the "squeezing process," so dear to the heart of every well-regulated monopoly, may be practiced upon the American public without let or hindrance. On September 15 the Sugar Trust, which has been raising prices rapidly lately, changed its quarterly dividends from 2 to 2½ per cent. Its present rate of profit is about 100 per cent. on its actual capital. On September 16 it was learned that the coffin trust was holding a jolly meeting, and intended to advance prices 10 per cent., because of the cholera. On September 16 it was learned that six or eight more of the large safe manufacturers outside of the Herring-Hall-Marvin safe trust were to form another trust, with $5,000,000 capital. On September 17, an extensive wheat combine was announced of elevator men, millers and railroad men, to deceive and swindle the farmers, merchants, and the public. The future historian will have no trouble in tracing the effects of McKinleyism.

Reciprocity Retaliation.

The lumberman, with his keen ax, has nearly reached the boundaries of profitable employment in Uncle Sam's dominions, and in a few years it will become necessary to draw on the almost untouched timber of the British Possessions. The importation of logs from Canada is already a considerable factor in the business of the Saginaw lumber district; and this is threatened by a proposition at Ottawa to reimpose an export duty on logs. Such an act of commercial hostility would injure the Dominion and cripple Canadian enterprise far more than it would hurt American lumber interests. While yielding little or no revenue, it would fan the smoldering fires of international contention into a fierce blaze, and complicate still further the problem of timber preservation, in a prosper solution of which the people of both countries are alike interested.—Philadelphia Record.

Another Protection Paradox.

The World has already demonstrated that the protective tariff has made the manufacturers of steel rails independent of the law of supply and demand. Although there is no demand for rails they are still held by the trust at $30 a ton—$4 more than was asked in 1885 when Bessemer pig was $3 cheaper—and $10 more than in England.

Mr Schoenhof now shows that in 1886 the cost of cotton in a pound of Lowell cloth was 10.695 cents, and that the total cost was 19.246 cents. Print cloth then sold at 3⅞ cents the yard; it now sells for 3½ cents. This is true notwithstanding a fall in raw cotton of 3½ cents a pound. The cost of production has fallen from 19.246 cents to 15.746, and yet the cost of a pound of cloth is now 2½ cents more than it was in 1886.

The has never been so full of paradoxes as since the McKinley act entered upon its eccentric career.—New York World.

Mayor Sargeant, of New Haven, Conn., who owns the largest factory in the State, employing nearly 2,000 hands in the making of hardware, admits the necessity of moving his plant to the West, for the sake of the saving on raw material, the duty on which has been materially enhanced by the McKinley tariff. Thus McKinleyism is supplementing the abandoned farm of the East with the abandoned factory site.—Philadelphia Record.

The Vermont farmers have awakened to the truth of Ben Butterworth's words, "The manufacturers and the trusts get the protection and the profits of the tariff; the farmer gets the husks and the humbug."—Philadelphia Record.

IF YOU CAN READ

and write, and are possessed of fair intelligence, you are fully qualified to make a grand success of what we offer you. We have lately published at great expense and labor a perfect wonder in the way of an illustrated Gift Book, suitable to all classes, an ornament to any home, and at a price that brings it within the reach of all, even those of moderate means. Heretofore only those who indulged in luxuries have felt that they could afford a book of this class, as they are sold in book stores at $5.00 and upwards. The book which we offer is not in any way inferior to those above referred to, but is far superior to hundreds of books of this nature that are sold at prices exceeding ours by an enormous per cent. It is selling with a rush wherever shown. Agents have only to show the book and mention the price, and it sells on its merits without further talking. No better Christmas, New Year's or Birthday present can be selected. It will sell, not only at holiday trade, but at all seasons of the year, for the reason that all will want it in their homes, and will have it as soon as they know the low price at which our agents can furnish them. Reader, if you need profitable employment, and a business in which you can and will take pride, as well as make money rapidly, do not fail to send for circulars containing private terms to agents and full information which will be sent FREE upon application. Old and new agents alike are making handsome salaries—yes, fortunes. Many of those who are making the best records are new at the agency business, having had no previous experience. Make a start—the field is entirely new. No such terms have been offered agents as we now offer on this wonderful book. Special qualifications not necessary, for it sells everywhere at sight. Perhaps you have at some time been unsuccessful at the agency business. If so, there is every reason why you should try this, the PRINCE of gift books, as failure is impossible if you make A START. Write us to-day, study our circulars and directions, then order an outfit and go to work with push and energy. You may make the greatest mistake of your life, if you allow this GOLDEN opportunity to pass unimproved.

A Tale of Adventure on a Louisiana Plantation.

BY MAURICE THOMPSON.

The tornado lasted but a few moments, then softened down to a mere gale, which continued for a half-hour. Lawrence found himself half buried under a heap of fragmentary things, branches, sticks, leaves and what not in the midst of fallen trees. He arose with difficulty, still holding Lucie, now limp and motionless, in his arms. The clouds were as black as ink and rushing low overhead. He could not see well enough to know whether she was living or dead.

Where was he? He tried to gaze around, but there was nothing in view save the vague outlines of splintered tree-poles, upturned roots and heaps of branches. In every direction his way was blocked. With a groan he sank to the ground, pillowing the girl's head on his knees.

"Lucie! Lucie!" he called, "speak to me, dear, speak. Are you hurt?"

Her heart was beating, but she did not move or speak.

Again the panther began to howl and rage; but another heavy throb of the gale seemed to force it into silence. The lightning was threading the clouds in the distance, and by the reflected light Lawrence saw how pale Lucie was.

The panther seemed to be whetting its teeth and lashing itself into ecstatic rage. It was so near that every movement of its feet and every stroke of its jaws when it opened and shut its mouth could be distinctly heard as the wind fell away.

The track of that hurricane is still to be seen in the hummock woods of the Teche country. It is a narrow opening, as straight and otherwise not unlike the line of a railway clearing. The young trees that have grown up in it are of different general form from those the wind destroyed, and the ancient forest walls on each side of it show that the irresistible current of the storm was less than 200 feet wide. Lawrence found himself on one edge of this path of destruction.

With amazing rapidity the clouds were swept on and away, leaving the sky clear and bright, with the moon swimming along white and brilliant amid the stars.

Trembling, nerveless, every bone in his body and limbs a center of pain, his flesh torn and bruised, the young man tried to push back the girl's tangled hair. He stooped and kissed her white brow; then, gathering force again, called loudly:

"Help! help! halloo! help!"

"But, Mars, I cayn't help nothin' ner nobody. Dey's er tree on de tip top o' my pusson, an' er hol'n' me down. I cayn't mobe," responded Tom, a negro of the place.

Lawrence yelled again and again, though each effort racked him with indescribable torture, so bruised and torn was he. Then the panther redoubled its cries and ripped the fallen branches with its claws.

Such a strain was not to be borne long. Lawrence struggled with fine courage and desperate resolution, but presently his eyes were blurred, his head reeled, and he fell over insensible.

It may have been the slight but decided shock to her head when, as Lawrence fainted, Lucie was let fall from his knees, or it may have been a mere coincidence between his failure and her revival; at all events, the girl lifted herself to a sitting posture, and, wavering weakly to and fro, gazed around with a pained, confused stare.

Not far away, in some low, sheltered tangle of greenery beyond the track of the wind a mocking bird ventured to trill faintly a phrase or two of its weirdly sweet nocturne.

The moon shone down through the awful rift in the forest upon the pallid and bewildered face of the girl.

"Oh! oh!" she cried! "Oh—oh, mother!" It was the call of child to parent, the old, old cry of helplessness, and it rang through the crushed wilderness with infinite pathos in its quaver.

She passed her hands across her face, tried to rise; looked down; then started and screamed. The upturned face of Martin Lawrence was gleaming strongly in the moonlight.

"Dat yo' Miss Lucie?" called Tom. "Dat yo' ober dar? Is yo' hurt, honey?"

"Tom! Oh, Tom, come, come! quick, quick!"

"Bress de Lor'!"

There was a sound of struggling muscles and tugging limbs. With the power of a giant the negro was wrenching himself from under the weight that held him down.

The panting snarls of the old man-eater were not so loud now; but they were terribly distinct.

Tom came stumbling and tumbling over logs and boughs and drifted heaps of debris toward the spot where Lucie sat.

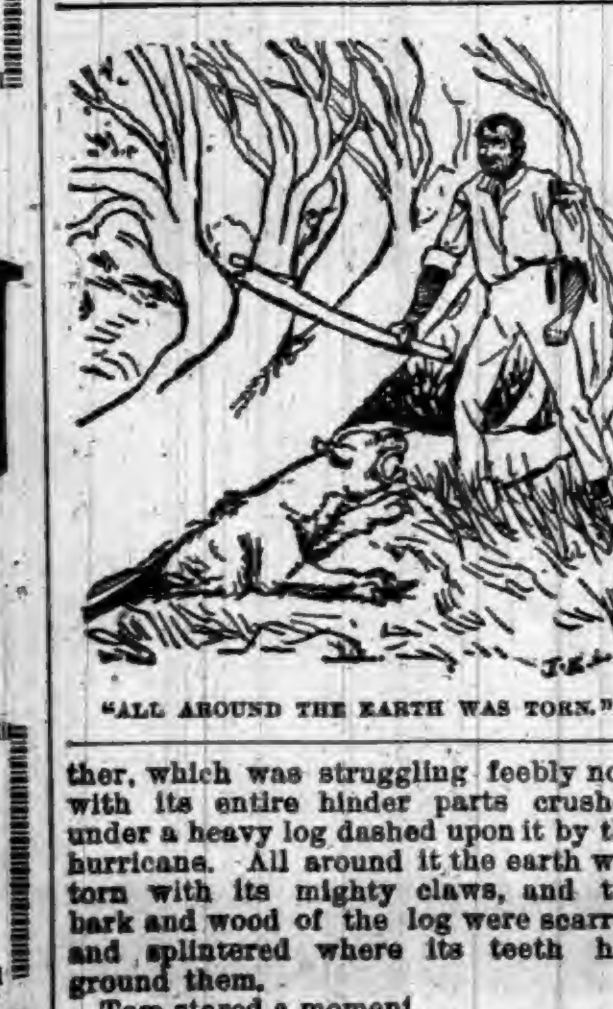
"Wha' is yo', honey? Wha' is yo' Miss Lucie?"

"Here, here, quick!"

"Look out fo' dat paynter! He close roun' yar."

As he spoke he flourished a heavy club (the fragment of a live oak limb thicker than a man's arm and four feet long) as if it had been a mere plaything. His face was distorted with furious excitement.

Just then his eyes fell upon the panther, which was struggling feebly now with its entire hinder parts crushed under a heavy log dashed upon it by the hurricane. All around it the earth was torn with its mighty claws, and the bark and wood of the log were scarred and splintered where its teeth had ground them.



"ALL AROUND THE EARTH WAS TORN."

Tom stared a moment.

"Oho! dat yo' is, yo' ole villyan!" he stormed forth. "Da' yo' is, is yo'! Got mo' 'an yo' kin carry dis yo' time, has yo'? Well, I jes' gwine fo' ter sorty help you out."

He raised the club with both hands and advanced.

A hoarse, gurgling howl of agony leaped from the foaming, gnashing mouth of the crushed brute. Tom dropped his club and retreated.

"Bress de Lor'!" he ejaculated. "I done fought yo' had me!"

His fright was but momentary, however, for he saw that the panther could not move. Then, with the activity of a squirrel and the muscular force of a giant, he lifted the bludgeon once more and leaped forward. The blow that he delivered echoed heavily around, and was followed by many more.

"Take dat, yo' ole villyan! Take dat fo' what yo' ben er doin' all dis time!"

He did not stop pounding away till every trace of life had left the huge beast.

CHAPTER III.

When Lawrence returned to consciousness he was resting on a low bed in one of the cabins of the negro quarter, and Lucie was bending over him. Many days had passed since the hurricane and meantime the young man had lain almost like one dead. He was bruised and cut from head to foot; but he had saved Lucie, whose courage and self-forgetfulness under all the terrible circumstances were wonderful. She had seen her mother buried after being rescued in a dying condition from the wreck of the mansion, and had gone on without faltering in the care of her lover, with the thought of her father all the time in her mind.

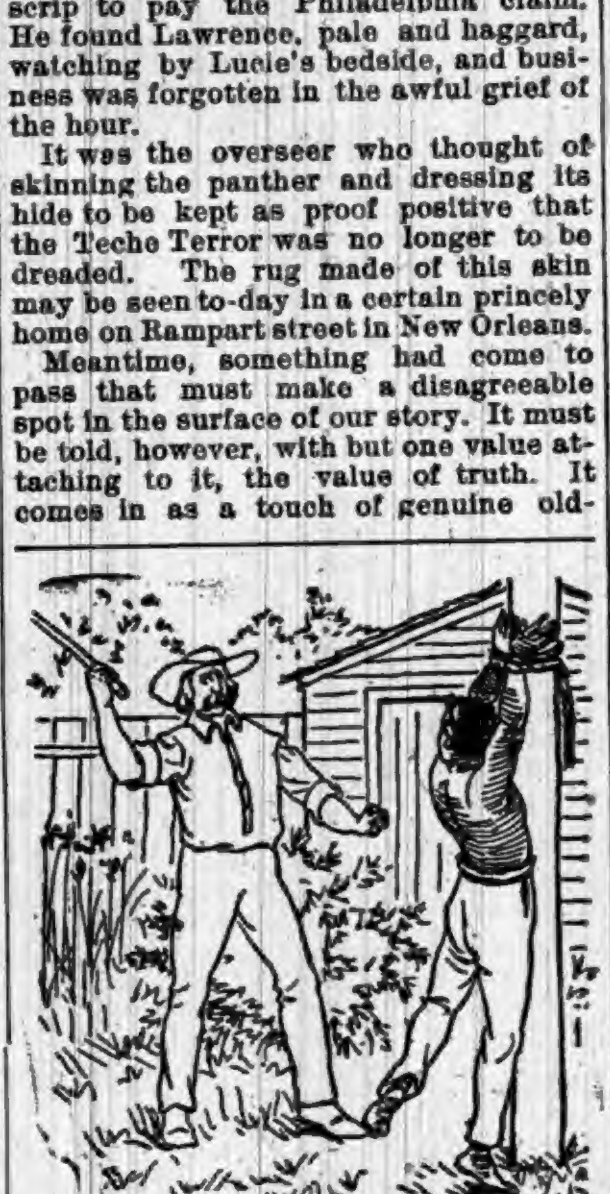
Lawrence convalesced very fast, but no sooner was he out of danger than Lucie's strength gave way and she fell ill.

Meantime one evening up rode Col. de Vigny, with Star still in fair condition, though a trifle lame. The Colonel had made the journey to New Orleans and back. He was indescribably grieved and broken up by the calamity that had befallen his household. Such pain as he must have suffered is best left untold, even if words could do it justice.

When he arrived he carried a small leathern saddlebag at the horn of his saddle—Lawrence's saddle, in fact—and in this he had brought gold and scrip to pay the Philadelphia claim. He found Lawrence, pale and haggard, watching by Lucie's bedside, and business was forgotten in the awful grief of the hour.

It was the overseer who thought of skinning the panther and dressing its hide to be kept as proof positive that the Teche Terror was no longer to be dreaded. The rug made of this skin may be seen to-day in a certain princely home on Rampart street in New Orleans.

Meantime, something had come to pass that must make a disagreeable spot in the surface of our story. It must be told, however, with but one value attaching to it, the value of truth. It comes in as a touch of genuine old-time color. It was discovered after the storm was over that the negro boy Tom had run away just before it, and in that way only was he on hand to aid in Lucie's and Lawrence's rescue. So without consideration for the succor he rendered, the overseer tied him up and gave him a severe flogging. Of course Tom begged and howled and said that he would never run away again, but the conscientious overseer abated not one lash of all the allotted number. Tom was an old offender, one that the phlegmatic functionary had marked down to be made a memorable example of for the benefit of the other negroes.



"GAVE HIM A SEVERE FLOGGING."

But we are slipping away from our story. Let us get back to the thread of it.

When Lucie was sufficiently recovered to bear the fatigue of travel, Col. de Vigney chartered a small vessel by which he transported his daughter and his household slaves to New Orleans. The plantation hands he sent through by land in the care of the overseer. Lawrence was permitted to ship himself and Star as a part of the vessel's cargo, but he saw that Col. de Vigny was not over hearty in according him that favor. The saddle-bag of money had been duly turned over to him, and the Colonel seemed more than willing to make this consummation the end of their familiarity, if not of their friendship.

Immediately on reaching New Orleans Lawrence and the de Vignys separated, and no quicker was she out of sight than the feeling stole into Lawrence's heart that he had lost her again. He tried to chaff at himself for giving room to such an idle fancy, but somehow it would not be puffed away. So unreal, in fact, seemed the experiences of the past few weeks, so out of the normal limit of life as it usually comes to men, that he scarcely felt that he could expect the final outcome to be anything but unusual. No doubt the condition of his health had much to do with the state of his imagination; moreover, a man in love is apt to take a distorted view of small matters when they connect themselves with the subject affecting his heart.

Lawrence toiled patiently through some intricate notarial affairs, and when everything necessary had been "signed, sealed, and delivered" he heaved a sigh of relief, went to his room, dressed himself with care, and calling a carriage ordered himself driven to the number given him by Lucie.

It was a solid and stately looking residence before which the carriage drew up. He thumped the door with its ponderous brass knocker, a trifle nervously, it must be said, and stood waiting. Strange that a man's heart should be so hard to control at such a time! Stranger still that his fancy should weave in spite of him a web of fantastic expectations!

A servant opened the door. Was Mlle. de Vigny in?

No, she was not in.

Where was she?

The servant did not know. She and her father had gone away, it was on a long journey—on a ship—to France, probably. The servant looked indifferent, his voice was inhospitable, but Lawrence pushed past him and went in.

"Tell your mistress," he said, "that I wish to see her."

A minute later a tall, serene-looking lady met him graciously, and informed him that Mlle. de Vigny and her father had sailed for France that very morning.

Lawrence caught a ray of subtle malignity darting from the narrow, placid eyes which were scanning him between their straight, moveless lashes.

"Madame," said he, "are you quite sure that they are gone?"

She lifted her brows a trifle, made some movement with her lips indicative of surprise mingled with polite contempt. When she spoke the effect of finality was perfectly conveyed by her voice.

"I am quite sure, monsieur; good-day."

The young man stood alone for a moment before going. Hat in hand, he looked down at the carpet and around the silent room, while his thoughts crushed themselves like a confused blur. A delicate waft of heliotrope touched his nostrils as it had on that day at the mountain hotel in Switzerland, and he felt as one might who should suddenly find himself left the sole inhabitant of the earth. A sense of enchantment, so to speak, gave absolute strangeness to the experience.

He turned and walked past the tidy, formal man servant out into the street, where his carriage was waiting. At the point of mounting into the vehicle he turned and cast his eyes over the stately facade of the house. At an upper window something white gleamed. It was a vision of beauty that followed, an apparition seen as if—

Through leagues of shimmering water like a star.

CHAPTER IV.

John A. Murrell and his influential coadjutors all through the Southwest had set up a state of affairs altogether anomalous. The history of mankind does not show another example of widespread and perfectly organized lawlessness to compare with it in boldness of design and accuracy of execution. Murrell appeared upon the scene in Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana a few years after Burr's scheme had come to naught, and he found that the arch conspirator, together with such men as Wilkinson on one hand and the La Fittes on the other, had educated a large constituency in the various branches of direct or indirect outlawry. This was just the wind for the great robber's sail, and how he utilized it is a matter of history. One effect of his organization was this: It became so formidable that even the officers of the law in many places were its tools, and the elections were controlled by it. Of course, a combination so powerful intimidated the good and fascinated the bad. No person was strong enough to combat alone an influence so secret, yet so bold, so widespread, yet invisible, so strong and yet so hard to discover. Men of otherwise spotless character were drawn into passive, if not active, relations with the robbers, and it soon came to pass that a large part of the commercial activities of the interior, especially those connected with New Orleans, were more or less controlled by Murrell and his men.

The coming of Martin Lawrence to New Orleans happened to touch a sensitive point in the circle of illegal operations, although the young man was wholly ignorant of the fact. At that time Murrell's kingdom was toppling to its fall. The attention of government had been attracted to his doings in such a way that he was finding it difficult to quiet the fears and retain the confidence of his less desperate adherents. Now the affair that Lawrence had come to look after was on its face a mere breach of faith—a mild form of shrewd swindle; but it connected itself with certain operations involving enormous sums of money, and affecting the honor and indeed, indirectly, the lives of some of the richest, most enterprising, influential, and highly respected men in the business circles of New Orleans.

The word went out, mysteriously if not electrically telegraphed through the city and country, that deep-laid plans were forming to expose and bring to grief the principal citizens who had directly or indirectly aided or abetted Murrell's schemes or shared his illegal gains. A quiet, terrible consternation seized many men who heretofore had lived in security and affluence.

Some who had gone no farther beyond the limit of propriety than to practice a little in the ways of the smuggler and the dealer in goods and chattels of questionable ownership were frightened almost to the point of offering themselves as state witnesses with the hope of securing pardon.

In as utter ignorance of all this as he was innocent of any ulterior design beyond securing his client's money and righting up some records that had been tampered with, Lawrence went about feeling that the very atmosphere around him was heavy with mystery.

When upon turning at the bottom of the step and looking up he saw Lucie at a chamber window, it scarcely surprised him, so rapidly was his mind accommodating itself to its strange surroundings. The girl made a sign to him to wait, and in a little time a note was placed in his hand by a little slave girl, who came round the outer wall of the court (which in those days was a part of almost every respectable creole residence in New Orleans), and furtively delivered it.

He glanced at the window again, only to be motioned away by Lucie.

Nothing was left to him but to jump into his carriage and order the driver to take him back to the hotel. He tore the note open with some impatience and read in French:

"DEAR MARTIN: Do not be rash. My father is not guilty. He is an honorable man; but his brother has drawn him into this thing unawares. Father fancies that you have a special desire to implicate and ruin him. Since the panther's death he seems to have shifted his monomania to the subject of being imprisoned, and he imagines that you are working to incarcerate him. If I could see you I could tell you a great deal which I cannot put upon paper; but they will not let me see you, and have foolishly thought to evade you by their silly story of our flight to Europe. Be patient and prudent, and ever believe me your loving LUCIE."

It did not take Lawrence long to arrive at the meaning of this, nor was he slow in setting Col. de Vigny's mind right, as nearly as that could be done, on the subject of arrest and imprisonment. Two or three stolen interviews with Lucie gave him the fullest knowledge of the situation, and showed him how to steer her father out of the complication.

Descendants of the Lawrence family—but, of course, that is not the real name—still live in New Orleans, where up to about the beginning of the war of the rebellion Martin Lawrence was a distinguished lawyer and politician, and where in the city's famous cemetery a noble tomb marks the resting place of him and his always lovely and loving wife.

ROBBERS SCARED OFF.

FOUR MEN ATTEMPT TO LOOT AN ERIE BANK.

They Enter at the Noon Hour and Cover the Two Officials Who Are at Their Desks, but When One Is Shot the Bandits Attempt to Escape.

All Are Captured.

Erie, Pa., special: An attempt was made to rob the Keystone National Bank here by four men. One of the bank officers was wounded and the prisoners were all captured. It was about 12:30 o'clock in the afternoon, and no customers were in the bank. Assistant Cashier Frank Kepler and Clerk Charles Liebel were busy balancing their books and counting money and checks when suddenly a quartette of tough-looking strangers burst into the room, revolvers in hand. The strangers took positions at each of the windows, around the desks within, and, pointing their revolvers at the heads of the two clerks, told them to throw up their hands.

Instead of doing as directed the cashier snatched up a paper weight and was about dealing the fellow nearest him a blow when two shots were fired by the intruders. One of the bullets struck Kepler in the left cheek, inflicting a serious but not dangerous wound. The young man fell fainting to the floor, and the robbers becoming frightened ran from the bank and fled up Eighth street.

Brandishing their revolvers they emerged from the bank, followed at least by 100 excited pursuers. "They have killed Frank Kepler; kill them; hang them," shouted the angry crowd as they came nearer and nearer to the fleeing men, but they drew back directly as the muzzles of four revolvers were threateningly pointed at them. The robbers ran west on Eighth street, hotly pursued by the citizens. Among them was John Ziedler, a machinist, who was fired at by one of the robbers, but escaped unhurt.

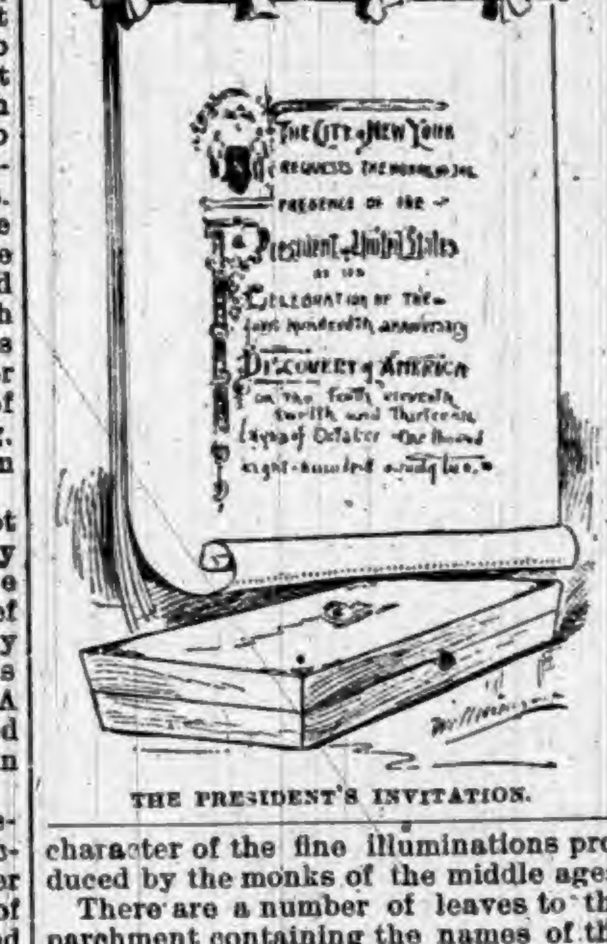
Special Officer William Doehrel run out and joined the crowd of pursuers. Hailing the driver of a passing wagon he jumped in and had the driver pursue the robbers, and finally got ahead of the fugitives. The officer then jumped out and with drawn revolver commanded the men to throw up their hands. The answer was a shot from a revolver by one of the desperadoes. As the officer was in the act of returning the fire the men thought better of it and surrendered. They were handcuffed together and marched to the police station and locked up in separate cells.

The prisoners gave their names as John Courtney and C. H. Hawley, of New York City, and Dan P. Evans and Charles W. Smith, of Syracuse.

THE PRESIDENT'S INVITATION

A Handsome Specimen of Richly Illuminated Scroll Work.

The invitation sent to President Harrison by the committee of one hundred to be present at New York's celebration of the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America, is a handsome specimen of richly illuminated scroll work. It is illuminated on parchment, size 18x12 inches, and is much after the character of the fine illuminations produced by the monks of the middle ages.



THE PRESIDENT'S INVITATION.

There are a number of leaves to the parchment containing the names of the committee of one hundred; they are tied with ribbons on an ivory bar, and rolled up in the ancient form in which parchments were put up. In this instance the parchment is incased in a handsome box of American ash, mounted with solid gold corners, hinges and lock; on the cover are mounted a raised gold head of Columbus and the figures 1492-1892.

DEPREDATIONS BY UTES.

Redskins Leave Their Reservation and Raid Ranches.

Gov. Routt, of Colorado, has received intelligence from the Yampah River country that the Utes had crossed the Colorado State line and were committing depredations. The telegram which conveyed this intelligence also stated that the settlers had become impatient and bloodshed might be expected at any time, inasmuch as great damage was being done and much game was being destroyed. Gov. Routt at once wired the agency at Uintah and also the department at Washington that unless the Indians were returned to their reservation he would not be responsible for their safety.

These Indians are from the Uintah Reservation in Utah, and they have been on a marauding tour through the northern portion of Routt County for several days. A short time since they were taken back to their reservation by the aid of couriers, but two weeks ago they returned and have been slaughtering and destroying game, leaving the carcasses of deer and elks where they dropped, taking the hides only.

For the past two years the stockmen in Routt County have been organized in anticipation of a raid, and their ability to cope with the regenades has just been proved. The Indians are in bunches of forty and fifty, and, as was their custom of old, tear down fences and turn their stock upon the fields of the ranchmen. Word of their coming was passed on up the Yampah and Snake Rivers, and as a result an armed force is opposing their advance. Lilly Park, Willow Creek, and the Maybell and Loy countries are well represented. No collision has yet occurred.

From information received by the Governor, it seems that the Indians were corralled to the number of fifty, under the leadership of Manuels, a sub-chief, who had been instrumental in driving a herd of cattle into the mountains. Deputy Indian Agent Tuttle then proceeded to the camp of Manuels and read a proclamation from Governor Routt, commanding them to return to their reservation. The proclamation was but a collection of vividly colored hieroglyphics on a large sheet of paper, but caused consternation in the camp of the Indians when they were told that it meant that the great war chief in Denver was on their trail. Hurriedly gathering their blankets they left. But they have since returned.

GANTER'S MAGIC CHICKEN CHOLERA CURE!

Thousands of dollars worth of chickens are destroyed by Cholera every year. It is more fatal to them than all other diseases combined. But the discovery of a liquid remedy that positively destroys the Microbes has been made. Half of the young chickens are killed by Microbes before they are fryers. A 50-cent bottle is enough for 100 chickens. It is guaranteed. If, after using two thirds of a bottle, you are not satisfied with it as a cure for Cholera, return it to the druggist from whom you purchased it, and he will refund your money.

MARYLAND ROASTER AND BAKER

IMPROVED

FOR MEATS, FOWL, FISH, ETC., AND FOR BAKING BREAD, CAKES AND PUDDINGS.

ROASTER & BAKER

BEST SIMPLEST AND CHEAPEST

THE STEAM produced by the process of cooking cannot escape, is absorbed by the article in the roaster, and acts as a basting. There is no evaporation, no drying up or burning, hence no shrinkage or loss of weight, and all the flavor and nutritious qualities of the food are retained. Tough meats are made tender, and any article roasted or baked will be sweeter, healthier and more digestible. Put the food in the roaster, place the roaster in a well heated oven; the roaster will do the cooking. It requires no attention. Can only be bought from dealers, the trade supplied by:

THE AUBURN COURIER

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, post-office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY........OCTOBER 6, 1892.

VOORHEES. AT AUBURN.

Indiana's favorite orator, the "Tall Sycamore of the Wabash," will speak at Auburn on the afternoon of

Thursday, October 20,

No man, of any party, can afford to miss hearing one of the very ablest men in the United States Senate. For many years Mr. Voorhees has ranked with the highest. All come.

HON. W. D. BYNUM of the Indianapolis district, will speak at Butler, Oct. 12, with Hon. W. F. McNagny, speaking in the evening. The famous Columbia City glee club will be present, and add interest to the occasion.

HON. W. F. McNAGNY will speak at Cedar Creek, on Friday, Oct. 21st, at 7 p. m. The democrats of that vicinity will raise a hickory pole that afternoon.

GIVE us reciprocity with nations that will buy farm products, not with those small nations that buy manufactures only.

SAN DIEGO celebrated the 350th anniversary of its discovery Sept. 28. Cabrillo, a Spaniard, sailed into the bay in 1542.

ALL sugar made in this country, is paid a half its value in bounty. Why not pay 35 cents bounty on each bushel of 70-cent wheat?

PROTECTION of a few, and not of all, is a fraud. Why is an eastern manufacturer better than we in the west and central states, are?

STATE elecsion in Florida, Tuesday, democrats won by nearly 20,000. Only two parties, democrat and people's party. The latter, polled only 7,000 votes in the state.

IF a protective tariff makes wages high, why are men in protected industries striking for higher wages? If it makes farm product high, why is wheat so low?

REPUBLICAN papers are running a picture of Stevenson making a speech and a confederate soldier cheering him. Was the latter, Mr. You, their candidate for congress?

SHELBYVILLE had a big meeting for the barbecue last week. The crowd is variously estimated at from 25,000 to 45,000. It was a grand time for democrats, but hard on 40 oxen and 90 sheep.

IT IS laughable to see the wry faces republican editors make over Cleveland's letter of acceptance. It cuts them to the quick, but as they cannot answer it, they make remarks about his long "sentences."

REPUBLICANS favor keeping out the products of other nations by a tariff, and then go about boasting of their little reciprocity scheme to let foreign products come in. If one plan is right, the other must be wrong.

JUDGE GRESHAM, will vote for Cleveland, is the latest sensation. It is also claimed that Wayne McVeagh, who was Garfield's attorney-general will do the same, as well as Judge Cooley, of Michigan. They are tired of the protection steal.

THE Waterloo Press boasts of a plate glass they have just put in at a cost of only $35, but which "cost $67 before a tariff was put on plate glass." And if there were no duty, we could get that same glass for not over $20. That is where the trouble comes in.

MUCH is claimed as to cheaper articles now under a tariff, as if a tax could make things cheaper. But things have gone still cheaper in England, where they are not taxed. What our people want is to allow goods to come down as cheap as in England, and as in Canada, right across the river from us.

REPUBLICAN papers are down on a "gerrymander" when a state is to be redistricted by a democratic legislature but no one ever heard them say a word against any republican gerrymander. In every state in the union where they have been in power, they have made the districts to favor them. Will they attempt to deny this?

REPUBLICAN papers are just now full of articles to prove that the more you tax a thing, the cheaper it gets. But they don't explain how it is that prices on these very things, have gone still lower, in those sensible countries in which they are not taxed. Take off the tax and let the price go still lower. That is what would do good.

IT IS claimed that the last amendment to the election law omitted to provide that a man from each party could come into the room and witness the counting of the ballots. If this is so we regret it not that it is of much value to anyone but it has always been a source of satisfaction to a few voters. We do not think it ever saved or lost a vote in DeKalb county, but it did no harm.

REPUBLICAN papers and orators are just now engaged in proving that the McKinley steal makes things affected cheaper, that it brings in more revenue while it reduces the revenue, increases imports and decreases imports, increases exports and decreases exports, raises the price of manufactured articles and lowers them. But the western people, especially the farmers go right on giving up their earnings to eastern capitalists, without complaint.

JUDGE NELSON, in his speech to the republicans, boasted of the "free trade" between the states of our union, but said that on the other hand the "states of South America had to pay duties from one to the other." He tried to deceive. The South American states are independent nations, while the states of our union are all under one government. As we don't wish to call Nelson a liar, we must say he was ignorant, and thought all South America was in one great union.

IT IS laughable to hear republican editors howl about the "democratic gerrymander of the state." The districts are not laid out fair, they say. But they are as fair, or much more so than the way republicans had them fixed when they had the power. And look at other states. When the democrats districted Wisconsin, Michigan and New York, what a fight the republicans made, yet it had been done exactly in the way they themselves had always done it. But they did not find out how illegal it was till now.

"HON. W. F. McNAGNY" says the Columbia City Post, "attended the tin plate rally at Elwood, last week," and then it proceeds to tell what he saw there.

"He found the place filled with Welchmen and every position that paid good wages was occupied by a gentleman fresh from the tin factories of the old world. These fellows receive from $3 to $5 a day, while the other laborers get from $1.25 to $1.40 per day. The girls and boys get from 50 to 75 cents a day. All told the employes numbered less than 100 persons."

From this it will be seen that this much advertised industry is not as valuable as half a dozen we have had in Auburn, that are neither protected nor have free advertising.

IT TURNS out to be a political scheme, republicans advising for the past two years that the state tax levy be raised, and as soon as it went into operation, begun to cry against it, and to make it odious by putting on high levies in all places where republican officers had the power. All of these increases except for the state were, not needed, but it burdened the people with a million or so unnecessary taxes in order to help republicans win a vote or two. Democratic officers generally ran the local levies down so the people would not be burdened with more tax than was needed. In DeKalb county, our democratic commissioners reduced the tax rate over one-half so as to be sure the new law would work no injustice.

OLD soldiers are being bored by republican political sharks sending them all sorts of bloody shirt literature. We have been shown two of these precious documents, by two different veterans, each of whom considers it an insult to their intelligence. There is a vast amount of this sort of stuff which we presume any old soldier, no matter how extreme a republican he may be, will read with disgust. We think that a party, running a confederate soldier for a high office, would be wise to keep a discreet silence on the old war issues. But republicans have no issues they can defend, or dare to defend, and are relying altogether on deception and false issues.

THE Dispatch laments greatly that Weaver, the people's party candidate for president, was "egged" at one of his meetings down in Georgia, and thinks democrats are very bad to do such ruffianism. We thought so four years ago, when republicans right here in civilized Auburn, "egged" our residence, and that of W. B. Brown, C. M. Merica, John Butt, and a number of other prominent democrats. But we do not remember that the Dispatch ever even reproved its partisans gently. The same year, republicans at Laporte "egged" a democratic procession, as it marched through the streets. The writer of this heard Senator Turpie, many years ago, make a speech from the south steps of the court house in Laporte, and when near its close, some villian in the crowd, shied eggs at the speaker, and barely missed him, some of them striking some ladies near him. If anyone doubts this, ask Senator Turpie when you see him next time. He has not forgotten the insult. Oh, no, democrats down south are very wicked if they throw eggs. Let us first remove the beam from our own eyes nearer home.

Children Need Sleep.

Children, until they are twelve or thirteen years old, should have at least ten hours sleep, eleven is better; until eighteen or nineteen, nine hours is none too much, writes Mrs. Scovil in her valuable department, "Mothers' Corner," in the October Ladies' Home Journal. In this country our children inherit nervous temperaments. No hygenic measure soothes, quiets and strengthens the nerves like plenty of sleep. Children should never be wakened in the morning. Yet the demands of household convenience and the claims of school make it necessary that they should be out of bed at a certain hour, usually not later than seven. To make this possible, and give them their fair share of sleep so that they will be ready to waken of their own accord, they must be in bed between eight and ten, according to their ages. If bedtime is made pleasant to them, as mother love can make it, with a story, a little talk over the events of the day, with loving words and ministrations, the hardship of banishment to bed will be robbed of most of its bitterness.

Save Your Eyes.

Don't ruin your eyes, by wearing improper glasses, or those not properly fitted. Get an experienced and skillful man to fit them to your eyes. So wait till C. J. Porter, the Waterloo optician, comes to Auburn. He will be at the Hollister House, the first Tuesday in each month. Don't forget the date.

WANTED, FOR THE UNITED STATES ARMY, able-bodied unmarried men between the ages of 21 and 30 years. Good pay, rations, clothing, and medical attendance. Applicants must be prepared to furnish satisfactory evidence as to age, character and habits. Apply at 4th floor, Bass Block, Calhoun street, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Notice of Final Settlement of Estate.

Notice is hereby given to all creditors and persons interested in the estate of I. N. Askew deceased, to appear in the DeKalb Circuit Court, held at Auburn, Indiana, on the 24th day of October, 1892, and show cause, if any, why my FINAL SETTLEMENT ACCOUNTS with the estate of said decedent should not be approved; and said heirs and all others interested are notified to then and there make proof of heirship or claim and receive their distributive shares.

Witness my name this 3d day of October, 1892.

The County Board of Education met last Friday. The leading matters brought before them was the Columbian National holiday school celebration, and the collection of work for the World's Fair Educational Exhibit. One of the things recommended by joint action of the national senate and house of representatives and also in President Harrison's proclamation, as was seen in last week's issue of the Courier, was that the stars and stripes should on this national holiday, float over every school house throughout the land. The board widely differed in their opinions both as to the propriety of having flags placed on the school houses and as to the manner of securing them. One or two did not feel the project worthy of any special effort. Others would like to see the flags on the school houses of their townships but thought it proper for the people of the respective districts to procure them while others again determined to have no delay, but have the flags floating over their school houses on the 400th anniversary of the discovery of this great country and will purchase them out of the funds of the township. It was evident in most, at least, of the townships that the flags will be secured either by township or by private enterprise and patroitism, and placed upon the school houses on the great National School and Civic Celebration Day Oct. 21.

Ex Commissioner Ed. Kelham was here Saturday. He says that commissioners Hoffelder and Henderson did just right on that bridge matter. When he was commissioner he examined the question fully, and found that the interest on the extra money required to build stone abutments and iron bridges would be enough to build a new bridge every five years. This is the same conclusion arrived at by the present democratic members. Mr. Kelham received one of those "postal cards" but did not answer "build stone." He had all the facts before him.

A happy group of lads went over to St. Joe Saturday. They were Mrs. Sylvester Zimmerman's class of the M. E. Sunday school, including Johnny Richards, Charlie Borst, Hugh Harter, Eddie Baker, Frank Gregg and Paul Wooton. The boys nearly wore out the old St. Joe running boats across it. They could hardly stop for dinner, they enjoyed the sport so much. And when they started home, they were ever so sorry and kept wishing it was early morning again. Mrs. Zimmerman took her husband and her daughter Minnie and Nellie Barns along to help entertain the lads, but no help was needed. The boys took care of themselves, and we might add, behaved nicely, as was proper they should.

The people of Avilla are preparing for a grand celebration of the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus. It begins on Wednesday, October 12, and continues four days. On Wednesday morning occurs the blessing of the three large new bells on St. Mary's Catholic church by Very Rev. J. H. Brammer, Vicar General of the Diocese of Ft. Wayne. At 2 p. m., a grand patriotic parade, representing scenes in our country's history; followed by addresses by Ex-Governor Porter. Hon. P. S. O'Rourke, Hon. Judge Zollars, W. W. Sharpless, Esq., and others. In the evening a monster torchlight procession and fireworks, and opening of the merry Columbian festival at the hall. Special trains and low rates. Everybody should be present and stay all day.

John Olinger was coming down Main street last Thursday evening, when his horse became frightened by a bicycle coming up behind them, and jumped, breaking the belly band. The horse was a powerful one, and with the buggy striking against him, and the shafts flying up in the air, could not be controlled, and finally Mr. Olinger had to jump out. The horse kept furiously down the street, turned west at the Kiblinger corner, and fell, close to the Courier stairs. As he got up, a man made a gallant spring at him, caught him by the head and neck, and hung to him and he was stopped. But little damage was done, but had he run on west, some team or person would have suffered.

Obituary.

Margaret Susan Eargood was born March 30, 1891, died Oct. 3, 1892, aged 1 year, 6 months and 3 days. She has gone to join little Eddie in Heaven, who was buried Sunday, Oct. Funeral services conducted by Rev. J. W. Stringfellow, from the house Oct. 5th. This leaves a large gap in the home circles of this once happy family. Innocence was given as a sacrifice to the demands of death. The parents have the sympathy of the community in their sad bereavement.

Skedaddled.

Jim Shyner, the baker who has been doing the baking for H. J. Mossey, left for parts unknown, last Saturday, without informing his employer of his intentions. And Mr. Mossey did not learn of his departure until about five hours afterwards. This placed him in a peculiarly unpleasant position on Monday. Customers came in for the usual amount of bread, pies, cakes, etc., but could not be accommodated. However, on Tuesday, he had secured the services of a good baker, and can now supply his many patrons with the best bread, pies and cakes.

As a distorter of statistics, Mr. Harrison takes the cake.

The Hat and the Rat may have to do without the fat this year.

Curley-haired Chairman Harrity will make Mr. Harrison's hair curl some before the campaign is over.

Mr. McKinley doesn't tell everybody that Mr. Carnegie's employes have been working for fourteen cents an hour.

All of our infant industries appear old enough to support millionaires, with a few baronical castles, at home and abroad, thrown in.

Mr. Harrison is not "whooping up" reciprocity at any great rate. It was made for a tail to a larger kite than any he has wind enough to raise.

Suppose the foreigners should organize a conspiracy and decline to pay the tax any longer, where would this poor country be?

The Western Democrats are contesting every inch of ground in their respective States, and never before did victory seem so fully assured.

Chauncey Depew was allowed to land without disinfection. When the New York Republicans are sick at the stomach in November, they will know who to blame for it.

Republican consistency is illustrated in the fact that they expect the tariff reform record of their gubernatorial ticket in Minnesota to carry their electoral ticket in that State.

The McKinley bill was to give employment to more men at better wages. It has produced strikes, lockouts and discontent and incidentally a long row of new graves near Pittsburg.

Senator Sawyer handed the Republican committee a check for $20,000 the other day, with the bright Republican remark: "The Democrats carry Wisconsin? Not while I have a bank account."

When an American imports a suit of clothes he is taxed 80 per cent., and this tax is added to cost. The cost of an everyday suit of woolen clothes without the tax would be $7. The cost with the tax is $12.60.

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "The number of Democratic papers who sneer at 'Commissioner Peck's valueless report' is increasing. But what would they have said if Peck had perverted the facts to agree with the Democratic platform?" No perversion was necessary to sustain the Democratic platform. But why defend any perversion?

Republican organs maintain a discreet silence regarding the plank in their platform which declares that Republican policy demands the levy of tariff taxes only to an extent that will compensate for the difference between wages at home and abroad. If some organ would explain what item in the McKinley bill illustrates this principle it would serve its party more than in daily repetition of demonstrated falsehoods.

The Republicans have discovered that the Australian ballot has destroyed an American industry. The men in Maine and Vermont who were annually employed to see that the men hired to vote for the Republican ticket fulfilled their contract were idle this year. Hence the demand for a repeal of the Australian system, which is denounced as a Democratic device to ruin Republicans.

Senator Hale wants a Senatorial committee appointed to inquire into the effect of a tariff for revenue only upon the wages of American workingmen. Not much! There is one Senatorial investigating committee which has been sleepily investigating the effect of the McKinley law on prices ever since one can remember without bringing in a report. Senator Hale should remember that scientists say that the world will end in 10,000,000 years.

The Republicans blame the Australian ballot system for the reduction of their majority in Vermont. It did not reduce the Democratic majority in Arkansas; so it appears that Republicans, North as well as South, lose by the introduction of this method of voting. Such being the case, with what feelings must the g. o. p. contemplate the possibilities in thirty States yet to vote in the same way.

St. Louis Republic: The Iowa Republicans may get up a fusion with the People's party, but the Democrats of that State go right along fusing with the people themselves.

Why doesn't somebody corner the Hon. William McKinley and persuade him to talk a little anent the Homestead incident? His candid views on the subject of cheap men in dear coats would be entertaining if not refreshing at this season.

The squirming of the Republican press to crawl out from beneath the Maine "slump" is certainly amusing. The Chicago Inter Ocean, for instance, which, on the day following the election, explained that the Republicans had made a most vigorous canvass of the State, is now explaining that they didn't do any such thing.

Accepting the New York Tribune's estimate of the governmental expenses for 1892 as correct, we find that under Harrison the average an- expenditures have been $342,000,000, while under Cleveland they were $259,000,000, or about $83,000,000 less. It is proper to remark that Mr. Harrison and a Republican Senate could at any time have cut down expenses, if they had desired.

The Republican managers in Vermont attribute the heavy Republican loss in that State at the recent election to the introduction of the Australian system. No doubt this did have something to do with it. There is more illiteracy in Vermont than in any other Northern State, and naturally it has the largest Republican majority. Naturally enough, also, this majority is cut down by the adoption of a ballot law which taxes to some extent the intelligence of voters. It is significant that the Democratic vote shows no falling off under the new ballot sytem, but instead a slight increase.

A comparison of Peck's pretended statistics with those furnished by the Labor Commissioner of Massachusetts shows some startling differences. If we assume that both reports are correct, we must admit that the average yearly earnings of workmen engaged in making agricultural implements were $654 in New York and $498 in Massachusetts. A boot and shoe maker earned $423 in New York and $513 in Massachusetts. In woolen goods the average earnings were $530 in Massachusetts and $413 in New York. These figures are for 1890. Other trades show similar discrepancies. If such great differences existed in adjoining States under the same tariff, it is evident that they were not due to protection; if they did not exist, then the data in one or the other case, or both, are worthless.

"The Republican party is united," says a Republican organ. Why, yes; the Republican party thinks the McKinley tariff is the most comprehensive measure of protection ever enacted, and also that it disappointed the just expectations of those who in 1888 asked for and were promised a relief from public burdens, thereby bringing on the disasters of 1890. They believe that the force bill is absolutely necessary to Republican success in the future, and must be passed at all hazards, and also that it is the most infamous measure that ever passed the portals of the United States Senate. They believe in free silver, and also in a circulation based on gold alone. They believe in the Sherman silver act of 1890, and also favor its repeal. Oh, yes; the Republicans are united—on the platform of Webster Flanagan, "What are we here for, unless for the offices?"

One of the firms principally benefited by the sugar bounty is an English concern, the Medicine Lodge Sugar Company, owning a big factory in Kansas. This firm expects to claim bounty on $1,500,000 pounds of sugar next time the bounty is divided, which will give it $30,000. The absurdity and injustice of the bounty system is nowhere more strikingly shown than in this instance of paternalism, which takes $30,000 out of pockets of the consumers of sugar in America and pays it over to a foreign corporation whose only claim upon Americans is that it provides employment at the lowest market rates for a number of workmen, who might themselves own and cultivate as independent farmers the broad acres surrounding the factory, but for the system of which the bounty is a part. It is a curious fact that if it were quite impossible to raise a single pound of sugar in the United States, sugar would be several cents a pound cheaper than it is under present conditions, and the millions thus saved to the consumers might go far towards giving profitable employment to the underpaid labor of the sugar trust.

THE TWO OLD PARTIES.

THERE IS NO SIMILARITY BETWEEN THEM.

The Republican Party Is the Party of Monopoly, While the Democratic Party Is the Party of the Common People—Republican Losses.

A Wide Difference.

The statement that there is practically but little difference between the Democratic and the Republican party is sometimes put forward in such a way as to command the assent of superficial thinkers, but nothing can be farther from the truth. What our somewhat vociferous friends of the third party really mean by it is this: The Democratic party is inflexibly opposed to all rash and ruinous experiments in legislation; the Republican party is opposed to some such experiments; therefore the two parties are just alike. The fallacy of this reasoning is apparent as soon as it is formulated.

As to the tariff, it is urged that the Democrats contend for rates of duty only a trifle lower than those fixed by the Republicans. The difference in rates is really much greater than is represented; but even if it were not, the argument would be of no value. The controversy is not primarily over the question whether the tariff rate shall be high or low. That enters into consideration, of course, but it is a secondary matter. All our people, with exceptions comparatively insignificant in numbers, admit that a large part of our revenue must be raised by duties on imports. What these duties must be to raise sufficient revenue depends upon the amount of revenue to be raised. When the war brought extraordinary expenditures, higher rates were imposed with little opposition, because the need for more revenue was generally recognized. When the necessity for rates so high was over, Democrats insisted on a reduction. These reductions were not conceded, except grudgingly, upon articles not made in this country. Republicans insisted on such a manipulation of tariff rates as would best foster monopolies; the Democrats upon an adjustment of duties that would destroy the exactions of trusts. So far from conceding this just demand the Republicans, in passing the McKinley bill, put up rates in order to reduce the revenue; that is, while reducing taxation for public purpose they increased taxation for private purposes.

The Democratic party holds the impregnable position that unnecessary taxation is unjust taxation. It believes in taxation for revenue only. The Republican party advocates a tariff for private purposes; that is, a tariff to protect its pet capitalists at the expense of the people at large. These two positions are as wide apart as the poles. They represent distinct extremes of sentiment. The one prefers the people to the monopolies; the other aggrandizes the monopolies at the expense of the people."

This difference extends into other matters. When our surplus revenue became a menace to public prosperity, the Democrats sought to reduce taxation. The Republicans, unwilling to do this, went upon a voyage of discovery to find new pretexts for squandering public money, in order that they might have an excuse for high taxes. They swelled the pension roll to a fabulous extent. They gave bounties to ocean steamships and to sugar producers. They refunded taxes levied thirty years ago. They agreed to pay claims that originated a century ago, and that were rejected as baseless for eighty years after they were first presented. They projected all sorts of wild schemes for wasting money, and carried so many of them through that large appropriations must prevail for many years to come. It has been shown that at least eighty millions of the appropriations made by this Congress were forced upon it by the legislation of the last.

With reference to elections, the Democratic party contends for free ballot and a fair count as strenuously as the Republicans, and with much greater sincerity. But the Republicans assert that fair elections cannot be had without partisan returning boards entirely free from the control of the people. Circuit Judges of the United States, all Republicans but two, are to appoint Supervisors to hold office during life, and these are to appoint Inspectors of elections. The local authorities may appoint as many officers as they please, but to what end? The count of the Federal Inspectors must always be received. The Democrats believe that the local authorities should manage their own elections. They insist on retaining the feature of responsibility to constituencies. They want no aristocracy holding office for life without responsibility to the voters.

This line of division may be extended indefinitely. The Democratic party is the party of the plain people, of local control of local concerns, of equal justice to all, of economy in expenditures, of such taxation as is imperatively needed and no more. The Republican party is the party of monopoly, of special privileges to special classes, of centralization, of profuse expenditures and bounties to party favorites. It is said, indeed, that the Fifty-second Congress has been extravagant. This is not the place to discuss the question, but mark the contrast. The Fifty-first Congress was extravagant, and it was applauded for it by Republicans. The Fifty-second Congress has made large appropriations, and it has been denounced for it by Democrats without even waiting to determine whether it could have made them smaller. The spirit and tendency of the two parties are shown by these facts, and by the further fact that the appropriations of a Democratic House were largely increased, as they had frequently been before, by a Republican Senate.

One of these two parties will elect a President this year. No other party has the ghost of a chance to do so. The elector who does not wish to throw away his vote must choose between taxation for public purposes and taxation to foster monopolies; between economy and extravagance; between government by the people and government by monopolies—in short, between democracy and aristocracy. — Courier-Journal.

Republican Losses.

The Republicans have lost ground in every election since Harrison's inauguration. The elections of 1889 and 1890 are in line with the elections in Vermont and Maine this year. Whether the voting is done North or South, East or West, it is the same story of Republican losses. Thus in Vermont the Republicans lose nearly 20 per cent. of their vote of 1888. In Maine they lose heavily on their vote of 1890, and Reed, who was elected in 1890 by a plurality of 4,827, now gets in with less than 2,000. The same ratio of comparative losses in other States would, of course, defeat Harrison overwhelmingly, but Democrats must not rely on such considerations as this. The Republicans will work desperately from this time on to get out their vote. They have examined the returns of 1890 and found that their overwhelming defeat in that year was due, taking the average for the whole country, to their losses rather than to any marked Democratic gains. Though in 1890 the Democrats did make marked gains in many localities, yet, taking the country through, they polled considerably less than their vote of 1888. But where one Democrat failed to vote in 1890 four Republicans refused to vote. That election, in which the Republican party sustained the worst defeat ever administered to any party in America, was controlled by the stay-at-home vote. And the Republicans realize now that the fate of Harrison is to be decided in the same way. They will leave nothing undone to get out their vote, believing that if they do it the Democrats can show no gains to overcome it.

Outside of Illinois, Wisconsin, and one or two other States there is no indication of any great amount of change going on between the two great parties. Where there is defection from one party or the other, it is generally to one of the "Third" parties, and it is therefore probable that the party which now polls its popular vote of 1888 will win easily. We do not believe Harrison can poll his party strength or within 10 per cent of it, but the Democrats must rely on nothing short of their full vote.

A 100 per cent. Democratic vote will surely elect Cleveland. We want all the converts we can get now and at all times, but the point in this campaign is to get every Democrat to the polls.

A Campaign Industry.

Coincident with the opening of a political campaign there is a revival of the tin-plate industry, under the stimulus of partisan necessity and the tariff tax of 2 cents per pound. In the seven-by-nine lean-tos, wherein have been stored the tin-plate machinery for the manufacture of campaign lies and badges, the fires have been rekindled and arrangements made for the appearance of the great apostle of tin plate, the Governor of Ohio, and author of the bill which has received Republican baptism as "protection-run-mad." And the organs have taken up the old cry. They prate of "tin-plate liars," in blissful unconsciousness of the fact that they use the term by which they are known among intelligent readers of their sheets. The junior Republican organ deserves notice and rebuke for its iteration of wornout falsehoods. It makes unfortunate comparison of the alleged Democratic tin-plate liar with the author of the famous Morey letter. The latter was alleged to have been the production of Democrats, and Republican perjurers paid some $6,000 as a penalty for a campaign slander upon an innocent victim of their malice.—Chicago Times.

Promise and Performance.

Mr. Blaine, October 14, 1891: "Germany, without negotiating a formal treaty, has removed the prohibition on pork, and our Government, in consideration thereof, has left her sugar on the free list. This opens to us an entirely new market, and $15,000,000 or $20,000,000 of American pork will be consumed per annum where not a pound has been taken for ten years."

Mr. Harrison, September 5, 1892: "Partly by reason of the reciprocal trade agreement, but more largely by reason of the removal of sanitary restrictions upon American pork, our export of pork products to Germany increased, during the ten months ending June 30, $2,025,074."

* * * * * *

Senator Allison, January 16, 1889: "We have assurances, and believe from examination and investigation, that within the time fixed for the taking effect of this bill, less than one year (i. e., July 1, 1892), there will be in this country a sufficient plant to manufacture all the tin plate we use (678,000,000 pounds). I have no doubt of it."

President Harrison, September 5, 1892: "The official returns to the Treasury Department of the production of tin and terne plates in the United States during the last fiscal year show a total production of 13,240,830 pounds."

The Contest in New York.

There is no shuffling or evasion in the speech with which Senator Hill declared his position in the New York campaign. As far as a single speech can do it this speech set him right with the Democratic party, and to remain right with it he has only to prove his good faith by his works.

The New York campaign is no longer in the confused condition it was immediately after the nominations were made. Platt is "in line" for Harrison, as much placated, no doubt, as is Senator Hill. It would be idle to say that either of them is enthusiastic. Either would doubtless be able to say, "I told you so," without any bitter pang of regret in the event of the defeat of his candidate. Doubtless Platt's friends will "knife" Harrison to some extent, and it is not expected that all of those who call themselves "Hill men" will vote for Cleveland. If we conclude that one "Hill man" or one "Platt man" in every ten will "knife," we will be somewhere near the truth of what may be expected to happen. In the main, however, both the Platt men and the Hill men will support the candidates of their respective parties. If the followers of either Hill or Platt had not been inclined to accept the party ticket, neither Hill nor Platt would have been placated. They support the nominees because they would lose nearly the whole of their following and all their influence if they did not.

It is now clear that outside of the inevitable knifing and vote-selling in some of the city wards, there will be little crossing of party lines in New York. In both parties there is a dissatisfied element, which is likely to express its dissatisfaction by staying away from the polls, but in the Democratic party this element is always small when the Democratic candidate is not in office, and when he is a candidate against an opponent who is in office, making use of his official authority to perpetuate himself in power. An issue of this kind is always favorable to Democratic success, because the spirit of opposition to an administration attempting to perpetuate itself by the abuse of official authority for private and partisan ends is strong in all Democrats.

In New York the Republicans will probably have five stay-at-home voters for every stay-at-home Democrat. The Democrats will poll both the Democratic and the Independent vote, while for the Republicans there is no re-enforcement in sight, and their "Blaine Irish" will be a dead loss to them.

The Republican plurality of 1888 was 13,002 on a vote of 635,757 for the Democrats, 648,759 for the Republicans and 30,231 for the Prohibitionists. In 1891 the Democratic vote was 582,893, the Republican 534,956, the Prohibitionist 30,353. This gives a Democratic plurality of 47,937. The Prohibitionists this year will poll their usual vote of 30,000, and if the Democrats poll 635,000 as in 1888 they are likely to have at least 30,000 plurality. Net losses for the Republicans on their vote of 1888 are certain, while the Democrats have a reasonable hope of net gains. The party that polls its vote of 1888 will carry New York. The Republicans have no prospect of doing it, while it is entirely possible that Mr. Cleveland's New York vote will exceed the phenomenal vote of 1888.—St. Louis Republic.

Stand By the Platform.

Senator Hill at Brooklyn:

"I am not here to apologize for that plank (the tariff plank). I am here to advocate and defend it. It correctly and substantially states the Democratic faith. I am aware that a concerted effort is being made by our opponents to make it appear that a new departure has been entered upon, and that our party has abandoned its former conservative position on the tariff question and assumed another and bolder attitude, leading absolutely toward free trade. I do not so regard it. Some of us might have preferred a little different phraseology, but as a whole it sufficiently expresses our position with reasonable clearness and accuracy."

FOR COLUMBIAN DAY.

PROGRAMME FOR EXERCISES IN THE SCHOOLS.

Prepared by the National Executive Committee of the Educational Superintendents for the Columbian Public School Observance on October 21.

The Official Programme.

Following the recommendations in President Harrison's proclamation, that the public schools of the country appropriately observe Columbus day, the superintendents of education have instructed their executive committee to prepare an official programme of exercises to be used in every school in America on Columbus day, simultaneously with the dedicatory exercises in Chicago.

The following is the programme prepared:

The schools should assemble at 9 a. m. in their various rooms. At 9:30 the detail of veterans is expected to arrive. It is to be met at the entrance of the yard by the color guard of pupils, escorted with dignity to the building and presented to the principal. The principal then gives the signal, and the several teachers conduct their pupils to the yard, to drumbeat or other music, and arrange them in hollow square about the flag, the veterans and color guard taking places by the flag itself. The master of ceremonies then gives the command, "Attention!" and begins the exercises by reading the proclamation.

1. Reading of the President's proclamation. By the master of ceremonies.

At the close of the reading he announces, "In accordance with this recommendation by the President of the United States, and as a sign of our devotion to our country, let the flag of the nation be unfurled above this school."

2. Raising of the flag. By the veterans.

As the flag reaches the masthead the veterans will lead the assemblage in "Three Cheers for 'Old Glory.'"

3. Salute to the flag. By the pupils.

At a signal from the principal the pupils, in ordered ranks, hands to the side, face the flag. Another signal is given; every pupil gives the flag the military salute—right hand lifted, palm downward, to a line with the forehead and close to it. Standing thus all repeat together slowly, "I pledge allegiance to my flag and the republic for which it stands; one nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all." At the words "to my flag" the right hand is extended gracefully, palm upward, toward the flag, and remains in this gesture till the end of the affirmation, whereupon all hands immediately drop to the side. Then, still standing, as the instruments strike a chord, all will sing "America"—"My country, 'tis of thee."

4. Acknowledgment of God. Prayer or Scripture.

5. Song of Columbus day. By pupils and audience.

6. Address. "The Meaning of the Four Centuries."

A declamation of the special address prepared for the occasion by the Youth's Companion.

7. Ode. "Columbia's Banner."

A reading of the poem written for the occasion by Edna Dean Proctor.

Here should follow whatever additional exercises, patriotic recitations, historic representations or chorals may be desired.

8. Address by citizens and national songs.

COLUMBUS DAY ADDRESS.

Prepared by the Youth's Companion for Delivery in the Schools.

The following is the address, "The Meaning of the Four Centuries," prepared by the Youth's Companion for use in connection with the above programme:

The spectacle America presents this day is without precedent in history. From ocean to ocean—in city, village, and countryside—the children of the States are marshaled and marching under the banner of the nation, and with them the people are gathering around the school house.

Men are recognizing to-day the most impressive anniversary since Rome celebrated her thousandth year—the 400th anniversary of the stepping of a hemisphere into the world's life; four complete centuries of a new social order; the celebration of liberty and enlightenment organized into a civilization.

And while during these hours the Federal Government of these United States strikes the keynote of this great American day that gives honor to the common American institution which unites us all, we assemble here that we, too, may exalt the free school that embodies the American principle of universal enlightenment and equality, the most characteristic product of the four centuries of American life.

Four hundred years ago this morning the Pinta's gun broke the silence and announced the discovery of this hemisphere.

It was a virgin world. Human life hitherto upon it had been without significance. In the old world for thousands of years civilized men had been trying experiments in social order. They had been found wanting. But here was an untouched soil that lay ready for a new experiment in civilzation. All things were ready. New forces had come to light full of overturning power in the old world. In the new world they were to work together with a mighty harmony.

It was for Columbus, propelled by this fresh life, to reveal the land where these new forces were to be given space for development, and where the awaited trial of the new civilization was to be made.

To-day we reach our most memorable milestone. We look backward and we look forward.

Backward we see the first mustering of modern ideas; their long conflict with old world theories, which were also transported hither. We see the stalwart men and brave women one moment on the shore, then disappearing in dim forests. We hear the ax. We see the flame of burning cabins and hear the cry of the savage. We see the never ceasing wagon train always toiling westward. We behold log cabins becoming villages, then cities. We watch the growth of institutions out of little beginnings—schools becoming an educational system; meeting houses leading up to organic Christianity; town meetings growing to political movements; county discussions developing federal governments.

We see hardy men with intense convictions, grappling, struggling, often amid battle smoke, and some idea characteristic of the new world always triumphing. We see settlements knitting together into a nation with singleness of purpose. We note the birth of the modern system of industry and commerce and its striking forth into undreamed of wealth, making the millions members one of another as sentiment could never bind. And under it all, and through it all, we fasten on certain principles ever operating and regnant—the leadership of manhood; equal rights for every soul; universal enlightenment as the source of progress. These last are the principles that have shaped America; these principles are the true Americanism.

We look forward. We are conscious we are in a period of transition. Ideas in education, in political economy, in social science are undergoing revisions. There is a large uncertainty about the outcome. But faith in the underlying principles of Americanism and in God's destiny for the republic makes a firm ground of hope. The coming century promises to be more than ever the age of the people—an age that shall develop a greater care for the rights of the weak and make a more solid provision for the development of each individual by the education that meets his need.

As no prophet among our fathers on the 300th anniversary of America could have pictured what the new century would do, so no man can this day reach out and grasp the 100 years upon which the nation is now entering. On the victorious results of the completed centuries the principles of Americanism will build our fifth century. Its material progress is beyond our conception, but we may be sure that in the social relations of men with men the most triumphant gains are to be expected. America's fourth century has been glorious; America's fifth century must be made happy.

One institution more than another has wrought out the achievement of the past, and is to-day most trusted for the future. Our fathers in their wisdom knew that the foundations of liberty, fraternity and equality must be universal education. The free school, therefore, was conceived the cornerstone of the republic. Washington and Jefferson recognized that the education of citizens is not the prerogative of church or of other private interest; that while religious training belongs to the church, and while technical and higher culture may be given by private institutions, the training of citizens in the common knowledge and the common duties of citizenship belongs irrevocably to the state.

We therefore on this anniversary of America present the public schools as the proudest expression of the principle of enlightenment which Columbus grasped by faith. We uplift the system of free and universal education as the master force which under God has been informing each of our generations with the peculiar truths of Americanism. America therefore gathers her sons around the school house to-day as the institution closest to the people, most characteristic of the people, and fullest of hope for the people.

To-day America's fifth century begins. The world's twentieth century will soon be here. To the thirteen millions now in the American schools the command of the coming years belongs. We, the youth of America, who to-day unite to march as one army under the sacred flag, understand our duty. We pledge ourselves that the flag shall not be stained, and that America shall mean equal opportunity and justice for every citizen and brotherhood for the world.

Song for Columbus' Day.

Air—"Lyons."

Columbia, my land! all hail the glad day
When first to thy strand Hope pointed the way;
Hail him who thro' darkness first followed the Flame
That led where the Mayflower of Liberty came.

Dear Country, the star of the valiant and free!
Thy exiles afar are dreaming of thee.
No fields of the Earth so enchantingly shine,
No air breathes such incense, such music as thine.

Humanity's home! thy sheltering breast
Gives welcome and room to strangers oppress'd.
Pale children of Hunger and Hatred and Wrong
Find life in thy freedom and joy in thy song.

The fairest estate the lowly may hold,
Thy poor may grow great, thy feeble grow bold,
For worth is the watchword to noble degree,
And manhood is mighty where manhood is free.

O, union of States and union of souls!
Thy promise awaits, thy future unfolds,
And earth from her twilight is hailing the sun
That rises where people and rulers are one.

Fathers of Great Men.

THE father of Diderot, the encyclopedist, was a knife grinder.

ROUSSEAU, the author of "Emile," was the son of a watchmaker.

THE father of Thorwaldsen, the sculptor, was a ship carpenter.

THE father of David Livingstone was an operator in a cotton-mill.

THE Roman Emperor Maximian was the son of a common soldier.

DEMOSTHENES was the son of a swordmaker and blacksmith.

THE father of Sir Robert Peel, the statesman, was a day laborer.

MARSHAL SUCHET was a silk-winder's boy, and enlisted in the ranks.

THE father of Spontini, the opera composer, was a farm laborer.

GIFFORD, the poet, was a sailor's son, and himself a shoemaker.

RAMUS, the divine, was the son of a laborer, and himself a servant.

THE father of the great Tintoretto was a watchmaker and jeweler.

MARSHAL LANNES was a carpenter's son, and himself an apprentice.

THE father of Alexander Wilson, the ornithologist, was a day laborer.

CERVANTES' father was a soldier, and he himself served in many wars.

THE father of Constable, the painter, was a miller and flour merchant.

THE father of Johann Muller, the German scientist, was a peasant.

FRANKLIN was the son of a soap-boiler, and was himself a printer.

SOUTHEY'S father was a linen-draper, and employed his son in the shop.

THE Emperor Maximian was the son of a peasant who had been a slave.

THE father of Keats kept a livery stable, in which the poet was born.

MENDELSSOHN, the Jewish philosopher, was the son of a pawnbroker.

THE father of Oliver Cromwell was a country gentleman of small means.

DANIEL WEBSTER was the son of a farmer in very humble circumstances.

HARVEY, who discovered the circulation of the blood, was a farmer's boy.

THE father of Whewell, the mathematician and philosopher, was a joiner.

FERGUSON, the astronomer, was a shepherd's son, and taught himself astronomy while keeping night guard over the sheep.

HANS BACH, the father of the Bach family, was a baker. Over two hundred of his descendants have been famous as musicians.

A CLEVER fraud has just been detected in Paris. An advertisement appeared recently in a French paper, to the effect that a widow, aged 28, herself in independent circumstances, wished to meet with a suitable young man, etc. Several candidates for matrimony were attracted by the announcement, and there were the usual preliminary inquiries, and ultimately the interview. The lady treated her different admirers in different ways, but in each case gave proof of her income, and seemed anxious for the ceremony of marriage. She was used to English ways, and liked to receive an engagement ring before the hoop of plain gold, and this predilection for the English fashion she explained to each of her fiances. They all yielded to the English fashion, and presented rings of varying value, two of them 4,000 and 3,500 francs respectively for their presents. Owing to her persistent delay, one of the dupes brought action against her. This revelation caused a whole string of bethrothed ones to put in their claims, so the dashing widow was summoned to court.

LOUIS XI., after having, by open murder or secret assassination, rid himself of the most powerful nobility of France, died in miserable fear, begging his physician to do something for him. During his last days he sent for St. Francis of Paula, and offered him untold riches to intercede with heaven for a further lease of life.

Legs Instead of the Lord.

A very old negro, with his hair tied in those mysterious twists which the art of the white man has failed to imitate, sat on a log near a small cabin, muttering in discontent.

"What's the matter, old man?" asked a white preacher, en route to fill an appointment. "Trouble o' de church, mister; trouble o' de church." And turning, he cast a significant glance at the cabin.

"What is the trouble, old man? I am a minister of the gospel, and doubtless I can assist you." "Ef you'se a minister o' de kine o' gospel what I's been uster fur de las' week, I'se sprized ter see dat yer head ain't tied up. I's a preacher myself, sah. Had charge o' a congregation for some time, but my wife she took it into her head dat de udder church was de bes.' Wal, I let her go, case it ain't wuth while ter try ter hole a 'oman. But she wan't satisfied wid dis. She wanted ter fetch her preachers ter my house. Didn't mine dis so much, but, ding it, she wanted ter gin 'em de best vidduls on de place. When my 'panions would come she'd stew up a lot o' bacon fur 'em, an' treat 'em lack da wan't nobody. Yistidy, a bow-legged fellow he come. I seed my wife chasin' herse'f roun' de yard, an' s' I, 'What you gwine ter do?'

"'Kill a chichen fur de parson,' s' she.

"'Blame ef you kills a fowl fur dat nigger,' s' I. 'Case I ain't gwine ter put up wid dem sorter tricks no longer 's I. 'Who's you talkin' ter?' se she. 'Ter yerse'f,' s' I.

"She didn' say annudder word, but gidderin' up a stave frum de ash hopper, she gin me a dif dat fotch a hunnerd stars an' de moon right down afore me. Dis wan't de treatment what I was looking fur, an' grabbin' holt de 'oman, I was chokin' her outen shape when dat bow-laiged man he hopped out, grabbed up suthin' an' laid me mighty low. When I come ter myse'f, my wife an' de bow-laiged man was er settin' at de table er chawin' fit ter kill darselfs, an' I wan't no whar. I seed dat it wouldn' do fur me to go progikin roun' dar, so I goes out ter de stable an' sociated wid de mule. I staid on de outside till dis mornin', an' den thinks, s' I, dar ain't no mo' danger, so I'll go ter de house. But bless you! de 'oman flung a cup o' hot water on me, an' liftin herse'f lack a wile hog tole me not ter come inter de house."

"Look out!" he cried, as a skillet came flying over the fence. "Dat 'oman ain't dun got ober her tantrum yit."

"My friend," said the white minister, "Your case is indeed a sad one. Let us get down here and pray for a better state of affairs."

"Uh huh', dat 'oman 'll slip up on me ef I does. Go on an' lebe de ole man. In dis matter it's a case o' laigs stead o' de Lawd. Wish you mighty well wid yer good work, sah," and, as a vicious woman appeared at the fence with a brick-bat, he turned, struck a trot, and added: "Doan' yer see dat it's laigs 'stead o' de Lawd?"—Texas Siftings.

John Wesley's Autograph.

An interesting letter, the last written by John Wesley, was sold a few days ago by Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge. The text was as follows: "To the Board of Customs, Gentlemen: Two or three days ago Mr. Ireland sent me as a present two dozen of French claret, which I am ordered to drink during my present weakness. The White Swan Inn. It was seized—beg it may be restored to your obedient servant, John Wesley, 14th November, 1790. City Road. Whatever duty comes due I will see duly paid." This touching appeal to the Board of Customs is indorsed "Rejected, W. W." The writing is very feeble and broken and the reference to the White Swan is not clear; possibly he wanted the claret sent there. This letter realized 22s.—Sala's Journal.

The Upper Vest Pocket.

"There is just one person in this world I would feel justified in assassinating, and that is the inventor of the upper vest pocket," said Major John Wampler at the Southern. "The upper vest pocket is a delusion and a snare; it has caused more misery than unrequited love, more profanity than tight boots. A man cannot resist the temptation to put all manner of articles into it—comb, toothbrush, cigars, pencils, etc.,—well knowing that the first time he has occasion to stoop down he will spill the entire cargo all over the floor. The upper vest pocket was my bete noir for twenty years; then I ordered my tailor to omit those receptacles, and now I have hopes of living a gentleman and dying a 'consistent Christian."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Wrong Side of Fifty.

Reader, have you passed the meridian of life? Are your joints getting stiff, your muscles and sinews losing their elasticity? Are you troubled with lumbago? Are you, in short, in daily or occasional receipt of any of those admonitions which nature gives to remind people that they are growing old? If so, try a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a most genial and agreeable mitigator of the infirmities of age, a rapid promoter of convalescence, and an effectual means of counteracting bodily decay. Good digestion, sound sleep, a hearty appetite, freedom from rheumatic twinges are among the benign fruits that spring from the regular and persistent use of this superb tonic and corrective, which has received the unqualified sanction of the medical fraternity. Give it the fair trial that it deserves, and you will be grateful for this advice.

Limits on Natural Vision.

The limit of natural vision varies with elevation, condition of the atmosphere, intensity of illumination and other modifying elements. On a clear day an object one foot above a level plain may be seen at a distance of 1.31 miles; one 10 feet in height, 4.15 miles; one 20 feet high, 5.86 miles; one 100 feet high, 13.1 miles; one a mile high (as the top of a mountain), 95.23 miles. This allows 7 inches, or, to be more exact, 6.99 inches to the mile, for the curvature of the earth, and assumes that the size and illumination of the object is sufficient to produce an image.

How to Prevent a Black Eye.

There is nothing to compare with a tincture or a strong infusion of capsicum annuum, mixed with an equal bulk of mucilage or gum arabic, and with the addition of a few drops of glycerine. This should be painted all over the bruised surface with a camel's hair pencil and allowed to dry on, a second or third coating being applied as soon as the first is dry. If done as soon as the injury is inflicted the treatment will invariably prevent the blackening of the bruised tissue. The same remedy has no equal in rheumatic, sore or stiff neck.—Medical Times.

Just What Is Wanted.

Business is alive to a great coming event, and in the hurly-burly of its preparations for the Columbian Exposition in 1893, too much is already seen on the streets of a fanciful or amusing nature, both superficial and catch-penny. There has been observed a void in the line of the strictly useful, combining therewith instructive object lessons and the beautiful in art. Books there may be by the score, but the experience of the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia shows that the mass of these were mere trifles and unserviceable. The horde of visitors were ever at a loss for a handy pocket guide of official stamp, not only reliable but pleasing and always fit to keep. Just what is wanted of this unique kind has happily already made its appearance, and we have before us "THE OFFICIAL PORTFOLIO OF THE WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION," illustrated from Water Color Drawings.

This Portfolio is a rare and beautiful exponent of the main architectural features of the Great Exposition at Chicago in 1893. The fourteen magnificent structures are faithfully exhibited, while the Bird's-eye View gives a realistic glance at the lay of the grounds, with their principal buildings, lagoons, etc. The illustrations are exact reproductions, in water color effects, of the original drawings, made especially for this purpose from the official plans, by America's best known water color artist, Charles Graham. The pictures, therefore, are not only official but they are genuine works of art, and competent critics pronounce them to be equal to the finest productions of a similar kind of the famous art centers of Europe.

It is simply wonderful how such perfection in art, accompanied by full descriptive matter, can be served to the Great Public in so cheap and handy a form. But a copy of this exceptionally fine production will be sent to any address upon receipt of 10 cents in postage stamps by The Charles A. Vogeler Co., Baltimore, Md.

Baling.

Not every owner or operator of a baling press knows how to bale hay properly, and if he did, it would still be important that the farmer knew when hay is properly baled, that he may insist on good work being done. He will often find that the balers have shirked, or been careless, and very little of this will knock a dollar a ton off the price of the hay. It will not do to trust altogether to the honesty of the balers, especially when they are hired by the owner of the press, and have no direct interest in the work being well done.

Train Loaded with Stove Polish.

Last week, Messrs. Morse Bros., of Canton, Mass., proprietors of the well-known Rising Sun Stove Polish, filled orders from two customers in the West for twenty-three car loads of stove polish. As each car contained 400 gross, weighing fifteen tons, the shipment to these two houses was 9,200 gross, or 345 tons. The immense business done by this firm is a monument to the industry and high grade of goods for which they have earned a reputation at home and abroad.—Boston (Mass.) Pilot.

Wonderful

Jacob A. Kunkel, a reliable farmer of Mt. Royal, York Co., Pa., says that a running sore broke out on the leg of his nephew, Milton A. Kunkel, when he was 5 years old. He could not walk. Two years ago they began giving him HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, and in a short time the sore healed up, he regained perfect health, and he is now, at 13 years, lively and rugged. Mr. Kunkel says: "We all consider his cure little short of a miracle."

The Iron Hall.

They had a Supreme Justice, a Supreme Secretary, a Supreme Cashier, a Supreme Treasurer, and about a score of other Supremes in the Order of the Iron Hall. But owing to some unexplained circumstance they forgot to watch the floor of the treasury and the money all ran out through the cracks. The best security that a person can have, is the knowledge that he possesses the ability to ward off the attacks of a disease. When we consider that 95 per cent. of deaths come from some form of pulmonary trouble, it will be seen that if we can avoid catching cold, or immediately cure a cold when it assails us, we shall have little trouble in prolonging our days. This can easily be done by taking REID'S GERMAN COUGH AND KIDNEY CURE, whenever we are afflicted with any malady that arises from cold. This great remedy never fails. It cures colds by stimulating the excretory organs and thus enabling them to throw off the disease. The small bottles are 25 cents and the large ones, 50 cents. Get it of any dealer. The Oldest Medicine in the World is probably DR. ISAAC THOMPSON'S CELEBRATED EYE-WATER.

This article is a carefully prepared physician's prescription, and has been in constant use for nearly a century. There are few diseases to which mankind are subject more distressing than sore eyes, and none, perhaps, for which more remedies have been tried without success. For all external inflammation of the eyes it is an infallible remedy. If the directions are followed it will never fail. We particularly invite the attention of physicians to its merits. "German Syrup"

I must say a word as to the efficacy of German Syrup. I have used it in my family for Bronchitis, the result of Colds, with most excellent success. I have taken it myself for Throat Troubles, and have derived good results therefrom. I therefore recommend it to my neighbors as an excellent remedy in such cases. James T. Durette, Earlysville, Va. WATERLOO.

This is fair week at Waterloo.

The schools are closed this week on account of the fair.

Jennie North does not improve in health, but rather seems to fail.

The meetings of the Loyal Temperance Legion will be discontinued for a time.

W. H. Leas went over to Albion Tuesday to attend to a case he has in court there.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Monroe are the parents of a fine baby boy. Arrived Sunday morning.

An aged man, Mr. Foulk, who lived south of town died Monday. We heard no particulars.

Everybody comes to the fair. The gypsies are here bag and baggage, ready to tell fortunes, trade, horses, etc.

A large number of books in sets of six together with the Chautauquan, have arrived for the members of the L. M. C. for this years work

Thursday afternoon the fire bell rang out its alarm and the engine was hustled out ready for work. It finally proved to be only a chimney burning out, over in Uniontown.

Rev. Albertson preached his farewell sermons Sunday. The writer doubts if he has ever preached a better sermon since he came here, than that on Sunday morning.

Mrs. Fannie W. Smith of Chicago, who visited Mrs. Winslow, two years ago, and made some pleasant acquaintances here and spent a day with Mrs. Barns, of Auburn, has spent the summer months in Connecticut visiting her father, Rev. Horace Winslow and family and other friends in the eastern states. Mrs. Smith was sent as delegate from Chicago to the convention at New York for the Christian Endeavor society, and has only within a few days returned to her home in the west.

Your correspondent lately received a notice of the death of Mrs. Jane Searle Gaylord, wife of David Gaylord, with date of funeral. The services were held at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. A. Woodhull. Mrs. Gaylord was born at Wilkesbury, Luzerne county, Penn, Dec. 21, 1816; died in Angola,, Ind. Sept 20, 1892. Mr. and Mrs. Gaylord lived for some years near Pleasant Lake, afterward making their home in Angola. Mrs. Gaylord was a woman of fine character, and possessed of many qualities calculated to win and hold the love and respect of those who knew her.

The annual convention of the DeKalb county W. C. T. U, Thursday afternoon and evening was very interesting and well attended. Mrs. Maggie Stafford, of St. Joe, was president, Mrs. Jones, of Garrett, conducted the devotional exercises. Mrs. Long, president of the Waterloo union gave the address of welcome, reports were made, committees appointed, interspursed with music, general singing, and several solos, by Mrs. Gill, after which Mrs. J. R Nichols, state president of the W. C. T. U. gave a most interesting and profitable talk. The question box followed and the meeting adjourned. The meetings were well conducted, with as much order, and yet sufficient freedom. as we ever see meetings anywhere, or handled by anyone. Those who took an active part seemed well acquainted with parlimentary rules. There was no hesitation, embarassment or dragging. In the evening Mrs. Cuppy and Mrs. Lewis, of Auburn, sang a lively duet, and a little Miss sang well to an accompaniment. The audience then listened to a well directed lecture by Mrs. Nichols. She has an attractive face and a pleasing personnel, and when she appeares upon the stage this favorable impression is deepened. She has no occasion to dilute one idea to occupy her allotted time, for her mind is so full of ideas of the utmost importance to every one that the time is far too short to do justice to her subject or her mission. She speaks quite rapidly though with eloquence which carries her hearers with her to the end. After the benediction, while the was passing through the aisle, one gentleman said to another, were any of the ministers here? The reply was, "I saw one back there a while ago, but think he went out." Being unable to attend the meeting Friday, no report can be given.

SUMMIT.

Too late to sow wheat.

Rev. Parr of Elkhart was in town last Friday.

Everybody goes to the Waterloo fair this week.

Noah Mortorff was on our streets last Wednesday.

Cary Snowberger of Angola, was in town Monday.

Editor Strayer of Ashley, was on our streets Monday.

Mr. Melondy from north of Hudson, was in our town Friday.

Henry Snowberger and wife, visited L. Colton and wife, Sunday.

Theresa Shiffli of Angola, is visiting her parents, west of here this week.

Wm. Clark of Michigan is visiting his brother Sylvene Clark at this writing.

Henry Lawson and wife visited Mrs. L's. parents, Geo. McDougle's in Hudson last Sun day.

Wm. Zimmerman of Auburn, and Mary Anthony and Mrs. Norah Cook of Butler, visited Mrs. Catherine Zimmerman and Mrs. Betsey Yethers, Sunday.

David Thrasher died last Wednesday morning. Rev. Mr. Parr of Elkhart, preached the funeral at the house last Friday. He was buried in the Pleasant Lake cemetery. His wife is lying very low at this writing.

Burlington Route.

The Burlington route is the best railroad from Chicago and St. Louis to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Omaha, Deadwood and Denver. The scenic line via Denver, Colorado Springs, Pueblo. Leadville, Glenwood Springs, Salt Lake City and Ogden to all California points. All its trains are vestibuled, and equipped with Pullman sleeping cars, standard chair cars (seats free), and Burlington Route dining cars. If you are going west, take best line. 1

STILL IN THE SWIM,

But Not in De Soup.

How well defined and strangely familiar this expression sounds when applied to the wee, small boy by his wary playmates, who has disobeyed the injunctions of his parents in the matter of abstaining from an indulgence in the coveted hours spent in the soothing waters of some deep and quiet stream, means a good sound, introduction to the most potent and powerfully persuasive measures, the irate parent can possibly transmit to his hopeful as a smarting legacy. Of course the small boy does not admire the stringency of papa's taste, and consequently revolts against all future bestowals. However, in the faint obscurity of his infantile remembrance he carries the impressions so forcibly made upon his earlier days, until manhood crowns him with the dignity of mature years. It is also an expression commonly used on "change," when a man has passed through the initiatory elements on the Board of Trade, of "whitewashing, inking, souping, etc," and gained a favorable footing with the members of that august body. He invests largely in stocks and seems to float gaily forth to conquer and to dare the perils in the great uncertainties of magnanimous transfers. 'Tis then that he's in the swim! Still, the expression is used in decidedly another sense and given particularly another meaning. There is a trinity of uses to which it can be put, and the triune connection makes the last link in the chain the most conservative to Auburn people.

TO BE STILL IN THE SWIM,

means that you must be up with the times in matters of enterprise, public interest, etc., and in order to do it, you necessarily need to have good. substantial buildings about the place. To put up a good building it is essential to have first-class lumber as well as first-class workmanship. Both these qualities go hand in hand to produce the desired results in faultless finish.

STILL IN THE SWIM.

can be imaginatively seen glowing in flaming letters high in the air above the business plant of A. Lewis & Co., who are the principal lumber dealers in this "neck-o'-the-woods." They are in the surging tide floating down the billowy stream of business enterprise, and the white-caps of competition which fleck the foamy waves of energy, seem to follow in the channel of this GREAT SWIM. An entirely new supply of the choicest lumber will soon be on hand and they will be in the "swim" deeper than ever.

THE NEW SHIPMENT

of lumber will show how unswervingly Mr. Lewis seeks to gratify the wants of his customers.

September 28, 1892. 41

Ohio in 1836.

We have before us, a copy of the "Republican Advocate," a paper published at Wooster, Wayne county, Ohio, on Saturday, Nov. 26, 1836. Now, we don't want to carry the idea that this copy has been all this while on the road to reach the COURIER office, the office of the leading paper in this county, although it sometimes at this late day and age takes the Sentinel three days to get from Indianapolis to Auburn. Of course, however, the mails were slow in 1836, even in Ohio, for she had not a foot of railroad then, nor had any other western state, for the first shovel of earth on the first railroad to cross the mountains, the B & O., was dug up in 1832 only. When this old paper was issued, Andrew Jackson was president; VanBuren was vice-president; John Forsythe, secretary of state; Levi Woodbury, secretary of treasury; Lewis Cass, of war; Mahlon Dickinson, of navy: Amos Kendall, postmaster-general; B. F. Butler, attorney-general; there was no department of the interior till thirteen years later; John Marshall was chief justice, and James K Polk, speaker of the House Everyone of these eminent men went to Washington by stage, by water, or by their own teams, or on horseback, unless they preferred to go afoot. Washington was a muddy little city where teams mired in the streets, and the sidewalks were of planks, where they had any. Thousands of things have changed all over the world since then The telegraph was unknown, lumber was sawed by means of an up-and-down saw run by water, and planed by hand, though one man proudly advertises a "steam sawmill." Every store, grocery and tavern sold liquor if they cared to do so, for there was no tax on such things. Manufactures of all kinds were common, and flourished without "protection," for the tariff had not touched the most of them, and even those that were "protected" were satisfied with 10 to 20 per cent, for they were only infants then and had not grown so as to require 40 to 300 per cent. And so on, for numberless things we have no space to enumerate. But to come to the contents and character of this old paper. It was democratic of course, or it would not be called "Republican," for the opponents of the democrats were then called "whigs," while the democrats had been called democrats and republicans, dropping the latter name in 1828. The paper speaks hopefully of the prospects for VanBuren's election, as many states had already voted, and had generally gone democratic They did not seem to fear blocks-of-five, for there were no Dudleys in those days There was news from over the world, though in a brief form Buffalo, N. Y, reported 31 lake vessels, as running to and from that port, and only four vessels, had been lost in 15 years, on the two great lakes of Michigan and Erie The war between Mexico and Texas, in which the latter gained her independance, was just closing for Mexico could raise no more men to invade it. The Apache tribes were even then, a source of danger and terror, and had to be watched, and the people of Northern Mexico called for help, and threatened to help themselves, which was a hint that they would try independence, though they never did. James Blair was county clerk, and Samuel Quinby was treasurer. Daniel Leasure advertised some land for sale A notice was given for the organization of a new county from parts of Loraine, Huron, Richland, with the seat of justice to be at the village of Orange, in Richland county. This, we suppose is the present county of Ashland. In this number, the delinquent tax list appears, and shows many names familiar to DeKalb county folks, such as Dull, Layman, Oxenrider, Coburn, Porter, Myers, Bowers, Webster, Baird, Boyd, French, Hazlett, McBride, Rice, Reed, Freeman, McEntaffer, Luce, Garver, Hayes, Batdorff, Daily, Moore, Kiplinger, Buchanan, Warner, McIntyre, Powel, Lewis, Miller, Clark, Hull, Brown, Smurr, Jones, Klinesmith, Thomas, Campbell, and even Smith, while J. H Harris, was county auditor. Among advertisements one man deals extensively in "plains" (he meant planes). He had for sale many kinds, that will call up a smile among our carpenters now, such as cove bead, center bead, dado, Grecian Ovela, nosing, smoothing, matching, jack, fore, jointer, plow and tooth planes, etc. Then there is a literary notice of a magazine, called "Youth's Guide to Piety." (How Auburn lads would snap up a book like that) And so, we might write a week about this old paper, which John Shugers brought in a week or two ago, to show us. It was found in the bottom of a bureau used by his mother. It had likely been there for many years, and was only discovered while gathering up her clothes and other effects after her death.

Resolutions of Respect.

Hall of Crescent Lodge, No. 254 D. of R.

We, the committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect to the memory of our beloved sister, Carrie L. Dickinson, who departed this life on Saturday, Sept. 24, 1892, do hereby submit the following:

Whereas, again our chain has been broken by the wish of Him who doeth all things for the best, he has removed from our circle our beloved sister Carrie L. Dickinson, in the prime of her womanhood, leaving behind to mourn her loss, a loving husband, a sweet little babe and a kind father and mother;

Whereas, by this sad occurrence there comes to each member of our lodge, a deep sense of personal bereavement of the social and fraternal loss to our lodge, we are reminded that each and all alike, sooner or later, we must take our departure to the great beyond; therefore be it

Resolved, that her model life and kindness of heart, will ever be remembered, and that we will cherish her memory, and hope when our time comes we will meet her in that Grand Lodge above;

Resolved, that we extend to the bereaved friends our tenderest sympathy, and mingle our tears of sorrow in one of the sad events which has deprived them of a wife and daughter, and us a friend and sister;

Resolved, that as a mark of respect to the memory of our beloved sister, the charter be draped in mourning for thirty days; that a copy of this memorial be spread on the minutes; a copy sent to the bereaved family and to the Talisman for publication. Respectfully submitted in F. L. & T.

Obituary.

Edward Henry Eargood, son of J. W. and E. J. Eargood, was born April 21, 1886, died Sept. 30, 1892, aged 6 years, 5 months and 9 days. He was a dutiful child loved and esteemed by his parents and playmates. He loved the Sabbath school and his Sabbath school teacher Mrs. Caroline S. Depew, who preceded him to the better land. The funeral services were conducted by Rev, J. W. Stringfellow, and the remains quietly laid to rest in Woodlawn cemetery to wait the resurrection.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

You will remember the condition I was in five years ago, when I was afflicted with a combination of diseases, and thought there was NO HELP FOR ME. I tried all kinds of medicines, and scores of eminent physicians. My nerves were prostrated, producing dizziness, heart trouble and all the ills that make life miserable. I commenced to take DR. MILES' NERVINE and in three months I WAS PERFECTLY CURED. In my travels each year, when I see the thousands of physical wrecks, suffering from nervous prostration, taking prescriptions from local physicians who have no knowledge of their case, and whose death is certain, I feel like going to them and saying, "GET DR. MILES' NERVINE AND BE CURED." In my profession, where there are so many sufferers from overwork, mental prostration and nervous exhaustion, brought on by the character of the business engaged in, I would recommend "MILES' NERVINE" as a sure cure for all suffering from these causes.

The New Great South American Kidney Cure.

The acknowledged superior cure and immediate relief for all derangements, painfulness and decay of the kidneys or bladder, Bright's disease, diabetes or any complaint that hurts or despoils either of these delicate organs. This new remedy has been thoroughly tested by learned physicians and found far superior to any medicine yet discovered for quickly relieving all weaknesses, aches, pains and distresses arising from disease of any part of the urinary passages. It is a great relief for the old, middle aged and children, male or female. It relieves at once retention and pain in passing water, and it is very effective in relieving prostatic troubles in the old, and for nightly incontinence of water in children, or others, caused by weakness of the bladder. It may be worth to many a hundred times its cost. This is a remedy of great value to ladies, because they are very liable to weakness and pain peculiar to their sex. Hon. Carl Schurz says the protective policy is a political demoralizer. The facts seem to be with Mr. S.

Specimen Cases.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with neuralgia and rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shephard, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely, Sold by Robbins & McCord 3

A Druggist Talks.

Will F. Crawford, druggist at Des Moines, Iowa, says it is remarkable the way Cubeb Cough Cure sells, that his customers speak of the highest terms of praise. One man in particular who has been troubled with Bronchitis for years, never found any relief until he uses the Cubeb Cough Cure. He says it stops it at once. He does not hesitate to recommend it for all throat and lung troubles.

Sir Isaac Newton devoted the early morning hours to study.

Every Lady and Gent

within 50 miles of Auburn is invited to cal on any druggist and try a 25ct. bottle of the great guaranteed remedy for coughs and colds, Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup, as it is the cheapest and best cough syrup in the world. It is pleasant to take and the first dose gives relief. All we ask is to give it a trial and you will use no other. Supplied by all druggists,

A Severe Case.

Amos Clark, a prominent man of Clarinda, Iowa, says: Through the recommendation of J. P. Burrows of our city, I gave your Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup a trial in a case of severe cough. After using it a short time my cough was cured, which fact gives me such great confidence in its merits that upon every occasion I recommend it to my neighbors.

Some Reminiscences of Its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

Restricted to examination without p vious acquaintance and knowledge ability, the normal class was the m best course to learn the character of tended teachers and to in a degree, qu fy them for encountering the difficul of their important position.

In scholarship and adaptation, in and skill, Spencer Dills was well dowed and ably did his work. He ch to assist him. T. J. Saxton and t Misses Mary D. Bush and Margaret Searight. His circulars promised a re port to parents of attendance and deport ment and outlined a five step graduate course of instruction from addition to Algebra, from alphabet to classics.

In reference to this and succeeding terms, it is a pleasure to state that the age and class of young people with their attainments and later history, who sought the advantages of the Auburn Academy, reflected credit upon their instructor, and gave to the school a well-merited reputation still existing.

Prior to this date but two meeting houses had been built in Auburn. The two societies supported ministers with difficulty although the amounts required were inconsiderable. The one was compelled at times to depend for preaching upon casual presence of a minister and the Methodist building was liberally allowed to be used by religious people as a Union church.

hear certain books talked about. I wan to read them. I hear them pronounce to be masterpieces and they hide the away from me. How can a book be a mas terpiece and yet a young girl of my age b forbidden to read it? Perhaps one o these books might enlighten me as t my peculiar situation! I don't think ask too much. In fact, I think I'm a ver reasonable person, and I should hav succeeded very easily in being quit happy if something which was quite a unexpected as it has become complica ted hadn't happened to me.

I'll tell you about it in another letter dear Blanche. Meanwhile, little mother bye-bye. Wholly thine, ADRIENNE.

LETTER NO. 2.

SAME TO SAME.

Last winter you recollect meeting M. de Villelong at our house, don't you, dear Blanche? Madame de Pontlouis had introduced him to us. She made no secret of the motive which induced her to present the Baron, for he is a baron and a real one, too. She admitted to mamma that the matchmaker's mania had come upon her, and that she was looking out for me. I had already met this young man, had often danced with him. I rather liked him, and the moment I saw him at the house I knew what it meant. Anyway, mamma was open and aboveboard in the matter. She told me to look upon him as a suitor for my hand. Said mamma, with faultless pronunciation and admirable intonation:

"His position, my darling, his age, his fortune, his family, his antecedents are perfectly satisfactory to me, but it's for you to decide. You are not supposed to know anything about the man. Study him at your leisure. I don't want to influence you in the least."

You remember him, don't you, dea Blanche? You met him just about the time you were married. I think you must have noticed him — tall, thin blonde, a good head of hair and a fine beard, handsome teeth, rather smal head, broad shoulders, in a word, every indication of physical strength. A love should be strong, shouldn't he? It' such a delightful feeling to know tha you have a protector by your side, on that doesn't fear man or demon, fire o water. His feet do very well. He al ways keeps them perfectly dressed, an he's very careful with his hands, too although they're a little hard. He ride well, he is witty and full of fun, and need scarcely add belongs to several o the swell clubs. They say he has ha many first-rate chances, and I don wonder at it. How I came to know Why, I have heard mamma's friend speak of him just as they do of an young man in society when they don foresee his presentation as a suito Of course, they spoke in enigmas, but understood well enough. The simp fact is, dear Blanche, that it is utter impossible to bring up a girl nowaday in complete ignorance of the affairs actual life. The morning journals a filled with these topics which becom subjects of discourse at the sma dances. A young girl hears the name of her partners coupled with the firs names of certain ladies whose carriages pass and repass ours on the Champs Elysees, in the Bois and elsewhere. We meet them in the shops, we run against them in the establishments of the great men milliners. They set our fashions for us, they furnish us with husbands. When they become ours do they give up the old set or does the old set give up them? In short, we girls of this day and generation are initiated into a thousand and one things of which the girls of the good old times didn't even suspect the existence. If we live in Paris we soon learn to know that all marriages are not made in heaven an that the "contracting parties," as t divorce courts call them, don't alway behave themselves with perfect propriety.

It's shameful when you come to think of it. And sometimes it even happens that we make our boast of the fact that the young man who asks for us in mar riage is no milksop, that he has sown plentiful crop of wild oats, etc., instea of shrinking from him in disgust as would if we respected ourselves! pose for an instant, little moth d a it were possible for a y escape all this contam other as to their cause; finally to ha

yond the annual routine at the regular and special sessions of the board of coun y commissioners. They met May 17th to make a final disposal by sale of the poor farm and to let the contract for boarding and clothing the paupers. Why the poor farm was then sold and a return made to the objectionable old time system does not appear, but the sale was confirmed by the board and the contract was awarded to John Grube, while William McBride till then the superintendent, was notified to vacate the premises.

The financial condition of the county was bad but it had yet to reach a worse phase. The June settlement sheet shows an expenditure of $44.643 including $3,134 of outstanding bonds redeemed Orders not paid for want of funds were outstanding to the amount of $20,000 and were slow of sale at 10 per cent., discount. The county levy was placed t one per cent., but low valuation by ssessors brought inadequate results.

The war had ended in April and fast ollowing the Grand Review in May at Washington, the veterans were paid, discharged and given transportation to heir homes.

The struggle had cost DeKalb county eavily in life and treasure and no sec ion was more gratified at the return of eace, and few localities in the far north, ad greater cause.

As an instance of the depletion caused the ranks, Company A, 100th Ind., had arched from the public square in Au urn on Aug. 18, 1862, ninety four strong. y Feb. 1865, 7 had been transfered, 15 ischarged, 2 resigned and 33 had died a total of 58. Of the remainder 8 had ever been wounded, 28 had been wound once; 9, twice; 4, three times, and the mpany had no deserters.

(To be continued next week.)

THE SENATORIAL CONSPIRACY.

W. Fairbanks, the Indianapolis Millioniare, Takes Steps to Steal Indiana's Seat in the Senate.

Last Saturday, Coroner Miser was in own to serve Clerk Bishop, Sheriff lum, and Auditor Coffinberry with ach a big writ of fifteen or twenty ypewritten pages. They were sworn ut in Noble county, at the instance of Bill Voris, a rampant republican, filled ut by T. M. Eells, attorney, and sworn o before L. W. Walker, the would-be hairman of the republican district committee. The papers were brought to Mr. Miser by James Provines, chairman f the DeKalb county republican committee and their candidate for treasurer. That he should be selected to do this work is a fit comment on the good aste of a party that would make him both their candidate and chairman. The papers were probably gotten up in Indianapolis, and sent to the several counties, with instructions to get some easily handled tool of monopoly to swear to them so as to have them served. This vast expense is, we suppose borne by C. W. Fairbanks, the railway magnate, and millioniare politician of Indianapolis. He wants Mr. Turpie's seat in the senate of the United States, in order that Indiana may be for the first time in her history misrepresented as some other states have been, by a man with more money than brains, one able and willing to buy the honor and pay cash for it. This is the thing in a nutshell. He finds he is not likely to secure enough members of the legislature as the districts now stand, so he looks over the apportionments of the state into districts, in the years 1861, 1867, 1873, 1879, 1885, and 1891 to see which would suit his purpose best. He finds that ain sections have within a few years e more strongly republican, and if ld have them districted as they in 1879, it would be easier to se he legislature. He could take as the other apportionments we have , but they would not pan out as In all the cases we have cited one or the other had "fixed" the dis against the other party—gerry red, it is called. The first three by republicans; the others, by ocrats. If one was illegal, then all , for all were alike fixed up to help party in power, But republicans have gone on under all these apportionments for all these years, and have never doubted the legality of them. But if they can be set back to the one, that of 1879, they think they t a U. S. senator. They would go to 1873, or 1867, or to any other if would promise as good a chance to succeed, but the others don't. So, they want to set aside the divisions made in 885 and 1891 so as to get back to the one that suits their purpose,—in other words, they want to steal a senator, Unfortunately for our state, the entire supreme bench is republican, and here is no telling what they will o. These writs are sent into such ounties, as form such districts, as would give more republican members under the apportionment of 1879, than under the more recent ones. For example, the writs sent to Mr. Miser, will be served on the officers of the counties of Noble, DeKalb, Lagrange and Elkhart. Why Steuben was left out we cannot say. And these are the points: Under he apportionment of 1879, DeKalb, Noble, Lagrange and Steuben, sent two republican state senators, one from DeKalb and Steuben, and one from Noble and Lagrange. Now, we send a republican senator from Steuben and Lagrange, and a democrat from DeKalb and Noble, as the districts now stand. Also, under the act of 1879, DeKalb, Noble, and Elkhart sent a joint representative, and sometimes one party and sometimes another, got it. Now, under the act of 1891, there is no joint representative for these three counties, as it was found that another district had more unrepresented voters than we had here, and should have the extra man This was an act of justice. But that counts for nothing in the present republican conspiracy to steal or buy a United States senatorship.

There is probably a fatal defect in this writ, as it does not include all the parties. DeKalb and Steuben were under the act of 1879, in one senatorial district, as much as Noble and Lagrange, but this writ does not mention Steuben Suppose, the supreme court compels us to go back to the apportionment of 1879, and Steuben county is omitted. Then Noble and Lagrange can elect a senator, but DeKalb and Steuben will be left out, being still in the district under the act of 1891. Neither county could elect anything, yet would have to vote as now districted.

Again, this man Voris, has probably committed perjury, as he swears in these writs that the clerks, sheriffs and auditors named, have refused to do the things ordered, namely to go back and order elections under the act of 1879. They have not refused, for they had not been ordered to do this. They were acting under the present law, the only thing that is law, as far as they knew or still know. They could act under no other.

Anyone can see the terrible confusion that will result if the supreme court makes this partisan decision. As we understand it now, all the legislatures elected under the acts of 1885 and 1891 would be illegal, and all the laws made, and appropriations voted, would be void. Even the United State's senators, would have no good title, and such acts in congress as depended on their votes would be vitiated. Our election law would be void, we suppose, creating great trouble and confusion, on the eve of an important election.

This case, if the conspirators are successful, will cost the people of Indiana millions of dollars; and put them to vast trouble and inconvenience. The democratic party as the champion of the people and defenders of the people's rights, will fight this conspiracy at every step, and until the last. To that end, the ablest counsel has been employed. In this case, Judge McClellan has charge, and has gone to Albion where the case comes up in Judge Adair's court this week. He will omit no effort to secure to the people the right to make their own laws on intelligent lines and in conformity to the state constitution. The case will be safe in his hands, and if unsuccessful in the Noble circuit court, it will be appealed.

Obituary.

Miss Mertie Munday, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Munday, of Montpelier, Ohio, died at Angola, Ind., Oct. 2, 1892, at the age of 17 years, 11 months and 4 days.

Miss Mundy was a young lady of great promise having graduated from the Montpelier schools at the early age of fourteen. She later became a teacher, and also was for a time, a compositor in the office of the Leader, a newspaper of that place. Her sickness was brief, as she took ill while visiting friends at Angola, about a week before her death. It was some heart trouble, and all efforts to counteract its deadly effects were in vain. The burial was at Flint, Steuben county, October 4, the services being conducted by the pastor of the M. E church at that place. Besides the stricken relatives who followed her to her last resting place, were many of her schoolmates and young friends from Montpelier, among them being Mrs. Jennie Richey, Misses Gay Richie, Mary Powell, Hattie Davis, Lutie Welch, Maude Blue, Maude Smethurst, Mertie Hart and Belle Hodson; Frank Hoskins, Emory Strayer and Will Hart. Her early death will cast a gloom over a large circle of friends. The sad feature of sickness and death, away from home, was softened by the kindness and tender care of those about her, and to whom the bereaved parents hereby render thands.

A GOOD CROP OF NEWS

GATHERED FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

Homestead Strikers and Carnegie Officials Indicted—Efforts to Wreck Passenger Trains—Severe Storm in Venezuela—Collision on the Elevated Railroad in New York.

A Fearful Murder at St. Louis.

St. Louis special: Josephine Simmons, a pretty girl of 18, daughter of Frank Simmons, head engineer at Griefdick brewery, was found by her mother in the kitchen of her parents' home with her throat cut from ear to ear, her head nearly severed from her body. She was cold and stiff in death and had evidently breathed her last at least four hours before found. The house had been evidently entered by burglars, who finding the girl alone attempted to criminally assault her, and fearing that she might disclose their identity, killed her. Her clothing was torn from her and her hands were marked with deep cuts where she had grasped the knife. A fight for life and honor had taken place in the kitchen, for that room was spattered with blood and the few pieces of furniture which it contained had been removed from their usual places. There is no clue to the perpetrators of the dastardly crime.

Collision on the Elevated Road.

New York special: A collision occurred on the elevated road recently. When engine 209, of the Sixth avenue line, with five cars attached, reached a point about 100 feet above the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street station on Ninth avenue, the engine jumped the track. Several trains in the rear collided with the derailed train. A panic ensued amongst the passengers. The lights in the cars were extinguished, passengers thrown from their seats and cut by flying glass, while women fainted. Nearly fifty passengers were more or less seriously hurt by the collision. Several quite badly. One of the latter, Mrs. Hodkins, has a rib fractured and was injured internally. It is feared she will die.

Efforts to Wreck Passenger Trains.

Two dastardly efforts were made to wreck trains on the Louisville, New Albany and Chicago road near Salem. As train 74 was coming north a "T" rail was discovered on the main track. The train was stopped and the rail removed without damage. The section following was notified to look out for wreckers. This section, however, ran into a coal car that had been run onto the main track from the switch, and the engine was damaged and the conductor reported hurt. It is supposed that tramps committed the outrage out of revenge because they were not allowed to ride. The railroad company is after the wreckers.

Storm Follows Revolution.

La Gauyara special; The most disastrous storm that this city has experienced in forty years swept down the Stilla de Caracas mountain the other night. The damage is great and spreads over a wide area. There were some terrible landslides and many houses were wrecked. It is feared there has been great loss of life. Only meager details have so far been obtained, but it is known that the mountain railroad which connects Gauyra with Caracas has been completely destroyed. All communication with Caracas is cut off.

Mysterious Death.

Edward Wright, a workman in the Rockford Bolt Works, Kokomo, Ind., died mysteriously in his boarding house, and it was first supposed that he had committed suicide. Later developments, however, led to the arrest of Mrs. Elvira Stevens, a woman with whom Wright had been living, on suspicion of having administered the poison to Wright. The jewelry of the dead man has disappeared and his pockets were rifled. The woman was alone with Wright when the fatal dose was taken.

All Indicted.

Pittsburgh special: The grand jury has found true bills against the Homestead men charged with treason. The grand jury also handed down true bills against the officials of the Carnegie Steel Company charging them with aggravated riot, murder, etc. The finding of the grand jury against the Carnegie firm includes the Pinkerton brothers of the Pinkerton Agency, as well as a number of their men.

Murdered by [illegible] Vengeful Son.

Jacob Lambert, a prominent farmer of Braxton County, W. Va., was shot from ambush while walking in his garden, and has since died. A coroner's jury returned a verdict of murder, and fixed the crime on his son, Lewis, aged 20. Bad feeling had existed between father and son for some time. The murderer is still at large.

Injured by a Mine Explosion.

By an explosion of gas in a coal mine at Durango, in the southwestern part of Colorado, E. J. McClosky, ex-member of the Legislature, was instantly killed and three other men probably fatally injured.

An Embezzler Caught.

M. J. O'Brien, ex-Treasurer of the Catholic Knights of America, who robbed that order of $75,000, was arrested in Philadelphia, and is on his way home at Chattanooga. Detectives followed his wife who went on a visit to him.

Big Four Switchmen Out.

One hundred switchmen in the Big Four yards in Columbus, Ohio, have quit work because of dissatisfaction with a new yard-master.

An Aged Actor Dying.

At Detroit, L. F. Rand, who played Polonius to the elder Booth's Hamlet, has been taken suddenly ill at the Hotel Lieders. His death is only a question of a few hours. He is 70 years old and this week was rejoicing over forty-five years of successful acting in legitimate old men roles.

Twenty-five Injured.

While a gang of workmen were in Hog Run tunnel on the Louisville and Nashville Road, not far from Worthville, Ky., the timbers of the false work of the tunnel fell upon them without warning, and it is reported that as many as twenty-five were injured, some of them fatally.

SLAIN BY THOUSANDS.

Rebels Defeated in Dahomey with Terrible Slaughter.

It is reported that a decisive battle has been fought in Dahomey in which the rebellious natives were defeated and 2,000 of their warriors killed. The loss to the French troops is given as eight killed and thirty-six wounded. It is officially announced that the Dahomeyans left 200 dead, among them twenty amazons, close to the French line. The natives occupied a strong position and a desperate fight followed the attack by the French. A thick brushwood surrounded the Dahomeyans' position and this afforded some protection to the attacking forces. The battle lasted for an hour, at the end of which time the Dahomeyans fled in disorder and were pursued by the French. The natives, however, were thoroughly familiar with the country and found little difficulty in making their escape, but few of them falling captives to their pursuers. During the fight five Europeans and three Senegalese were killed and twenty-three Europeans and thirteen natives wounded. Two hundred repeating rifles were found on the field. This fact will add to the grievance France has against Germany, for the French claim that King Behanzin, besides the 2,000 rifles allowed him by treaty, has an almost equal number of Winchesters and other repeating rifles that have been furnished him by German traders. It is known that he has a large supply of ammunition and that it was landed in Dahomey from two German ships. As a result of this last battle Col. Dodds will be able to turn the Dahomeyans' position and destroy their lines of defense.

DEPARTMENT ESTIMATES.

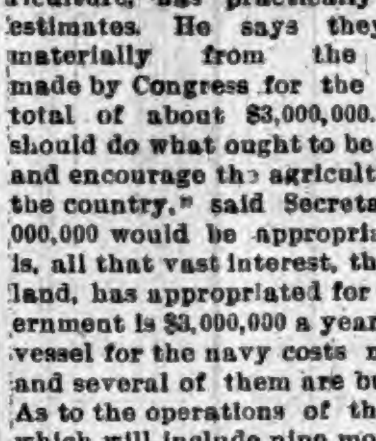
None Ready Except Secretary Rusk's, Who Asks for About $3,000,000.

The department estimates of expenditures of the Government for the next fiscal year ending June, 1894, under the law should have been in the hands of the Secretary of the Treasury, who is charged with their transmission to Congress, on the 1st inst., but they have not yet made their appearance. As a matter of fact they do not generally reach the Treasury much before the date of the meeting of Congress. Secretary Rusk, of the Department of Agriculture, has practically completed his estimates. He says they do not vary materially from the appropriations made by Congress for the current year, a total of about $3,000,000. "If Congress should do what ought to be done to advance and encourage the agricultural interests of the country," said Secretary Rusk, "$50,000,000 would be appropriated. But, as it is, all that vast interest, the greatest in the land, has appropriated for it by the government is $3,000,000 a year. Why, a single vessel for the navy costs more than that, and several of them are built every year." As to the operations of the current year, which will include nine months of the last year of the present administration term, Secretary Foster claims that the Treasury will show a balance of $10,000,000 on June 30, 1893.

MRS. HARRISON DYING.

The Lady of the White House Is Succumbing to Consumption.

"Mrs. Harrison has consumption, not cancer," said Dr. Gardiner, her attending physician, to a Washington correspondent. "This morning she appears in better spirits, but to my mind there has been no material improvement in her condition for two weeks past. She has her periods of depression, and then there are times when she seems to rally, but these are merely the symptoms of the disease." Dr. Gardiner entertains no hope of Mrs. Harrison's recovery, and thinks her death only a question of a short time. Gradually the President is accepting the inevitable, and now seems to realize fully that the hopes he has entertained of Mrs. Harrison's recovery are vain.



MRS. HARRISON.

DYNAMITE AT HOMESTEAD.

Non-Union Boarding House Wrecked, but the Occupants Escape.

An attempt was made to blow up a non-union boarding house in Homestead with dynamite. No one was hurt, but the house was badly damaged and the occupants badly frightened. Mrs. Marron keeps the boarding-house. The thirty-five boarders were non-union workers in the Homestead mill. The dining-room was on the first floor and the sleeping-rooms on the second. In the front of the house, used as the dining-room, were large show windows. One of the side windows had been broken for some time and it was through this that the perpetrator of the deed worked. It was 2 o'clock in the morning when the cartridge was thrown through this window into the dining-room. It struck the floor, and a terrific explosion followed. All the windows were broken and a large hole torn in the floor. The beds on the second floor were thrown six feet up in the air and the occupants tumbled to the floor. No one was hurt, but the most intense excitement followed.

FOUND THE NASHUA.

The Missing Steamer Found Floating Bottom Side Up—Fifteen People Lost.

The steam barge Nashua was sighted Friday by a tug eight miles from land off Bayfield, Ont. The wreck was abandoned and was afloat bottom side up. It is now almost certain that the crew were lost. There were fifteen people in the crew. Men have been ordered to patrol the beach in search of the crew. The tug Howard reports that the boiler and engine were gone and the mast was broken off. A large quantity of wreckage was floating around. Capt. Bogies, of the schooner Ontario, also reports having passed through wreckage about twelve miles southwest of Goderich. It appeared to be part of the upper works of a steam barge. The crew, if still afloat in their yawlboat, may be enabled to reach the shore.

Celestials in College.

Michigan University is the first among American colleges, if not among colleges of the western world, to enroll among its students feminine representatives of the Chinese empire. Two young women have come from the heart of China to pursue their studies at Ann Arbor. They are pioneers in the reform of foot binding, being the first to go without bandages. They will take a medical course, after which they will return to their homes to do mission work.

Preferred Death to the Gallows.

Albert Foster, one of the murderers of ex-Congressman John B. Morgan, who was assassinated on an Illinois Central passenger train while on his way to the Democratic national convention last June, died in jail at Holly Springs, Miss. Foster's physician and relatives assert that he died from slow fever, but it is generally believed that he committed suicide to escape the gallows.

Shot by Moonshiners.

In a desperate fight with moonshiners in Lincoln county, Tenn., S. D. Mather, deputy internal revenue collector, was shot and instantly killed. Joe Spurrier, special deputy collector, and C. S. Caswell, general deputy collector, was mortally wounded.

Disaster on Puget Sound.

The Canadian Navigation Company's steamer Premier was run down and cut nearly in two by the Oregon Improvement Company's big steel collier Willamette in Puget Sound, fifty miles north of Seattle, during a dense fog Saturday afternoon. Four of the Premier's passengers and crew were killed outright, one drowned and seventeen badly wounded. The Premier was impaled across the bows of the collier like a piece of toast across a fork. This kept the boat from sinking. The Willamette steamed ahead, carrying the wrecked steamer with her across the sound to Bush Point, where both were beached in twenty-four feet of water. Sunday two powerful tugs succeeded in pulling the Willamette free from the Premier. The Premier then sank in twenty-four feet of water. It will cost $50,000 to raise her. The steamship Premier was an old and well-known boat of the Canadian Pacific Navigation Company. It was built at San Francisco in 1887, was of 1,080 gross and 602 net tonnage, 200 feet long 42 feet beam and 12 feet 9 inches depth. It was a screw propeller and was driven by a fore and aft compound engine. It had done good service and was a very popular boat.

MONEY FOR DALTONS' SLAYERS.

Six Thousand Dollars Sent the Exterminators of the Gang.

San Francisco dispatch; The Southern Pacific Company and Wells, Fargo & Co. have telegraphed $6,000 to their agent in in Coffeyville, Kan., to be distributed among the exterminators of the Daltons. This represents the standing reward of $2,000 per head for the Daltons offered by them since the Pixley train robbery. The Southern Pacific managers declare that there are five members of the Dalton family still living. These are George, Charles, and William, who are living with their mother at Kingfisher, O. T., and Cole Dalton, a rancher, and Lytton Dalton, saloonkeeper, both living near Fresno. The latter two have always borne good reputations. The total rewards offered for each of the Daltons killed at Coffeyville amount to $9,000.

AVAILABLE STOCKS OF WHEAT.

In the States and Canada They Amount to 67,999,084 Bushels.

The total available stocks of wheat in the United States and Canada, east of the Rocky mountains, as given by Bradstreet's, were 59,845,134 bushels. The Pacific coast stocks were 8,153,950 bushels. Exports of wheat (and of flour as wheat) from New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Newport News, New Orleans, Galveston, San Francisco, Portland, Ore., Portland, Me., Tacoma, and Seattle, as reported by mail and wire to Bradstreet's, were for the week 4,017,059 bushels.

SUDDEN FLIGHT OF A PROFESSOR.

Creditors and Young Ladies Mourn the Departure of a Nebraska Educator.

Prof. W. P. Rogers, who had charge of the commercial department of the Wesleyan University at Lincoln, Neb., left for Kansas City, saying he was going there to attend a wedding. Saturday a note was received from him saying he had gone to Alaska. Rogers left debts of $1,000 besides being short in his accounts with the university $300. He was also engaged to be married to two of the young lady students under his care.

ACTIVITY IN TRADE.

Business in the South Good, with Advance in Cotton.

R. G. Dun & Co. say in their weekly review of trade:

The first week of October shows more activity, in spite of the near approach of the Presidential election. Business is distinctly better at the South, on account of the improvement in the price of cotton, more active at the West, with improved crop prospects, and only slightly retarded in the East. In general, speculation has disturbed legitimate lines of trade much less during the past quarter than is usual at this season, although the transactions in cotton have been exceedingly heavy.

Disastrous Storm at Cape May.

At Cape May, N. J., there was a heavy electrical and hail storm Saturday night. Trees were uprooted, roofs blown off, the ocean pier badly damaged, and the fishing fleet sustained a loss of several thousand dollars. The Presidential yacht Clover was blown over on the Meadows. It is thought that she will be got off without material damage.

Two Persons Killed by the Cars.

Near Excelsior Springs, Mo., the local freight on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad struck a buggy in which were George S. McCullagh, aged 71 years, and his 8-year-old grandson, James McCullagh. Both the occupants of the buggy and the horses were killed.

Suicide of a Real Estate Man.

Frank P. Beale, a well-known Philadelphia real estate agent, committed suicide by hanging. His affairs are in good shape, and no cause can be assigned for his action. He leaves a widow and several children.

Fireman Killed in a Wreck.

Near Port Gibson, Miss., in a wreck on the Louisville, New Orleans and Texas Railroad, the fireman was killed and Engineer Coma and a negro passenger were seriously injured.

Jumped from a Third-Story Window.

Anton Nevalle, a patient in St. Francis' Hospital, New York, while in a fit of delirium, jumped from a third-story window. He was picked up in a dying condition.

Scarlet-Fever Epidemic.

An epidemic of scarlet-fever is prevailing at St. Clairsville, Ohio, and the public schools have been closed by order of the Board of Education. Several deaths are reported.

WIPED OFF THE EARTH.

THE NOTORIOUS DALTON GANG EXTERMINATED.

Four of Them Drop in Their Tracks—Five Citizens Killed—Coffeyville, Kan., the Scene—A Most Daring Raid—The People Were Ready.

Good Work at Great Cost.

The Dalton gang has been exterminated, wiped off the face of the earth. Caught like rats in a trap, they were shot down, but not until four citizens of Coffeyville one was so badly wounded that he has since died. The other escaped, but he is being hotly pursued.

Of the attacking party four were killed, one was fatally and two seriously wounded. The dead are:

BOB DALTON, desperado, shot through the head.

GRANT DALTON, desperado, shot through the heart.

EMMET DALTON, desperado, shot through the left side.

JOSEPH EVANS, desperado, shot through the head.

JOHN MOORE, alias "Texas Jack," desperado, shot through the head.

T. C. CONNELLY, City Marshal, shot through the body.

L. M. BALDWIN, bank clerk, shot through the head.

G. W. CUBINE, merchant, shot through the head.

C. J. BROWN, shoemaker, shot through the body.

Thomas G. Ayers, cashier of the First National Bank, was shot through the groin and cannot live.

T. A. Rennolds of the attacking party has a wound in the right breast, but it is not considered necessarily dangerous.

Lais Deiz, another of the attacking party, was shot in the right side. His wound is a serious one, but is not fatal.

It was 9 o'clock when the gang rode into town, in two squads of three each, passing through unfrequented streets and deserted alleys to the alley in the rear of the First National Bank. They quickly tied their horses, and without losing a moment's time proceeded to the attack upon the bank.

Robert Dalton, the notorious leader of the gang, and Emmet, his brother went to the First National bank, the other four under the leadership of "Texas Jack," or John Moore, going to the private bank of C. M. Congdon & Co.

In the meantime the alarm had already been given. The Dalton boys were born and bred in the vicinity, and were well known to nearly every man, woman and child. Almost before the bandits had entered the bank Marshal Connelly was collecting a posse. He ran first to the livery stable of Jim Spears, a dead shot with a Winchester and a valuable man in any fight. Then he summoned George Cubine, a merchant; Charles Brown, a shoemaker; John Cox, express agent, and other citizens who could be conveniently reached, stationing them about the square, which both of the banks faced.

Robbers Go Through the Banks.

While the marshal was collecting his forces the bandits, all ignorant of the trap that was being laid for them, were proceeding deliberately with their work of robbing the banks. "Texas Jack's" band had entered Congdon's bank, and with their Winchesters leveled at Cashier Ball and Teller Carpenter had ordered them to throw up their hands. Then "Texas Jack" searched them for weapons while the other three desperadoes kept them covered with their rifles. Finding them to be unarmed Cashier Ball was ordered to open the safe. The cashier explained that the safe's door was controlled by a time lock and that it could not by any means short of dynamite be opened before its time was up, which would be 10 o'clock, or in about twenty minutes. "We'll wait," said the leader, and he sat down at the cashier's desk.

Bob and Emmet Dalton in the meanwhile were having better luck at the First National bank. When they entered the bank they found within Cashier Ayers, his son, Albert Ayers, and Teller W. H. Shepherd. None of them were armed, and with leveled revolvers the brother bandits easily intimidated them. Albert Ayers and Teller Shepherd were kept under the muzzles of Emmet Dalton's revolvers while Bob Dalton forced Cashier Ayers to strip the safe vault and cash drawers of all the money contained in them and place it in a sack which had been brought along for that purpose.

Bob Dalton Dies in His Boots.

Fearing to leave them behind, lest they should give the alarm before the bandits should be able to mount their horses and escape, the desperadoes marched the officers of the bank out of the door with the intention of keeping them under guard while they made their escape. The party made its appearance at the door of the bank just as Liveryman Spears and his companions of the Marshal's posse took their positions in the square. When the Dalton brothers saw the armed men in the square they appreciated their peril on the instant, and leaving the bank officers on the steps of the bank building, ran for their horses. As soon as they reached the sidewalk Spears' rifle quickly came to position. An instant later it spoke and Bob Dalton, the notorious leader of the notorious gang, fell in his tracks, dead. There was not a quiver of a muscle after he fell. The bullet had struck him in the right temple and ploughed through his brain and passed out just above the left eye. Emmet Dalton had the start of his brother, and before Spears could draw a bead on him he had dodged behind the corner of the bank and was making time in the direction of the alley where the bandits had tied their horses.

The shot which dropped Bob Dalton aroused "Texas Jack" and his men in Congdon's bank, where they were patiently waiting for the timelock of the safe to be sprung with the hour of 10. Running to the windows of the bank they saw their leader prostrate on the ground. Raising their rifles to their shoulders they fired one volley out of the windows. Cashier Ayers fell on the steps of his bank, shot through the groin. Shoemaker Brown of the attacking party in the square was shot through the body. He was quickly removed to his shop, but died just as he was carried within.

Spears' Rifle Again Speaks.

The firing attracted the attention of Marshal Connelly, who, collecting more men for his posse and with the few that he had already gathered, ran hurriedly to the scene of the conflict.

After firing their volley from the windows of the bank the bandits, appreciating that their only safety lay in flight, attempted to escape. They ran from the door of the bank, firing as they fled. The Marshal's posse in the square, without organization of any fired at the fleeing bandeach man for himself. Spears' Winchester spoke twice in quick succession before the of the posse could take aim, and Evans and "Texas Jack" fell both shot through the head, making three dead bandits to his credit. In general fusillade Grant E. Dalton, the two surviving members of Jack's" squad, Marshal Connel M. Baldwin, and George Cubine mortally wounded and died on the Allie Ogee, the only survivor of succeeded in escaping to the where the horses were tied, and the swiftest horse of the lot north in the direction of Indian et Dalton, who had escaped the First National Bank, had already reached the alley in safety, but had some trouble in getting mounted, and Allie Ogee had already his escape before Emmet got fairly started. Several of the posse, anticipating that horses would be required, were already mounted, and quickly pursued the escaping bandits. Emmet Dalton's horse was no match for the fresher animals of his pursuers. As the pursuers closed on him, he turned suddenly in his saddle, and fired upon his would-be captors.

The latter answered with a volley and Emmet toppled from his horse hard hit. He was brought back to town, and died later. He made an ante-mortem statement, confessing to the various crimes committed by the gang of which he was a member. Allie Ogee had about ten minutes' start of his pursuers, and was mounted on a swift horse.

After the battle was over search was made for the money which the bandits had secured from the two banks. It was found in the sacks where it had

A MARVEL IN BOOK-MAKING.

A Set of the Works of Charles Dickens, IN 12 LARGE VOLUMES, FREE.

There has just been published A Set of the Works of Charles Dickens, in Large and Handsome Volumes, printed from entirely new plates, with new type. By special arrangement with the publishers we are enabled to offer to our patrons this splendid set of Dickens' Works, postpaid, free. Charles Dickens was the greatest novelist who ever lived. No author before or since his time has won the fame that he achieved, and his works are even more popular to-day than during his lifetime. They abound in wit, humor, pathos, masterly delineation of character, vivid descriptions of places and incidents, thrilling and skillfully wrought plots. Each book is intensely interesting. No home should be without a set of these great and remarkable works. Not to have read them is to be far behind the age in which we live. The twelve volumes in this set contain the following world-famous works, each one of which is published complete, unchanged and absolutely unabridged:

DAVID COPPERFIELD,
MARTIN CHUZZLEWIT,
NICHOLAS NICKLEBY,
DOMBEY AND SON,
BLEAK HOUSE,
LITTLE DORRIT,
OUR MUTUAL FRIEND,
PICKWICK PAPERS,
BARNABY RUDGE AND CHRISTMAS STORIES,
OLIVER TWIST AND GREAT EXPECTATIONS,
THE OLD CURIOSITY SHOP AND THE UNCOMMERCIAL TRAVELER, A TALE OF TWO CITIES, HARD TIMES, AND THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD.

THE PLAN.

We will send a complete set of these books FREE, by mail, postage paid, guaranteeing safe delivery, as follows: To any old subscriber, who sends one dollar, for renewal of subscription to either of the following publications for one year:

THE PEOPLE'S LITERARY COMPANION,
—OR—
The National Farmer and Home Magazine

To any new subscriber, who sends one dollar for either of the above periodicals for one year. This is the grandest offer ever made, and the greatest bargain ever offered. Up to this time the price of a complete set of Dickens' Works has been ten dollars or more. The use of modern, improved printing, folding and stitching machinery, the present extremely low price of white paper, and the great competition in the book trade are the factors which make this splendid offer possible. Bear in mind that we offer, not a single volume, but the entire set of twelve volumes all free to subscribers! All may now afford the luxury of owning a handsome set of Dickens' works. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Do not neglect or put off this wonderful opportunity. Send at once; you will be delighted with the charming books, and as you live, never cease to regard it as the best investment of a dollar you ever made. Address all communications to and write, and are possessed of fair intelligence, you are fully qualified to make a grand success of what we offer you. We have lately published at great expense and labor a perfect wonder in the way of an Illustrated Gift Book, suitable to all classes, an ornament to any house, and at a price that brings it within the reach of all, even those of moderate means. Heretofore only those who indulged in luxuries have felt that they could afford a book of this class, as they are sold in book stores at $5.00 and upwards. The book which we offer is not in any way inferior to those above referred to, but is far superior to hundreds of books of this nature that are sold at prices exceeding ours by an enormous per cent. It is selling with a rush wherever shown. Agents have only to show the book and mention the price, and it sells on its merits without further talking. No better Christmas, New Year's or Birthday present can be selected. It will sell, not only for holiday trade, but at all seasons of the year, for the reason that all will want it in their homes, and will have it as soon as they know the low price at which our agents can furnish them. Reader, if you need profitable employment, and a business in which you can and will take pride, as well as make money rapidly, do not fail to send for circulars containing private terms to agents and full information which will be sent FREE upon application. Old and new agents alike are making handsome salaries—yes, fortunes. Many of those who are making the best records are new at the agency business, having had no previous experience. Make a start—the field is entirely new. No such terms have been offered agents as we now offer on this wonderful book. Special qualifications not necessary, for it sells everywhere at sight. Perhaps you have at some time been unsuccessful at the agency business. If so, there is every reason why you should try this, the PRINCE of gift books, as failure is impossible if you make A START. Write us to-day, study our circulars and directions, then order an outfit and go to work with push and energy. You may make the greatest mistake of your life if you allow this GOLDEN opportunity to pass unimproved.

Story of My Experience with Two Lovers.

BY ALEXANDRE DUMAS, JR.

LETTER NO. 1.

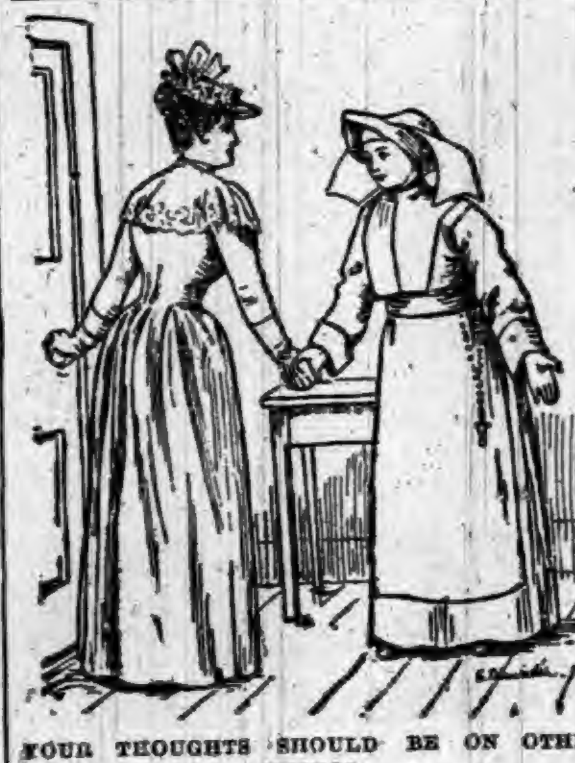
ADRIENNE TO HER SCHOOL FRIEND BLANCHE.

I'm quite out of patience with you. You promised to spend a fortnight with mamma and me in the country, and you knew perfectly well that you wouldn't be able to keep your promise. Why didn't you tell me the truth about it? I suppose you think a married woman should not converse with a young girl about such things. At least that's what mamma has just told me. In the first place, I'm no longer a little girl. I was eighteen my last birthday, and it's years and years ago that I unlearned my notions concerning the usefulness of the stork family. It would have been a very simple thing for you to write me a few lines explaining the situation to me. Have we ceased to be friends, then, because, forsooth, a married woman is not supposed to have young girls for her friends? Indeed, you take a very serious view of life. How much older are you than I? A year at the most. But you are now a married woman and must weigh your words lest you dispel the illusions of the marriageable maiden. Trash! My poor father had no such silly ideas, and that's another reason why his death was a blow to me.

Do you want to know my opinion on the subject of educating young girls? They should be brought up by their father when that father is an honorable and intelligent man, as mine was. Why do the mothers spurn the cooperation of the fathers in this matter? Why are they continually saying to the men: "You don't understand anything about educating girls."

And then why do they, the very next day, intrust not only the education but the very destiny of a daughter to a man whom she has just met—often a mere boy, without any experience himself and completely ignorant of the character, aspirations and ideas of his intended? The change would be much less abrupt and dangerous were it from the hands of a father to the arms of a husband. Yes, I mean it, for I saw how your husband put his arm around you when you went into the garden for a moonlight stroll!

Oh, that ridiculous moon, with its swollen mother-of-pearl Jack Pudding countenance! When I look at it—and I've been looking at it a great deal a fews days past—I can't help saying to myself what hasn't it seen and what hasn't it heard since the first love-scene in Eden? But how delightfully discreet! It never tells tales out of school, but calmly continues to chase up the sun without ever catching him. How patient! After we are gone it will continue to do so. Others will look at it and dream and hope, and hope and dream, and so on forever. How provoking it is not to amount to anything more! At times, dear Blanche, I've a great notion to betake me to a convent, to get into one of those big, white, woolen gowns, which never fit, to stop talking, stop thinking, stop living, in fact, just let time wear me away. But unfortunately in convents they don't wash themselves from head to foot every morning. If it weren't for that I'd bury myself in one of them at once. I'd be willing to give up my hair, which you may recollect is very beautiful, but I never could got accustomed to the idea of not having feet daintily white and scrupulously cared for. I go to see Sister Ursula sometimes, and while chatting with her the other day I made known to her how my yearnings and hesitations were always grappling with each other. I declared myself strong enough to triumph over these moments of weakness, provided the bishop would permit me to have next my cell a dressing room such as I have here. "Impossible!" she exclaimed, "the rules forbid it. And, besides, my daughter," she continued, "your thoughts should be on other things than your beautiful body."



FOUR THOUGHTS SHOULD BE ON OTHER THINGS.

"But, sister, don't you wash your body?"

"The fact is," she replied, as her eyes brightened with a smile, "by chance I caught a glimpse of my knees the other day, and they were so black that I was ashamed to stand in the presence of our dear Lord."

And think how praiseworthy this is, too, for Sister Ursula is not forty-two yet. She is still a beautiful woman, and, as you may remember, was a born princess. It makes no difference. I don't feel myself equal to such a sacrifice. I never could stand having black knees.

And yet, Blanche, I can't remain as I am. I have looked at the moon for whole hours, and it hasn't helped me out a bit. For this reason I've been looking forward with such great anxiety to have you with me, to advise me, to enlighten me. I wanted your judgment on matters and men. You must be very wise, now that you are a mother. Is it such an enrapturing thing for a woman to clasp a babe to her bosom? Which do you love the better, the father or the child? Or do you love them both the same? Do you commence to feel at home in this new walk of life? You may write freely to me, You may trust me as your other self. Mamma never reads my letters.

No doubt you say to yourself: If Adrienne is so much in need of advice, why doesn't she go to her mother or to Abbe Servan, her confessor? But, dear Blanche, I'm not an ordinary girl. Mine is an exceptional case. Mamma would think me moonstruck and Abbe Servan wouldn't understand me. Mamma would offer to take me away for a short trip somewhere and Abbe Servan would counsel me to seek aid and comfort in prayer. The good Lord has other things to attend to, and, besides, although my case is a peculiar one, I don't think it hardly serious enough to call for an interposition of Providence. Possibly it's very natural and very ordinary, this case of mine, and only seems strange to me because it's new to me.

Well, this is it: Mamma wants me to get married, and theoretically I have no objections. I suppose it is absolutely necessary to get married, and the younger the better. I'm speaking of women. I wouldn't like to marry a man of my own age. A difference in ages of six or seven years seems to me to be called for. Papa has been dead two years, and mamma left off mourning the beginning of last winter, and although she kept strictly to violets and grays, yet she had her afternoons at home and her evenings. She was quietly bringing me out. Everybody understood it. I'm in the market and somewhat of a catch, too. I'm neither ugly, poor, stupid, nor consumptive. My parents are of good family and stand high. There's nothing of the fortune-hunter about me, nor shall I be influenced by vanity in making choice of a husband. Our securities are all gilt-edged; there will be no danger of a crash. I haven't the slightest ambition to move in any higher grade of society, to hear myself announced as Duchess or Princess at receptions to which a title would be a passport. Besides, my dear Blanche, haven't we a "de" already? Am I not Mademoiselle Adrienne de Marias? How old it is I don't know, but it's quite sufficient to distinguish us from tradespeople. Everybody treats us as if we were entitled to it; no holding up of hands, no sly grimaces.

Now as to my notion as to what a husband should be, let me say that I have no silly ideals, no school-girl dreams. I don't want any phenomenon, any hero. I want him to be in good health and with something to occupy his time up to dinner hour. After that he must love me, must be mine, And my idea of marriage, too, is that the wife should have much more liberty than is usually accorded her. Wherever I go, when mamma isn't with me, my governess is at my heels. It's beginning to be a little tiresome, this business! I would take an airing all alone by myself. I hear certain books talked about. I want to read them. I hear them pronounced to be masterpieces and they hide them away from me. How can a book be a masterpiece and yet a young girl of my age be forbidden to read it? Perhaps one of these books might enlighten me as to my peculiar situation! I don't think I ask too much. In fact, I think I'm a very reasonable person, and I should have succeeded very easily in being quite happy if something which was quite as unexpected as it has become complicated hadn't happened to me.

I'll tell you about it in another letter, dear Blanche. Meanwhile, little mother, bye-bye. Wholly thine. ADRIENNE.

LETTER NO. 2.

SAME TO SAME.

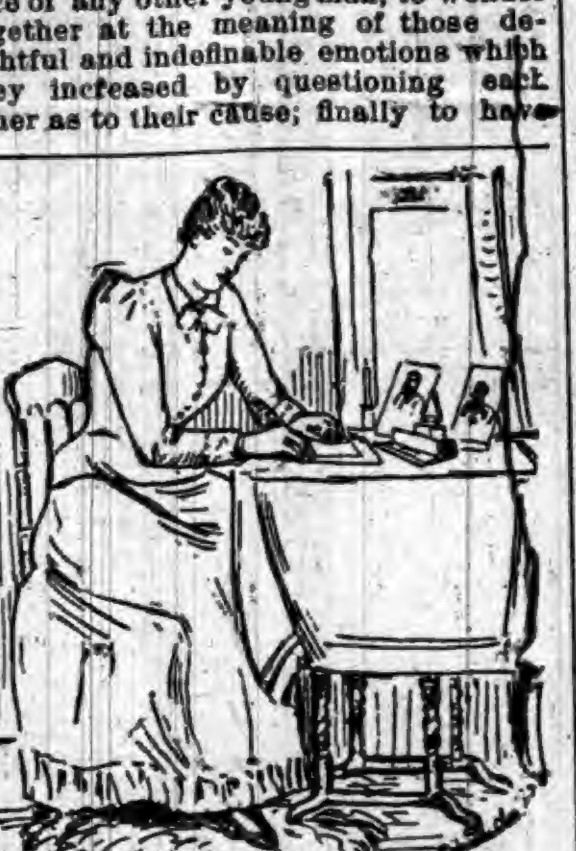
Last winter you recollect meeting M. de Villelong at our house, don't you, dear Blanche? Madame de Pontlouis had introduced him to us. She made no secret of the motive which induced her to present the Baron, for he is a baron and a real one, too. She admitted to mamma that the matchmaker's mania had come upon her, and that she was looking out for me. I had already met this young man, had often danced with him. I rather liked him, and the moment I saw him at the house I knew what it meant. Anyway, mamma was open and aboveboard in the matter. She told me to look upon him as a suitor for my hand. Said mamma, with faultless pronunciation and admirable intonation:

"His position, my darling, his age, his fortune, his family, his antecedents are perfectly satisfactory to me, but it's for you to decide. You are not supposed to know anything about the man. Study him at your leisure. I don't want to influence you in the least."

You remember him, don't you, dear Blanche? You met him just about the time you were married. I think you must have noticed him—tall, thin, blonde, a good head of hair and a fine beard, handsome teeth, rather small head, broad shoulders, in a word, every indication of physical strength. A lover should be strong, shouldn't he? It's such a delightful feeling to know that you have a protector by your side, one that doesn't fear man or demon, fire or water. His feet do very well. He always keeps them perfectly dressed, and he's very careful with his hands, too, although they're a little hard. He rides well, he is witty and full of fun, and I need scarcely add belongs to several of the swell clubs. They say he has had many first-rate chances, and I don't wonder at it. How I came to know? Why, I have heard mamma's friends speak of him just as they do of any young man in society when they don't foresee his presentation as a suitor. Of course, they spoke in enigmas, but I understood well enough. The simple fact is, dear Blanche, that it is utterly impossible to bring up a girl nowadays in complete ignorance of the affairs of actual life. The morning journals are filled with these topics which become subjects of discourse at the small dances. A young girl hears the names of her partners coupled with the first names of certain ladies whose carriages pass and repass ours on the Champs Elysees, in the Bois and elsewhere. We meet them in the shops, we run against them in the establishments of the great men milliners. They set our fashions for us, they furnish us with husbands. When they become ours do they give up the old set or does the old set give up them? In short, we girls of this day and generation are initiated into a thousand and one things of which the girls of the good old times didn't even suspect the existence. If we live in Paris we soon learn to know that all marriages are not made in heaven and that the "contracting parties," as the divorce courts call them, don't always behave themselves with perfect propriety.

It's shameful when you come to think of it. And sometimes it even happens that we make our boast of the fact that the young man who asks for us in marriage is no milksop, that he has sown a plentiful crop of wild oats, etc., instead of shrinking from him in disgust as we would if we respected ourselves! Suppose for an instant, little mother, that it were possible for a young man to escape all this contamination, with a single purpose to remain faithful and true to his beloved, and suppose he should present himself some fine day full of ignorance and lofty ideals and ask for—say—my hand, do you suppose mamma would encourage him? Not a bit of it. She'd refuse him at first; anyway, she'd say that he didn't know enough of life. And to judge from the little I have overheard of such conversation, she and her friends would have a good laugh over the poor fellow. Why?

I've just been re-reading "Paul and Virginia." Oh, who will set me down beneath the glowing sky of the isle of France, on the shores of the River des Lataniers, in the Allee des Pamplemousses? Why is not Madame de La Tour, or even Marguerite, not my mother? Where are the cabins in which Paul and I were raised? To have run barefoot [illegible] childhood in those very paths with this chosen brother, to have gone astray innocently in those vast forests, to have been shielded from the storm by the same skirt turned up over both our heads, to have crossed the streams carried in his arms without fear, rocked by the gentle rise and fall of his breast, never to have seen the face of any other young man, to wonder together at the meaning of those delightful and indefinable emotions which they increased by questioning each other as to their cause; finally to have but one roof, one bower, one grave, one eternity—such, such is the dream of every young girl, isn't it, dearest Blanche?



I'VE JUST BEEN RE-READING "PAUL AND VIRGINIA."

Why may it not be realized? Why must we be satisfied with these society Pauls who have been in love with a whole string of Virginias before they met us? Well, as men and marriage go now-a-days, M. de Villelong seemed to me to be a very desirable catch, and several of my girl friends made haste to tell me, which naturally set him up in my estimation not a little. I soon became accustomed to seeing him, yes, even longed for it! I got in the way of expecting him on the days he was to call and if I was to meet him in society I had him in my thoughts while was dressing. When he approached me, I watched his face to see if he guessed my desire to please him, and my heart gave a joyous leap when I saw that he understood me. I must admit, dear Blanche, it was wonderful how he could divine my thoughts!

One fine day I said to mamma: "After thinking it well over, I'm convinced I love M. de Villelong, and I should be perfectly satisfied to marry him!" You know mamma, Blanche. She abominates eagerness in anything. "You love him, do you?" she replied. "Love is a big word. We'll talk about it in a month or two. That will be time enough. I suppose, of course, that he is in earnest. You may continue to meet him, but I have entered into no compact with him or his family. Let things go of their own accord. He hasn't proposed yet. Wait till he does, and then we'll see about it. The happiest hours of married life are those in which we long impatiently for it to begin!"

From this time on, however, I considered myself as engaged, although I didn't pronounce the actual words, and more's the pity. I used often to discuss marriage with Casimir—that's his first name, and I don't like it any too much. But mine were glittering generalities, such as: "It would appear to me;" "If I should marry, I would insist," etc.; or "I should indulge the hope." I took good care that these elastic views should be very vaguely expressed. He always agreed with me; he does still. No more to-day, little mother. Lovingly, ADRIENNE.

LETTER NO. 3.

SAME TO SAME.

Fancy our surprise, dear Blanche, at this juncture to receive a letter from an aunt of mine, or rather from the sister of the husband of the sister of my uncle (do you follow me?), a letter announcing her return to France after a sojourn of several years in Algiers, and asking if it would be agreeable for her and her son to spend a few weeks with us. She's a charming woman, and I had been very fond of her. The son is a young officer, and having had an attack of fever had been granted a furlough and was to spend it in France. His mother was delighted to get back to France to see her old friends and to show off her boy, who wears a decoration of which she is very proud. But he has no title and no "de"; he's plain Rene Caulon, lieutenant of the Third Zouaves. I remembered him as a chubby-cheeked boy, not very wide-awake, awful bashful, in fact, quite ordinary.

Well, I was Medusaed! In walked a tall, slender, graceful fellow, very thin and pale from the attack of fever, browned up by an African sun, with large, sea-green eyes, black lashes, black eyebrows, black mustache, black tuft of beard, cheek bones sticking out, Adam's apple in bold relief, the head of a defiant consumptive, for he had the shoulders of a Hercules. But all this pallor and this emaciation were the effect of a mere accident, a few weeks' rest would cure them. With the confiding and expansive manner of a person who feels sure of her happiness, I welcomed my aunt with a hearty kiss and held out my hand to her son.

"How do you do, cousin?" I said with unaffected gayety.

"How do you do, my dear cousin?" he replied, kissing my hand with a charmingly easy grace.

"Went Down Stern First—One of Mr. Vanderbilt's Guests Had a Narrow Escape." That is a heading which appeared in the Philadelphia Times the morning after Vanderbilt's yacht was sunk in a collision. The Times doesn't state the manner in which the guest came up.

WHILE it is undeniable that Gladstone returns to power under difficult and trying circumstances, his strength seems to be fully equal to any demands which may be made upon it. The veteran of many a hard struggle, both in Parliament and out, drove thirty miles in an open carriage recently without especial fatigue, and his voice is vigorous and powerful as of old. If the great leader of the British Liberals were twenty years younger than he is, his physical condition would still be remarkable.

THE clergy list has few more generous men than the Rev. Edward A. Hoffman, of New York, who has just sent in another check for $25,000 to the endowment fund of St. Stephen's College, Annandale, N. Y., making his total gift to date to that institution $175,000.

"STAFF" is a rhyme for "scarf" in New England, and the poet who has trouble in making his rhymes meet need no longer hesitate about going to Boston. Whether he makes both ends meet after he gets there is another question.

Australian Sorcery.

Among the natives of Finke River, Australia, if one falls sick or dies they at once conclude he must have been bewitched or bitten, or hurt by the devil. At the same time they can bewitch others, the old ones and the medicine men fostering that belief. For this purpose they employ a variety of agencies as charms, including implements of wood and bone, which are thrown by the sorcerers in the direction of their enemy to make him sick or kill him, tufts of feathers of the emu and eagle to give the wearers strength to kill their enemies, and a little implement, about six inches long, of bone or wood, worn through the septum of the nose, by means of which they also think they can hurt others.

GANTER'S MAGIC CHICKEN CHOLERA CURE!

Thousands of dollars worth of chickens are destroyed by Cholera every year. It is more fatal to them than all other diseases combined. But the discovery of a liquid remedy that positively destroys the Microbes has been made. Half of the young chickens are killed by Microbes before they are fryers. A 50-cent bottle is enough for 100 chickens. It is guaranteed. If, after using two thirds of a bottle, you are not satisfied with it as a cure for Cholera, return it to the druggist from whom you purchased it, and he will refund your money.

MARYLAND ROASTER AND BAKER

IMPROVED
ROASTER & BAKER

FOR MEATS, FOWL, FISH, ETC., AND FOR BAKING BREAD, CAKES AND PUDDINGS.

BEST SIMPLEST AND CHEAPEST

THE STEAM produced by the process of cooking cannot escape, is absorbed by the article in the roaster, and acts as a basting. There is no evaporation, no drying up or burning, hence no shrinkage or loss of weight, and all the flavor and nutritious qualities of the food are retained. Tough meats are made tender, and any article roasted or baked will be sweeter, healthier and more digestible. Put the food in the roaster, place the roaster in a well heated oven; the roaster will do the cooking. It requires no attention. Can only be bought from dealers, the trade supplied by

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, post-office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY.......OCTOBER 13, 1892.

VOORHEES.
AT AUBURN.

Indiana's favorite orator, the "Tall Sycamore of the Wabash," will speak at Auburn on the afternoon of

Thursday, October 20,

No man, of any party, can afford to miss hearing one of the very ablest men in the United States Senate. For many years Mr. Voorhees has ranked with the highest. All come.

HON. W. F. MCNAGNY will speak at Cedar Creek, on Friday, Oct. 21st, at 7 p. m. The democrats of that vicinity will raise a hickory pole that afternoon.

OVER 500 strikes have been recorded since the McKinley bill went into effect. A great help for the workingmen, truly.

THE people's party at their recent parade in Ft. Wayne, serenaded the republican headquarters, proving the close friendship those two parties have for one another.

PECK's report in New York, that wages were raised a little from 1890 to 1891, should have gone right on to let us know about wages in 1892. There is no doubt that the total amount paid out for wages this year is much less than last year.

PEARL button factories, they tell us, are a new American industry. Notice the fact, that they are made only in Newark, N. J., by prison labor under contract; at Detroit work house, by prison labor; at Chester, Ill. penitentiary, by prison labor, contrary to law, too. Great American industry.

GOV. POSTER, who saddled so much of our state debt on us, has come back from Italy, to help his party in the canvass. He is the governor who was authorized to spend $600,000 on the new asylums, and went on and spent $1,400,000, or more than twice as much. There is where our debt started.

QUEER case decided in an Iowa court A meteor weighing 66 pounds fell on a man's farm. Another man saw it fall, dug it out and sold it for $165. The owner of the land sued to get this money, and the court decided that all meteoric stones that fell on a man's land belong to the owner of the land.

BEATEN at every point on the tariff issue, republicans are now working the wild cat money scheme. Again they deceive. They talk about "wild cat banks," when the democratic platform speaks of "state banks," a thing entirely different. Wild cat banks were private banks established by parties who were not responsible, and of course their bills went down. State banks were responsible banks, on good security and their money was good. But early in the war, the U. S. government, in order to make its own notes acceptable—the greenbacks, etc.,—put a tax on state bank circulation so high as to compel those banks to call in all their paper money, and take it out of circulation. But many of them went right on with their other banking business. Now, as the national banks begin to call in their paper money, something is needed to take its place, in order that people may have paper money enough. So, the proposition, though it may never be carried out, is simply to repeal the law, which has not been enforced for 28 years, and let those banks issue paper money if they desire, and in limited amounts and under sound and safe conditions. We defy any republican to disprove the statements in this article.

Good for the Commissioners'

Few counties in the state had a more intelligent or conscientious board of commissioners than DeKalb, and they met the new assessment law half way at least. When the assessments were put up to a nearer correct figure, they lowered the county rate from 91 cents to 41 cents, less than half. The trustees, in part, did the same way. The following shows the total rates levied in the county under the old law, and the new.

	Old	New
Butler township	$1.79	$1.25
Jackson "	1 94	1.15
Concord "	2.04	1 20
Newville "	2 04	1 40
Stafford "	1.79	1 20
Wilmington "	1.69	1.00
Union "	1 59	1 00
Richland "	1 94	1 20
Fairfield "	1.84	1 20
Smithfield "	1.94	1.20
Franklin "	2.04	1 20
Troy "	1 89	1.05
Keyser "	2 09	1.10
Grant "	1 94	1 00
Auburn	3.49	1.75
Waterloo	2 04	1 21
Butler	2 04	1.20
Garrett	3 94	1.70

This shows that the rate under the new law is only about half the old rate. The members of the board, thus kindly remembered the rights of the people, were, John Hoffelder, James Henderson and G. I. Patterson. The people should read this.

Prohibition Beer.

Now, we don't mean the prohibitionists drink beer. But we remember being present at the county convention of the people's party, at the Opera House, when they adopted, unanimously, a platform, which was prohibition pure and simple. The plank reads:

"15. We recognize the saloon as dangerous to society, and causes much political corruption. Therefore, we demand its suppression."

In view of all this we were surprised to hear, that last week, some wicked democrats and no less wicked people's party men had met at a certain place in Jackson township for a quiet interview with a case of beer. They had got about once around, when the door quietly opened, and here came about a score of people's party men, with another case of beer. Before the last man went home both these cases of the "evil" had been completely "suppressed." It was strange. But no less strange was it, that early next morning, some honest people's party man, had carried the good news to the Dispatch, the republican county paper. It somehow appears that the people's party and the republicans are working together to elect the republican ticket.

District Flags.

The good work goes bravely on. Phil. Noel, of Butler township, reports money raised at No. 2, the center, and a flag bought. Jake Miller reports the same for No. 7, east of New Era, and both will celebrate, Oct. 21.

A letter from ex trustee C. H. Brown, who is teaching in District No. 4, Concord township, states that his district has raised $7 for the purchase of a flag.

In the same township, A. C Kœppe, at Spencerville, reports $11.85; will have a big time there. E. Bates, principal at St. Joe, reports $9.50, and, that Miss Curie, at No. 5, has received $6 30, Chas. Johnson, at No. 7, the old Hoisington district, reports $8 signed, $5 being paid in.

Trustee Woodcox writes, that $5 60 is required for a 6x10 flag, and most of them have several dollars over. The extra money will be used to put up poles for the flags. (We think they should be on the school house, where this can be conveniently done.) St. Joe and Spencerville will each have a flag 10x16. All the schools will meet at St. Joe in the afternoon of the 21st, and have a grand celebration. Prof. W. H. McIntosh will deliver the address, which fact is a guarantee of the interesting meeting they will have. As one of our former superintendents, the selection was most appropriate.

THE Record is informed we were right in stating that the democrats in congress did not make a billion dollar congress of it. They would have saved 100 millions, but for a lot of big deficiences made by the billion dollar congress. And then the republican senate raised the appropriations 32 millions, and refused to pass bills unless it was agreed to. If democrats had controlled both houses, more than 100 millions would have been saved.

Don't forget the date of Hon. D. W Voorhees, at Auburn, Oct. 20.

Formal Opening.

Friday and Saturday, Oct. 21 and 22, at R. Shull's store. On Saturday the 22nd, a souvenier of the occasion will be presented to every lady visiting the store.

The Big 4.

We do not refer to the C. C. C & C Ry., or any such matters, but to a well established and favorably known DeKalb county institution, the "Big Four" business establishment at St. Joe. St. Joe as a town is as full of business as is the proverbial crowded omnibus is full of passengers. They are after business down there and they make it an object for people to patronize them. The "Big 4," we have mentioned, strikes out to lead in several ways. It is, to be more plain as to titles, the great combined store, formerly occupied and controlled by J. D Leighty, on the south side of the main street in that thriving town. It is now controlled by the new company composed of M E Olds, J. K Stafford, W. C. and Bert Patterson, and this combination of business strength and experience, gives the firm its popular name of "Big 4" And it is a big four, both in point of enterprise and ability, as well as in the amount, quality and variety of the stock they carry. A visit to their town recently, meant of course, a look over this establishment of which we had heard so much. Entering the west room from the main street entrance, one is ushered in a large, commodious store, in which are found several complete lines of goods. At the left, will be seen the stock of boots and shoes, while following these, on both sides are stocks of goods, including general merchandise, a grocery department, crockery department, dry goods department and a full line of everything the people would want Going from this floor, up into the half story at the rear end, we come to the cloak department, where the ladies will find every sort of wrap from which to select for the winter wear. The stock is new and full Passing up to the full second story we come to the ready made clothing, of which they have a big line of the latest styles, and all at bottom rates Hats and caps, are of course included. And after noting all these departments, we should add, that more room is needed, and they are putting up an extensive addition at the rear. In the basement, are the heavy goods, such as crocks and such things as must be kept apart from lighter goods. The middle room of their block is devoted partly to drugs, and all fancy articles included in that line, and partly to jewelry, of which they have a large stock, including fine gold watches, silver ware and all the line of goods in this class. In the east room, is the bank, where W. C. Patterson, presides with grace and dignity, dealing out shekels "to the uttermost farthing." The St. Joe Bank is convenient, in fact indispensable feature of the town and surrounding country, and has a good patronage. In this brief outline of the "Big 4" we have only "skimmed off a little," and for want of time and space, must ask our people of that section to call and see for themselves. The gentlemanly proprietors, will show you all, freely, and dismiss you with a polite bow, whether you invest or not.

Another Enterprise.

They say, "Competition is the life of business," and we are so situated in life that the strikingly familiar expression entitles our reiterancy and endorsement of it, when it is substantiated by the push and energy of less than a superfluity of persons engaged in that particular line of business for which the expression is made. We have no superabundance of business enterprises in Auburn, hence the expression, that, is fully sanctioned, and we will hasten to acquaint our readers of the fact that a new competitor has made his ingress to the realms of business life at this place. His name is DAVID NEFF.

"COMPETITION IS THE LIFE OF TRADE,"

He is a brother to our fellow countryman, John Neff, who lives south of town. On Tuesday, he opened up a stock of groceries in the Draggoo building south of the jail, where he will be prepared to supply the people in this vicinity with whatever they may wish in that line. He will carry a full invoice of groceries, provisions, general produce, etc., and in fact, everything to be found in a first-class store of its kind. Mr. Neff came here two years ago, from New Jersey, and has made his home here ever since. He is a citizen and gentleman worthy of the patronage of an appreciative public, and we hope to see him prosper under the invigorating influence of a profitable business.

THE COURIER appreciates the compliment the people of Concord bestow on it, by making reports to its columns. We assure them our interest in DeKalb's teachers and scholars, still goes with them into their daily labors.

The C. L. S. C. meets with Mrs. Askew Saturday afternoon. Program, Grecian History, Mrs. Plum; United States and Foreign Powers, Mrs. Dills; International Institutions, Laura Ober; Municipal Institutions, Mrs. McKay.

F. E. Miner, foreman of the Columbia City Commercial, made this office a very pleasant call Wednesday morning, while on his way to Chicago. As a crafteman, Mr. Miner is right up to date, and strikingly original in his printing.

W. A. Austin was at home over Sunday from Auburn, where he has been taking treatment at Dr. Swarts' sanitarium for rheumatism. Mr. Austin is much improved and thinks another week will effect a cure.—Ashley Times.

What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world, and then have the dyspepsia so bad that he can't enjoy any of the good things it contains? He won't have dyspepsia if he takes DeWitt's Little Early Risers. Robbins & McCord

There will be a musical at the reading room Friday evening, for the benefit of that institution. It will be under the direction of Mrs. Garwood, and by Auburn talent. This assures us an enjoyable entertainment, and we hope to see a liberal patronage.

DRESSMAKING AND SEWING: I wish to say to the ladies of Auburn and vicinity, that I will do dressmaking and sewing in the best style, and promptly. Call on me at my residence on South Jackson street, near Presbyterian church.

MRS. R. D. TEFFT.

Wm. Ludwig thinks we put him in the wrong place last week, when we said he got his fingers mangled at the Monitor factory Sunday. We didn't mean Sunday, we meant Thursday, and we don't know how the error happened. However he is getting better, and we are glad of it.

VERY MUCH SURPRISED: I have been afflicted with neuralgia for nearly two years, have tried physicians and all known remedies, but found no permanent relief until I tried a bottle of Dullman's Great German Liniment and it gave me instant and permanent relief. 25 cents per bottle. Signed, A. B. Snell, Hamilton, Mich. For sale by Casebeer & Matheny.

The Opera House has been greatly improved recently, by changing and remodeling the dressing rooms, and making provisions for better comfort of the stage people. New chimneys for the stoves have been put up, and the roof repaired. The managers will leave nothing undone to give the public good entertainments, and to secure comfort for both audience and actors.

The Waterloo fair had a good week and a good attendance. There was a good display in some departments, especially good in the agricultural exhibits when we consider the bad season. There were 312 plates of apples, and 382 entries in canned fruit and jellies. In speed it was not as good as last year and possibly in stock generally. The receipts, however, were favorable, and will enable them to pay off another slice of the debt.

Invitations are out for the approaching marriage, Oct. 19, of W. B. Campbell of the Dispatch and Miss Sarah Tarney. The lady is a daughter of Samuel J. Tarney, of Jackson township, a graduate of the State Normal school at Terre Haute, where she has also been for several years, a teacher. She has also given much time to institute work, receiving high compliments wherever she has been. The COURIER has noticed many good words and wishes in its exchanges, regarding the happy event, and of course joins its newspaper friends in hearty congratulations for both bride and groom.

Schnell & Weeks are hustlers in the grocery trade. They have a well stocked room and can offer unlimited inducements to customers. Remember their place of business south of the jail Auburn.

E. M. Bishop, the tobacconist, seems to be enjoying the lucrativeness of a profitable patronage. He handles the choicest brands of manufactured goods and does a general wholesale and retail business.

Mrs. Charles Bartels, Mrs. John Harley and Mrs. Wm. Kruse, called at our sanctum last Saturday. The last two are daughters of Fred Bartels, and Mrs. Harley mourns the death of her little son, as noted elswhere.

Auburn people now have a chance to get even with Gilbert, the republican candidate for prosecutor. He is the man who had the contract for constructing the Wagoner ditch through town. We presume several property owners will remember him in their ballots.

The carpet department of the Foster Furniture Co., at Ft. Wayne, commands an immense patronage. They handle only the best known makes, which are sure to give entire satisfaction when put to the test of hard and long services. The fall designs for 1892 are very beautiful.

The Nebraska agricultural exhibit that stopped here last Thursday, was a grand thing. Many of our people went to see it, and were highly pleased. It beat any ordinary agricultural exhibit at a fair of course, as it was a larger and more general collection. The vegetables and grains were fine.

The four speeches at Waterloo last Wednesday, were listened to by a fair sized audience. The speakers were up to the average in point of ability, and we think the people went away better informed. This is the only fair way in politics. Let us have more joint discussions. The democrats are right, and are not afraid to have all parties hear them.

Clerk Bishop goes out of office the 25th of this month, and Mr. Moody takes his place. Mr. Williams becomes recorder, Nov. 1, and all the county offices, except commissioner of the southwest district, will then be filled with democrats. And even the southwest district can hardly boast of a republican, as Mr. Lockwood declares he will vote the people's ticket. But as he is working with Mr. Provines, the republican chairman, and their candidate for treasurer, it goes to prove what we have always asserted, that the republicans are using the new party to help elect the republican ticket. Of course all the leaders know this.

For President.
GROVER CLEVELAND,
OF NEW YORK.
For Vice President.
ADLAI E. STEVENSON,
OF ILLINOIS.

HARRISON may not admit that he is whipped, but he must confess that he is clearly outclassed.

CHAIRMAN CARTER is sitting out on the back steps crying Cleveland's letter is a fatal blow to his ambition.

HAD Cleveland's election been in doubt his magnificent letter of acceptance would have insured him a victory.

IF your Uncle Benjamin thinks that silence gives consent he must be immensely tickled with the letter of Mr. Blaine.

EFFECTIVE protests against combines, trusts, and other iniquities of protection can only be made effectively at the polls.

COMMISSIONER PECK'S labor report was not worth the money the Republicans paid for it. It is about as important as an exploded firecracker.

AS LONG as Foraker ceased talking Republicanism Ohio was regarded as a safe Republican State. If he keeps on it will soon be on the doubtful list.

"YOUNG men to the front!" cries the high-tariff Inter Ocean. The young man who goes to the front for the tariff dishonesty will eventually find himself behind.

THERE may be ten thousand arguments for a high tariff and ten thousand more for double taxation; but nothing can cover up the wrong upon which both are based.

BLOCKS-OF-FIVE DUDLEY offers to bet that the Democatic majority in Indiana will not exceed 20,000. Dudley always was a modest sort of a man in his claims.

THAT was a thrilling race between Gov. McKinley and the sheriff at Elwood, Ind., but the Governor got there in time to open the new tin plate works before the sheriff could close them.

BLAINE is going to spend the winter in Washington. He will take a good deal of pleasure in watching Harrison arrange his worldly affairs for a return to Indianapolis after March 4.

THE number of persons employed under the McKinley bill under $5 a week amounted last year to 46,792 in the protected industries of the single State of Massachusetts. The figures are official and direct from the records.

IT won't do for Mr. Blaine to plead that he was "paired off" at the recent Maine election. If this new fangle of pairing off at election is to become popular the Republicans will soon find themselves without a Reed quorum to pass even a pension bill.

THE speech delivered at Carroll by Gov. Boles in opening the Iowa campaign shows the temper of the Western Democrats. They are in for a fight to a finish with the force bill and McKinley bill plutocracy, and under such leaders as Boies rallying them behind Cleveland, they are moving on Harrison's works.

MR. HARRISON'S letter was about three times as long as Mr. Cleveland's, but there is more in the following sentence of the ex-President's letter than there is in the whole of the President's: "My record as a public servant leaves no excuse for misunderstanding my beliefs and position on the questions which are now presented to the voters of the land for their decision."

THE Massachusetts Report on Manufactures shows a less increase in product for 1891 over 1890 than over 1889. In the highly protected carpet and woolen industry the percentage of the "industry product" paid in wages in 1891 showed a reduction from former years. In all industries there was an increase in the number of persons employed at wages of under $5 a week, and they now amount to over 46,000 in that one State.

THE Chicago Times devotes a large amount of its space to a long list of foreign ministers and consuls who are coming home to help pull Mr. Harrison through. There is no doubt that, when the President's army of office holders, headed by his Cabinet, got fairly in motion they will make a strong fight, even as Sullivan made against Corbett, to protect their stomachs.

THE Republican organs are pretending to see something ominous in the fact that Hill mentioned Cleveland's name but once in his speech. How much more ominous is the fact that Blaine did not mention Harrison's name in his letter even once, and that Reed has made a dozen speeches without once referring to his party's candidate, either directly or indirectly.

THE returns for August show that our exports of breadstuffs fell off $7,750,000 as compared with the same month last year. Another fact for farmers to consider is that the price of wheat in August of this year averaged only 84 cents a bushel, as against $1.06 in August, 1891. Here is a lessened demand and a falling off of more than 20 per cent in price, in spite of the McKinley bill that was to bring prosperity to the farmers.

THE largest vote ever cast in the State of Maine was polled at the recent election. Compared with the next largest polling—the Presidential election of 1888—the Republican loss was 6,149; Democratic gain, 4,592; Prohibition gain, 1,090; Labor gain, 316. The Populists polled 3,005 votes. The net Democratic gain was 10,741. When one studies these figures he can well understand the anxiety of the Republican managers to have Mr. Blaine, whom President Harrison kicked out of office, go on the stump and say a few words for the national ticket.

MISERABLE failure attended President Harrison's attempt to make political capital by bulldozing feeble powers, and he now proposes a new illustration of his jingo policy by sending ships of war to Venezuela on the slim pretense that "American interests" are endangered. It is also hinted by organs friendly to the President that he proposes to rebuke Great Britain and make that nation change its policy. All this would be laughable were it not for the fact that it is humiliating for the people of this country to have other nations sneering at the effort of demagogues to secure political power by such means.

THE Republicans are now claiming that Mr. Harrison ought to be re-elected on the tariff issue because the report of the New York Bank Superintendent shows an annual increase of the savings bank deposits in New York since the passage of the McKinley bill. If the volume of savings deposits is due to the McKinley bill, then the measure has had a very injurious effect, for the annual increase of savings deposits in New York before the enactment of that bill was greater by several millions than it has been since. The Republicans would better confine themselves to the tin plate, pearl buttons, maple sugar and wildcat bank issues.

REPUBLICAN editors require a good deal of space to say there is nothing in Cleveland's letter. The Albany Express, one of his most bitter enemies, takes one and one-half columns; the Columbus Dispatch has one and one-fourth colums; the New York Advertiser—a guerrilla sheet—devotes one and one-half columns to the proposition that Cleveland's letter is not worth answering. The Brooklyn Standard-Union, Murat Halstead's paper, has two columns of fine type. The Philadelphia Ledger uses three-fourths of a column of fine type assuring its readers that the candidate of Democracy indulges in nothing but platitudes and apologies. The Ledger's columns are very long. The same article would make nearly or quite two columns in the Chicago Herald. All the rest of the partisan crew are equally prolix—and inconsistent. From which, we may judge, Mr. Cleveland is proved to have written a very excellent letter.

FULL official returns from Maine show that the Republicans polled 67,870 votes and the Democrats 55,390; Republican plurality, 12,480. Four years ago the Republicans polled 79,398, and the Democrats 61,350; Republican plurality, 18,058. The Republican vote fell off this year 11,528, and the Democratic 5,960. In other words, the Republican loss was 14.51 per cent. of their vote in 1888, and the Democratic loss 9.51 per cent. of theirs. Republicans affect to regard the slump in Maine of no consequence, but a similar loss in pivotal States will be fatal to them in November. Applying the proportion to the New York vote for President in 1888, it will give Cleveland over 19,000 plurality. A similar loss would make Indiana Democratic by over 10,000, New Hampshire Democratic by 144, and Ohio Democratic by 2,275. The same ratio of loss would nearly annihilate the Republican majority in Illinois. It is very evident that, if the Republicans maintain the pace that they have set in Maine and Vermont, Mr. Harrison is beaten.

ALL FOR CLEVELAND.

NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC CLUBS HEAR HIM.

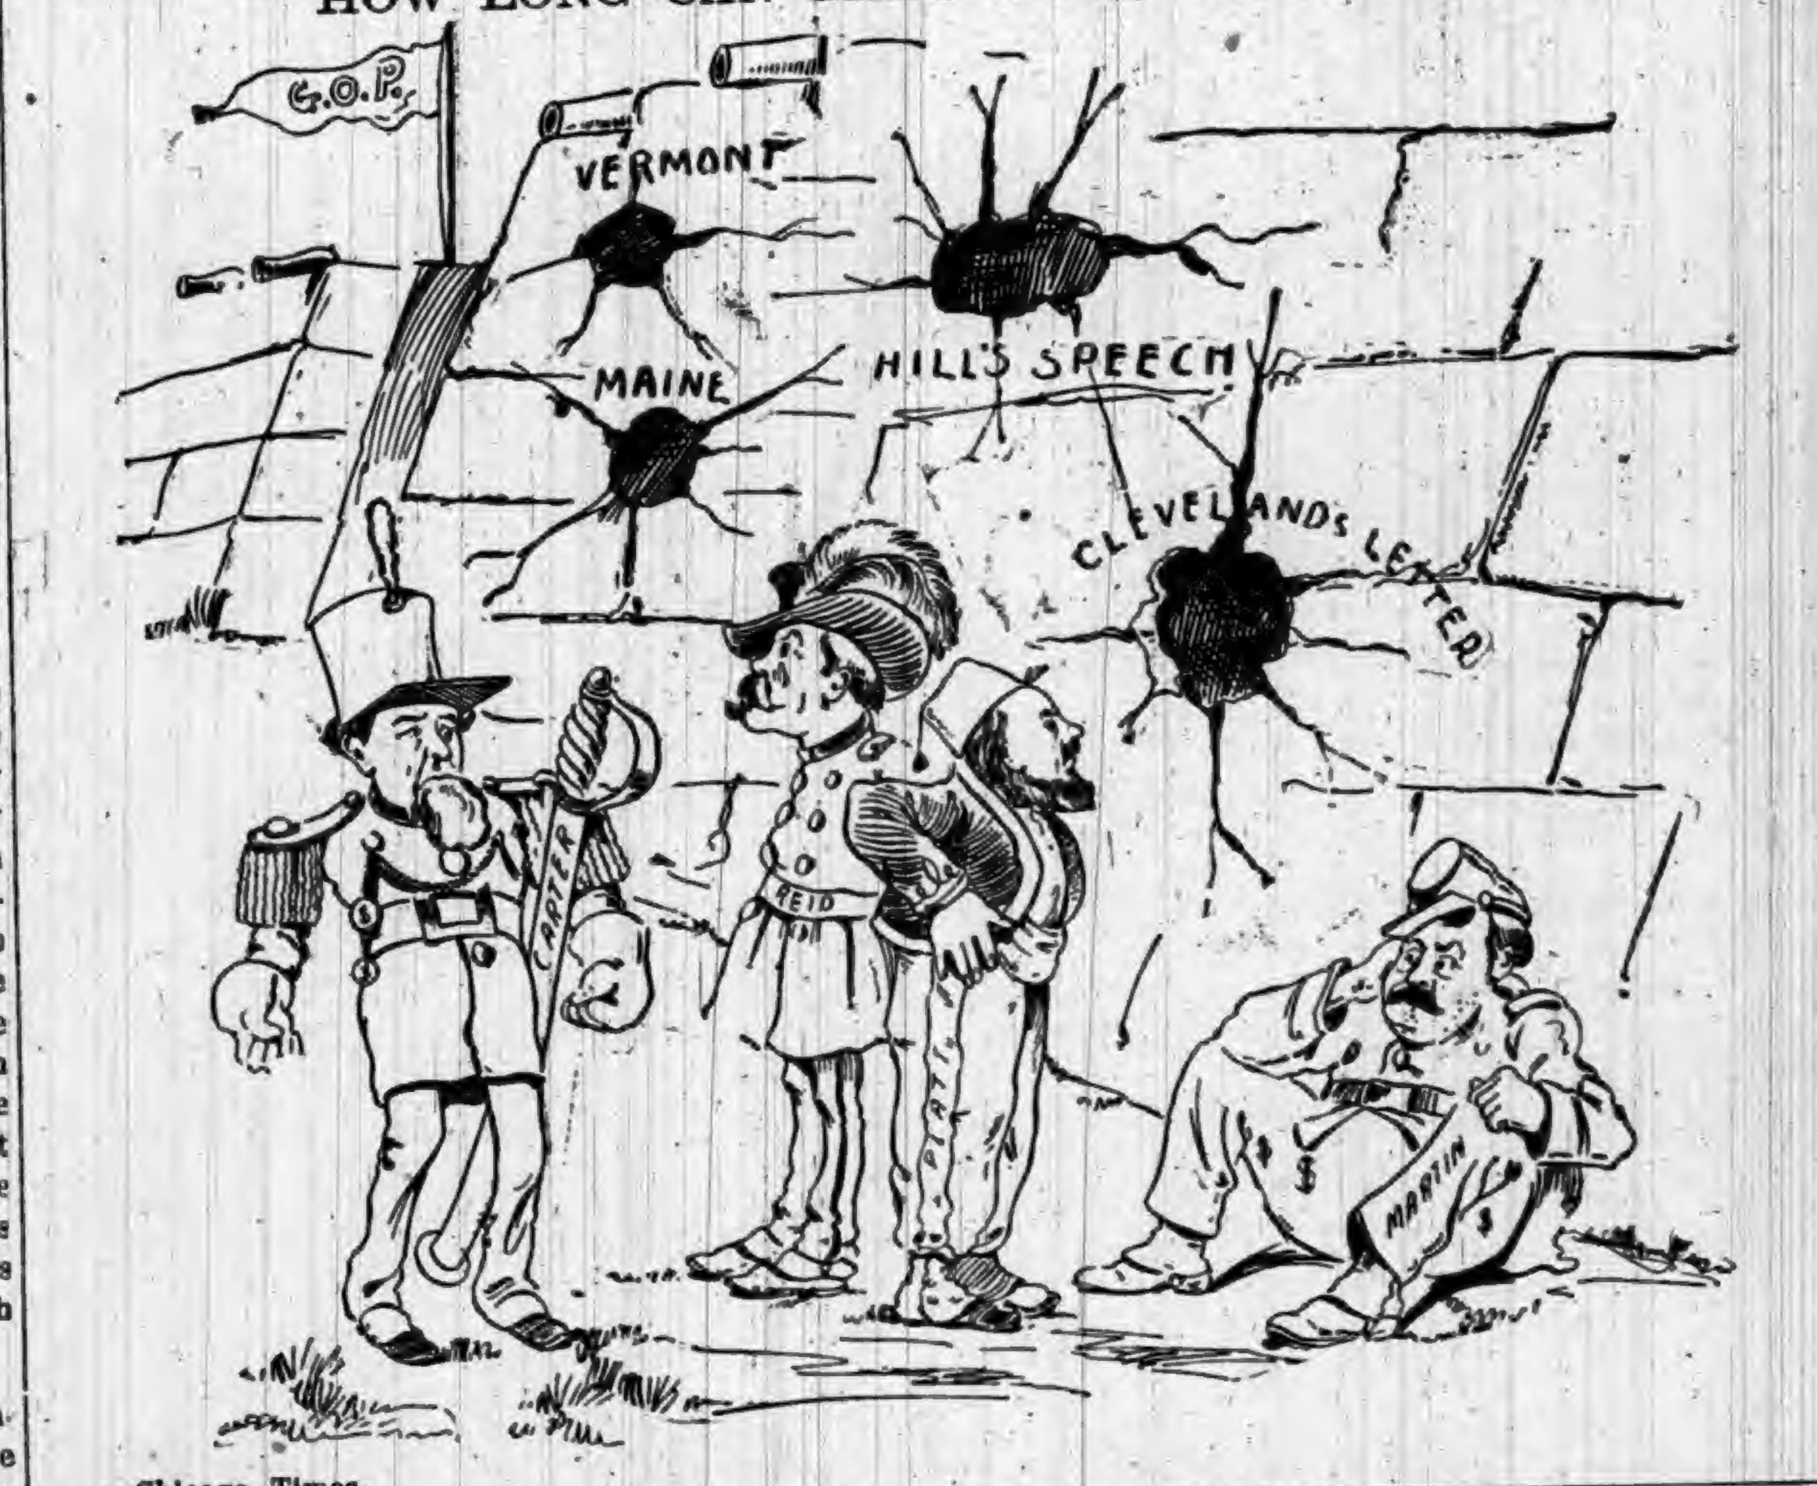
The Ex-President Tells a Vast Throng in the Academy of Music the Principles Which Underlie His Campaign—Other Proceedings.

Grover Spoke Nobly.

It was a mammoth Cleveland meeting, the quadrennial convention of Democratic clubs that met in the Academy of Music, in New York. The great gathering cheered the mention of the ex-President's name in a manner which showed that the ebullition of enthusiasm came from the heart. A street parade of colossal proportions preceded the convention, and then the throngs surged toward the great objective point—the Academy of Music. The delegates were in possession of 4,000 badges, and the wearers represented every State in the Union. This insignia of Democracy was not worn by people who wear a badge for the badge's sake, but by men who possessed votes all wool and a yard wide, and knew exactly what they were going to do with them.

In the Academy stage and galleries glowed with the national colors, from which seemed to radiate a gentle benison to the enthusiastic thousands that crowded the building as no player folk have ever been able to induce them to do. From each side of the stage entrance portraits of Cleveland and Stevenson looked down on the multitude, while the Ninth Regiment Band added its mite to the enthusiasm which seemed to bubble from audience and speakers.

HOW LONG CAN THEY HOLD THE FORT?



—Chicago Times.

President Chauncey Black called the convention to order. He spoke briefly regarding the issues of the campaign and then introduced ex-President Cleveland. Mr. Cleveland was received with prolonged cheering. He said:

Mr. Cleveland's Speech.

Mr. President and gentlemen, it affords me especial pleasure to extend to you on this occasion a hearty welcome. As a citizen of this proud municipality I am glad to assure you that our hospitality is always open and generous. In behalf of a community distinguished for its Americanism and toleration in all matters of belief and judgment, I know I may extend a cordial greeting to those who here represent political thoughtfulness and sincerity. As an unyielding and consistent believer in Democratic principles, I trust I need not hesitate to pledge to the representatives of organized Democracy the good-will and fraternal sympathy of this Democratic city.

Your meeting is the council of war which precedes a decisive battle, and your deliberations should be the preparations for stern conflict. All your weapons and all your equipments are soon to be tested. You have organized and labored and you have watched and planned to insure your readiness for the final engagement now near at hand. This, then, is no holiday assemblage, but an impressive convocation in furtherance of the designs and purposes for the accomplishment of which you and those you represent are banded together. These designs and purposes, as declared by your association, are: The preservation of the constitution of the United States, the autonomy of the States, local self-government and freedom of election, opposition to the imposition of taxes beyond the necessities of the government economically administered, and the promotion of economy in all branches of the public service.

These professions embody the purest patriotism and the loftiest aspirations of American citizenship. Though at all times they should suggest to us the strongest obligation to political effort, their motive force, as incentives to political activity and watchfulness, should be irresistible at a time when the constitution is held in light esteem as against the accomplishment of selfish purposes; when State boundaries are hardly a barrier to centralized power, and when local self-government and freedom of elections are the scoff of partisanship.

Those who subscribe to the creed of this association and make any claim to sincerity can hardly excuse themselves for lack of effort at a time when the necessities of the Government economically administered have but little relation to the taxation of the people and when extravagance in the public service has become a contagious plague.

To those who hope for better things this convention of Democratic clubs is a bright promise of reform. Unorganized good intentions and idle patriotic aspirations cannot successfully contend for mastery with the compact forces of private interests and greed, nor is the organization always the most useful which has the widest extent. The real benefit of political organization is found in its nearness to the people and in the directness of its action. Of course, harmony and unity of purpose are absolutely essential.

In this view your assembling together is most important, in so far as it promotes this harmony and unity by conference and a consideration of methods, and in so far as it inspires that zeal and enthusiasm which will make more effective your work at home. Therefore I am sure that I can say nothing better in taking my leave of you than to wish that your convention may be a most profitable and encouraging one, and that at its conclusion you may resume your places in your home organizations newly inspired to determined and zealous effort in the cause of true Democracy.

Organization of the Convention.

The general business of the convention was then entered upon.

Chauncey Black and Lawrence Gardiner were re-elected President and Secretary for the ensuing year, and Governor Roswell P. Flower was appointed Treasurer.

Sentiment of the Resolutions.

The resolutions adopted warn the American people of the danger which menaces their common liberties in the manifest purpose of the managers of the monopoly party to debauch the suffrage and to purchase another lease of the Presidency, and another majority in Congress, and, ultimately, to take permanent possession of the federal government, through the provisions of an unconstitutional and partisan force bill, designed by corrupt and unscrupulous conspirators and indorsed by Benjamin Harrison and a Republican convention of officeholders and monopolists. They also denounce as un-American and unconstitutional the pillage of the people for the benefit of the few by unjust tax laws; the squandering of the people's money in profligate expenditures, in subsidies and in jobs, and demand a return to lower and more equal taxation, more frugal expenditures and purer government, which can be accomplished only by the election of Cleveland and Stevenson.

Weaver's Tale of Woe.

Hon. W. Y. Atkinson, Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee of Georgia, says, in reply to the published address of Gen. Weaver and various special telegrams which have been sent out from Georgia by Mrs. Lease, that they do great injustice, not only to the Democrats but to the people of the State.

He says: "According to his own admission, Gen. Weaver received a respectful hearing at Waycross and Columbus. At Albany his speech was listened to by several hundred people, and no effort whatever was made to prevent him from speaking. A prominent negro of that place, at the conclusion of Weaver's speech, took the stand to refute what he had said, and bitterly attacked Weaver and the third party. Weaver was so indignant that a negro should attempt to answer him that he immediately left the platform. The only possible foundation for the greatly exaggerated egg story spread broadcast by Gen. Weaver and Mrs. Lease is that a small boy in the open-air audience at Macon threw an egg, and he was promptly arrested and punished for it."

McKinley's Unfortunate Foot.

Major McKinley answers to the description of the man who "never opened his mouth without putting his foot in it." In his Philadelphia speech the Governor said:

"If Congress should happen to be Democratic, then I want Benjamin Harrison President. He believes in sound money, and will veto any Democratic bill to corrupt and debase the currency of the United States."

This is the same Major McKinley who was a year or two ago denouncing Grover Cleveland for his opposition to the free coinage of silver and intimating to the silver men how much better the Republican party had treated them.

The President Harrison whom he desires to be re-elected in order that he may veto any Democratic bill for debasing the currency is the same who signed the Sherman bill for increasing the output of paper representatives of debased silver dollars.

Major McKinley followed the utterance already quoted with this brilliant generalization: "Free trade and debased money go hand in hand."

Of course, then England, which figures in all the Major's speeches as the frightful example of a free-trade nation, is also the victim of debased money.

But it happens, unfortunately for the verity of this dictum, that England is of all nations the most inflexible in hostility to any currency scheme which endangers the highest value of its money.

The Major's speeches would be more influential if his contempt of facts were not so obvious. But an advocate of high protection has to ignore facts.

Michigan Democrats Nominate.

The Democratic State Convention to nominate a candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court to succeed Chief Justice Morse, an elector-at-large for the western district of Michigan and a member of the State Board of Education, convened in Lansing. Chairman Campau, of the State Central Committee, called the convention to order and made a brief speech, predicting the election of the Democratic State and Legislative tickets and seven Democratic electors from the State. Upon assuming the chairmanship Governor Winans also spoke feelingly of the debt of gratitude he owed the party of his choice, and expressed a fear that he would never be able to repay the interest.

Judge William Newton, of Flint, was nominated by C. R. Whitman, of Ann Arbor, and supported by Mark W. Stevens, of Flint, and others. J. H. Kinnane, of Kalamazoo, named William G. Howard of that city for the office. A call of the counties resulted in Newton's nomination on the first ballot. The nomination was then made unanimous.

John Power, of Escanaba, was nominated by acclamation for elector-at-large for the Western District, and David E. Hoskins, of Jackson, was in like manner nominated for member of the State Board of Education.

They Are Thinking.

Our Republican friends are worrying because there is a significant lack of noise in the current campaign. It puzzles them and creates unpleasant forebodings. They miss the brass bands, the long processions of horse and foot, the ringing cheers, the shouts of defiance, the showy uniforms, the wavering lines of light, the flags, the banners and the transparencies with their gems of political wit or wisdom. Why is this thus? is a conundrum to them.

The question is not a difficult one. The people are not hurrahing this campaign. They are thinking. The day of election is not far off, yet there is a marked absence in that turbulence and excitement that have grown traditional, and thus far the campaign has been the quietest within the memory of man. Business has not been disturbed and confidence is unimpaired. Mr Harrison professes to see nothing in this to alarm, but his shrewder friends, who have nothing to look after but the course of political events, realize what it means. Men are not educated in political matters under the band wagon method of campaigning. They cannot shout and acquire knowledge at the same time. Noise is not conducive to successful mental investigation. Otherwise school children would be favored with constant orchestral music and philosophers could evolve their grandest theories in a boiler yard.

The less the people shout the more they think, and the more they think the more emphatic will be the vote by which they declare against the existing order of things. They declared their opinion upon national questions two years ago and the feeling then manifested against the multiplied evils of McKinleyism has been greatly intensified through lessons of bitter experience and a broader knowledge of the great economic problem.

Gresham for Cleveland.

JUDGE GRESHAM is one of the few men wearing the Republican label during recent years who have succeeded in retaining the respect and confidence of all the people. The fact that he can no longer consent to remain identified with the party of plutocracy will determine many who have been hesitating.—St. Louis Republic.

JUDGE GRESHAM has authorized the announcement that he will vote for Cleveland, and it is probable that before the campaign is over he will make some speeches in his behalf. If Harrison had any chances of carrying Indiana this would end them, and it will be a great help to the Democrats of Illinois. —Quincy Herald.

JUDGE GRESHAM comes to the Democratic party because he believes in tariff reform, a cause once supported by the Republican party, until it passed under the control of men who demand a government that can be used to advance their private financial interests.—Toledo Bee.

JUDGE GRESHAM is a very influential man and his example will be followed by thousands who have desired to make the change, but who have been held back by various associations and party traditions.—Illinois State Register.

THE fact that such a man as Judge Gresham has gone in the direction they were looking will settle the question in favor of tariff reform and Grover Cleveland.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

THE announcement that Judge Gresham will vote for Cleveland, which can be relied on as true, will be worth many votes to the Democrats, especially in Indiana.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

WHERE Judge Gresham leads a multitude of his old comrades in arms and his friends and associates in civil life, hitherto Republicans, will be glad to follow.—Grand Rapids Democrat.

AND Judge Gresham is another notable instance of a distinguished lawyer who has retired from criminal practice. —Milwaukee Journal.

WALTER Q. GRESHAM from this time forth will be quoted as a tariff-reformer. —Cedar Rapids Gazette.

Cleveland's Letter.

MR. CLEVELAND has carried the flag of his party to the front. If he be right his letter challenges the existence of the Republican party as advocating policies that are a menace to the prosperity of the country. It is a bold, frank, and well-considered utterance, worthy of the past statesmanship of the republic. It is a call to every Democrat who believes in Democracy to take his place in the ranks and stay there until the battle shall have been won in November.—Philadelphia Record.

LIKE all his previous public writings and utterances, Grover Cleveland's letter of acceptance of this, the third Democratic presidential nomination tendered him, is vigorous, virile, and sound in every way. It is the utterance of a man unused to circumlocution and temporizing, and whose habit it is to walk in the straight path of his honest convictions.—St. Paul Globe.

MR. CLEVELAND'S letter of acceptance will meet a hearty response from every intelligent and patriotic citizen who desires to see capable, honest, and constitutional administration of the government in the interest of the whole people, for whom it was framed and established, and not for the benefit of a favored few at the expense of the many.—Rochester Union and Advertiser.

THE letter contains bristling points that will be remembered long after election. Sentences and thoughts which he gives to the country will inspire the Democratic speakers and furnish material for intelligent newspaper discussion. Mr. Cleveland's letter will make him a still stronger candidate for the suffrages of the American people.—Toledo Bee.

WITHIN a compass not equaling a third of the space occupied by Mr. Harrison's letter Mr. Cleveland has treated every question of interest and importance before the American people in a comprehensive manner, which renders his letter one of the most notable state papers in the history of American politics.—Kansas City Star.

THE organs are hard to please. For some time they have grumbled because Mr. Cleveland did not write a letter, and now that it is published they are as inconsolable as though Mr. Blaine had indited another epistle of the kind that recently got mixed in the Maine election.—Milwaukee Journal.

Joins Grover's Ranks.

Ex-Attorney General Wayne MacVeagh has written a letter to John W. Carter, Secretary of the Massachusetts Reform Club, in which he announces that he will vote for Grover Cleveland.

M'KINLEY VINDICATED

A TRANSACTION IN WHICH THE FOREIGNER PAID THE TAX.

The Pearl Button Infant Expires—Protection Pictures—A Wall-Paper Trust—The Overtaxed Foreigner—Labor Commissioner Peck Repudiated—Shocks His Audiences.

Sample McKinleyism.

Proprietor (to salesman in large wholesale house in London)—Did that Chicago merchant call this morning?

Salesman—Yes, and left a big order with us. He will call again to-morrow to get his bill and to settle his account after we have deducted the duty which we will have to pay to get his goods through the custom house. He says you always pay this tax for him.

Proprietor—Oh, yes; we must keep his trade. Have you made out his bill yet?

Salesman—Yes; two bookkeepers have been at work on it. Here is the account:

	Amount.	Duty.
10,000 yards alpaca, 27 inches wide, at 8½ cents	$850
Duty at 7 cents per square yard and 40 per cent		$865
20,000 yards corduroy, 27 inches wide, at 16½ cents	3,300
Duty at 14 cents per square yard and 20 per cent		2,760
10,000 yards astrakhan, 24 inches wide, at 54 cents	5,400
Duty at 49½ cents per pound, 22 oz. to yard, and 60 per cent		10,209
10,000 yards cotton velvet, 22 inches wide, at 53 cents	5,300
Duty at 14 cents per square yard and 20 per cent		3,682
8,600 yards silk, striped cotton (Italian), 40 inches wide, at 16½ cents	5,940
Duty at 10 cents per square yard and 35 per cent		6,079
	$20,000	$23,595
		20,690
Duty less amount of bill....		$2,905

Proprietor (biting his lip)—Blast that McKinley bill! Are you certain there is no mistake?

Salesman—The duties are complicated, but the bookkeepers verified every item by means of the last United States Senate Report on Rates of Duty.

Proprietor—It's an outrage for a rich nation like the United States to collect its taxes over here. We were poor enough on this side of the water before the McKinley bill reached out after our last few crumbs. If this trade keeps up I must lower your salaries against the end of the year, for it all comes out of the laborers in the end. It is no wonder all Europe is groaning since 1890.

Salesman—But surely you are not going to pay this duty? It would be better to burn your goods rather than to pay this merchant $3,000 to take them.

Proprietor—Yes, yes, I know. But we dare not do or say anything against American protection just now. If we did the Americans would be told that British gold was being used to compel them to adopt free trade, and that would only convince the foolish voters there that they were benefited by protection, and make them cling to it all the longer. Here is my check for $2,905. Give it to him and tell him we will always be glad to have his patronage, though we would naturally prefer that he take goods that will leave a balance in our favor after we have paid the duties.

Protection Pictures.

The Carnegie Company to pay its workmen "the difference in wages," is protected from $8.82 to $156.80 per ton on steel billets. The actual price that it pays its workmen ranges from

$1.65 to $1.95 per ton, on billets protected by a duty of $20.16.

It has certified to Congress that it wants and will collect the protection of $20.16 and pay it to its workmen, in addition to paying them foreign wages. But it actually hands them only pays no foreign wages, and gets its labor free of cost. Andrew Carnegie received $5,000 per day as his share of this theft from the wages of the workers of the mills, and his partners received as much more, but they were not satisfied. To steal more of this trust fund of $20.16 belonging to their workmen, of which they are but the trustees, they reduced the pittance paid of $1.95 per ton, increased the hours of labor, and hired 300 mercenaries to shoot down the workmen who forcibly resisted any further theft from "the difference in wages" belonging to them.

$1.95 per ton;

steals $18.21

What is true of the protected Carnegie mills is true of every protected mill. The employer has absolute pauper labor, supported by public contributions, and his profit mainly comes from what he steals from the fund paid by the people for their support.—T. E. Wilson.

Mr. McKinley Should Explain.

The lessening volume of our agricultural exports requires an explanation from McKinley. The August returns show a diminution in exports of breadstuffs of $7,750,000, as compared with the same month last year. Moreover, the price of wheat averaged in August of this year only 84 cents a bushel, as against 106 in August, 1891. Now, McKinley has assured the farmers of the West that their great sales and high prices of last year were directly due to the benign methods of taxing money out of the foreigners' pockets and into theirs. But his law is still in force, and the question arises why it does not continue to perform its beneficent functions. We hope it will not be answered that better harvests in Europe have slackened the demand, for that would seem to imply that the McKinley bill does not, as claimed for it, override all natural laws, and would also call to mind the fact that last year there was an extraordinary demand for our agricultural products. This would have fallen out to the profit of the Western farmer in any case.—New York Evening Post.

Pearl Button Infant Expires.

Every pearl button used in Missouri has three cents of McKinley tax on it for every cent of actual cost. And in face of this we have the following:

"CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Ignatz Zeisler, Secretary of the Pearl Button Factory, filed a bill in the Superior Court to-day asking a receiver for the corporation, which was organized last March, with a capital of $10,000 fully paid up. Zeisler represents that the manufacturing of pearl buttons is an industry practically impossible in this country."

This comes just nine days after the letter of acceptance in which Harrison wrote: "Another industry that has been practically created by the McKinley bill is the making of pearl buttons. Few articles coming from abroad were so distinctly the product of starvation wages." We believe that the convicts at Joliet engaged in making McKinley pearl buttons are reasonably well fed. This being the case, why does this McKinley "industry" go into the hands of a receiver?—St. Louis Republic.

His Unbiased Opinion.

The Tribune says that "candid and fair-minded men must recognize the general soundness of Justice Miller's judgment; he was a man of fine discrimination." Well, Justice Miller declared, in one of his most famous opinions, that—

"To lay with one hand the power of the Government on the property of a citizen and with the other bestow it upon favored individuals to aid private enterprise and build up private fortunes is none the less robbery because it is done under the forms of law and is called taxation. This is not legislation. It is a decree under legislative forms. Nor is it taxation. Beyond a cavil there can be no lawful taxation which is not laid for public purposes."

This is the Democratic doctrine proclaimed by a Republican Justice whose judicial conscience was above his partisanship.—New York World, Sept. 25, 1892.

Amen!

"There is no honorable and permanent and successful place for any party in America that appeals to the prejudice and the passion and the ignorance of the people, and bases its claims upon the failures of the people themselves. That has been the history of the Democratic leaders for thirty years. Their arsenal and their armament has been the prediction of failure of Republican measures and Republican politics."—Governor McKinley.

And for once the Governor did not tell his hearers that the United States is now taxing the foreigner. As to the other part of his assertion we are willing to wait until November to see if the grand jury of the people will not bring an indictment against Republican measures in accordance with the claims of Democrats. The people may be slow to perceive causes, but "you can't fool all of the people all the time."

Wall Paper Trust.

The new wall paper trust has gained control of all but two important factories and has advanced prices. It is said that it will close several factories to keep production down to the "needs" of the people. It will be remembered that the wall paper pool kept prices extremely high so that the people would not over-supply themselves with this article. Wall paper that sold for 40 cents per roll in 1886, just before the pool went to pieces, sold afterward for less than 10 cents. Some of the concerns in the pool made profits of 200 per cent. They wish to return to these good old times, and are aided by McKinley to the extent of a 25 per cent. duty, though our exports are as great as our imports, and the changing fashions and styles make both small, and a protective duty unnecessary, except in cases of extreme prices and profits.

McKinley Shocks His Audiences.

The New York Tribune says: "Governor McKinley's speech in Philadelphia had a fairly electrical effect upon his great audience. Veteran politicans assert that there has not been an equally enthusiastic assemblage in Philadelphia since war time."

This is as it should be. The same enthusiasm prevailed in Vermont when the Major was there a few weeks ago. These electrical shocks appear to stimulate thought, and this is what makes Democrats, as witness the result of the Vermont election. There is hope for Ohio now, that its Governor is returning to put in the most of his time shocking his people, by telling them that they are so well off, because, through what is called the McKinley dispensation, their taxes are being paid by the poor foreigner.

Stockings.

Under the law which was repealed by the passage of the McKinley act the tariff tax on ordinary stockings was 40 per cent. The McKinley act has made the tax, according to value, 54.59 per cent., 70.41 per cent., 69.57 per cent. and 58.99 per cent.

In 1891 the people of this country bought foreign stockings that cost on the other side $3,380,724. The tariff tax on them was $2,349,196, so that for $3,380,724 worth of stocking the importers paid $5,729,920, and those who wore the stockings paid this enhanced price and the profits of the wholesaler and retailer reckoned on the whole.

This is what the McKinley law has done for the wearer of stockings.—New York World.

Peck Repudiated.

The Philadelphia Telegraph is a Republican paper. It ought to know a good thing when it sees it, for it certainly knows a bad thing when it sees it and is not afraid to say so. The Telegraph says: "Peck has made a mess for himself, and the sequel abundantly confirms the observations originally made in these columns concerning his ridiculous document. It was utterly unworthy of attention on the part of any intelligent man, and the Republican National Committee made a blunder little less than a crime in taking it up as a first-class campaign document. It looks very much as though Peck was likely to turn out the Richard in the present instance."—Utica Observer.

Twin Safe Trust.

Eleven safe companies, with an aggregate capital of between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000, have formed themselves into a trust. The combination will have "friendly relations" with the Herring-Hall-Marvin Company, and these two great companies will practically control the safe manufacturing business of the country. One of the objects of this trust is to give "stability to prices." One way this is to be done is by closing six of the factories. No importations are likely to disturb the "stability of prices" because a duty of 45 per cent. intervenes.

McKinley's Free List.

A correspondent who describes himself as "One on the Fence" asks us to publish a list of the principal articles on the free list of the bill prepared by Major Wm. McKinley, of Ohio, and the business syndicate for which he works. Here is the list: Snails, uncut diamonds, catgut, acorns, dragon's blood, leeches, divi-divi, birds, bladders and turtles. The "pauper labor" of Europe is also free, but the Major left it off of his list. If our friend is thinking of descending from the fence we can show him the best place to alight in.—New York World.

McKinley Compliments Philadelphians.

Major McKinley paid a great compliment to the intelligence of Philadelphians when he spoke there the other evening. He said not a word about the foreigner paying the tariff tax. This is a significant and serious omission to the Democrats, who may yet have to do their campaign work if the Major makes this omission permanent. Perhaps he has been reflecting on the result of the Vermont election since he explained to the Green Mountain boys his beneficent scheme for fleecing foreigners.

SINCE silk plush has gone out of fashion the silk mills in Bradford, England, and in Bridgeport, Conn., have stopped making it. It doesn't pay to make goods for which there are no buyers. But President Harrison made a great mistake in attributing to McKinley a result for which Miss McFlimsey is solely responsible. It often happens that great men stumble when they descend from generalities to particulars. Mr. Harrison would have been wise if, like Mr. Peck, he had burned his particulars.—Philadelphia Record.

The Over-Taxed Foreigner.

Protectionists are rejoicing over the industrial distress in parts of Europe due to the McKinley bill. This is like kicking a man after he has fallen. The poor foreigners were already over-taxed to sustain their royal families and their immense standing armies before McKinley called upon them to pay our taxes. It is not surprising that there is poverty and distress in Europe.

BOMBSHELL FOR THE G. O. P.

Ex-Attorney General Wayne MacVeagh Comes Out Boldly for Grover Cleveland.

Ex-Attorney General Wayne MacVeagh, who held office under Garfield, has written a letter to John W. Carter, secretary of the Massachusetts Reform Club, in which he announces that he will vote for Grover Cleveland. The letter says in part:

"As both parties have presented unexceptionable candidates there is no reason why the differences which exist upon questions of public policy should be discussed otherwise than in good humor and with entire respect for each other's opinions.

"In the present campaign what may fairly be called the false alarms of the canvass will prove of little value because of the general confidence in the safe and conservative character of both candidates."

The writer finds himself in full accord with the Democratic party and finds it more easy to act with them, because the Republican party, securing its return to power four years ago by promising to preserve matters as they were, at once embarked upon what he regards as a reckless and revolutionary policy, even overturning all the safeguards of legislation in the House of Representatives in their haste to pass the force bill and the McKinley bill, both, to his mind, unnecessary and unwise measures.

Truth About the Tariff.

Passing over the force bill with a reference to the earnest and widespread opposition thereto, and to the advocacy two years ago of the measure by President Harrison, General MacVeagh takes up the tariff, of which he says:

"The economic evils, however great, of the McKinley bill and the unreasonable system of protection it represents are of far less importance, to my mind, than the moral evils which follow in their wake. In deciding for what purposes the masses of the people may properly be taxed, it must not be forgotten that the taxes have a wonderful capacity for filtering through intervening obstacles till they reach the bowed back of toil and resting there, and therefore, the giving of bounties, under any form of taxation, is mainly the giving away of the wages of labor. The sad truth that the curse of the poor is their poverty, is illustrated in nothing more clearly than in the undue share they suffer of the burdens of taxation.

"But even such inequality and injustice are the least of its evils, for while such a system endures political corruption is absolutely sure to increase, as such a system not only invites but it requires the corrupt use of money both at the polls and in Congress.

In Regard to Silver.

"The Republican party ought to be an honest-money party, and it would be if it could, but while it demanded increased bounties for its favorite manufacturers, it could not refuse increased bounties to the silver producers, as the votes they control were probably necessary to the passage of the McKinley bill. The poison of a debased currency is making itself daily more and more felt in every channel of business and finance, and it is inevitably driving gold out of the country and leading us to all the evils of a fluctuating and therefore dishonest currency based upon silver alone.

"If Congress was to levy taxes upon the people to confer bounties upon certain classes of manufacturers, it was very natural that the pension agents should also join hands to increase their fees by an indiscriminate granting of pensions. The result is that nearly a generation after the close of the war there is a steady increase of the vast sums passing through the pension agents' hands, until now the total amount staggers belief and has become of itself a very serious burden upon the treasury. Surely there is neither reason nor justice in legislation which destroys all distinction between the discharge of duty and the shirking of it, between loyal service and desertion of the colors, between wounds received in battle and diseases contracted in the pursuits of peace."

Immigration Abuses.

There is still another great and increasing evil traceable, in his opinion, to the maintenance of an excessive tariff since the war and the constant meddling with it to make it higher, and that is the bringing to our shores of the vast swarms of undesirable immigrants. Just as the duties upon imported merchandise have been increased, so has the grade of imported labor been lowered.

As the Republican party is now definitely committed to the policy of taxing the people for the purpose of giving bounties to such persons or interests as can secure the necessary votes in Congress, so the Democratic party is now as definitely committed to the policy of restricting taxation to the needs of the Government for public purposes alone.

Gen. MacVeagh is convinced that the good cause in which he is interested cannot hope for success until the avowed policy of the Republican party on this subject is overthrown. Until then the right of each State to control elections within its borders will not be secure; there is no prospect of our enjoying the single and staple standard of value which other civilized and commercial nations possess; there is no hope of placing either our pension system or the regulation of immigration upon just and proper basis; the purification of our politics will continue the "iridescent dream" which high Republican authority has declared it must always remain, and any pretended reform of the civil service must prove a delusion and a snare.

Even ballot reform must share the same fate of betrayal in the house of its pretended friends. All these good causes are, in the very nature of things, the relentless foes of a system of government by bounties to favored interests, and such a system is their relentless foe.

An Incident of Gambetta's Downfall.

A trifling circumstance rendered the situation more tense. The Mayor of Belleville, a Gambettist, got up, in the interest of his party, a popular banquet in the Lime Tree Garden at Menilmontant, the most democratic part of his arrondissement. The great orator was there to explain his policy, in a way to meet the attacks which the press was beginning to make. In the invitations, of which about 900 were issued, the hour stated was 7 o'clock. This was understood to mean half-past 7. But the dinner was not served until after half-past 8. Gambetta had not come. The landlord insisted upon not waiting any longer. Two places were kept vacant at the table of honor. At 9 "the guest of the evening" and Spuller entered to fill them. Whether, habituated at the Palais Bourbon to the dishes of Trompette, they had grown too dainty for the plain cooking of Menilmontant, or for what other reason, it does not appear, they had both dined with a few friends at a restaurant. They did not at the banquet even go through the polite comedy of pretending to eat. No apology was offered either at the time, nor afterward in the press; a polite fib, though a transparent one, would have calmed irritation. Punctuality, it was remarked sotto voce, was the politeness of Kings; but the elect of the millions thought themselves higher than born sovereigns. The speech which followed the banquet was listened to with icy coldness. The orator went back to the Petit Bourbon heavy and discontented. He had for ten years given a mighty impulsion in a democratic sense. Ministers had been made to feel that universal suffrage was everything, and the executive but its instrument. As President of the Budget Committee, he had made them realize that power of the purse was vested in the Chambers, and he had hotly contested the position of M. Jules Simon that the Senate had a right to amend the budget. He had agitated for revision of the judicial bench, and the democratization of the army. Suddenly he turned round and attempted to push back the torrent which he had set flowing. Its impetus was too great for him to withstand, and it has pursued its course, bearing with it other men less renowned.—Century Magazine.

Staking a Life on a Card.

The long and prosperous career of Flotow, the composer, was temporarily clouded in 1864 by the death of his youngest brother, which took place under painfully dramatic circumstances. He was rather what is euphemistically called a "wild" fellow, and a practical joke which he perpetrated in a half-drunken freak was taken as an insult by the whole body of the Mecklenburg deputies, of whom he himself was one. A dozen challenges ensued and young De Flotow agreed to meet any single antagonist selected by lot. This, as it happened, turned out to be a certain Count Z., one of the deputies who resented the offense most keenly. On De Flotow's asking him if he thought a stupid joke worth fighting about and receiving an emphatic answer in the affirmative, "Be it so," he said; "and, if you attach as little value to life as I do, we will fight in the American fashion—I staking my life against yours in a game of ecarte of five points; the loser to blow out his brains in twenty-four hours." The proposition was agreed to, cards were brought and the two men commenced their terrible game. The score stood at four points on each side, when Count Z. turned the king. "You have won, sir," said De Flotow, rising; "I will pay before noon to-morrow." Next day he slept till 11. After breakfast he took a turn in the park, and was observed by his valet gazing for some minutes at the facade of the ancestral mansion; after which he hid his face in his hands for a moment, as if weeping. He then pulled out his watch! It wanted but five minutes of noon. M. De Flotow entered his study. At 12 precisely the report of a pistol shook the window-panes. He had punctually killed himself.—St. James Gazette.

Keep Off the Enemy.

A foe who lurks in ambush is a more dangerous antagonist than one who attacks us in the open field, and for whose assaults we are, in a measure, prepared. That dangerous enemy to health, malaria, must be encountered fully armed. Its thrusts are sudden, unexpected and deadly, and can only be guarded against with certainty by fortifying the system by a course of defensive medication. The surest defense against chills and fever, bilious remittant, dumb ague, and ague cake is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which is also an eradicator of the most obstinate forms of malaria which resist the action of ordinary specifics, and the virus of which remains in the system even when the more violent symptoms are subdued. Constipation, liver complaint, dyspepsia, and kidney troubles are always relieved by this genial remedy.

His True Title.

A man who lived near the Barrys was devoted to the harp, and "practiced" with commendable assiduity. But some people do not enjoy music.

The other night Miss Barry said:

"Uncle Charles, the Bible says 'harper,' but I notice that the newspaper critics usually write 'harpist.' I wonder which form is the more correct. If you were speaking of Mr. Cross in the next house, which should you call him, a harper or a harpist?"

"Neither," said Uncle Charles, with the utmost promptness; "if I called him anything I should call him a confounded nuisance."

"Coeur d'Alene."

The meaning of the name, which has been so prominently before the public because of the fearful proceedings of the mine strikers, is, according to a Jesuit father, the heart of an awl (a saddler's or a shoemaker's awl)—conveying the idea that the Indians to whom the name was applied, had hearts as small and as hard as the point of a steel awl; not susceptible of education or of religious teaching; refusing to have any dealings with other people; were cruel and unkind to all.—Davenport Democrat.

I SINCERELY BELIEVE that I should have been dead long ago if it had not been for Hood's Sarsaparilla. I had a bad humor that would not yield to any treatment, and my stomach was very weak. I was hardly able to get around when I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. I began to improve slowly until after I had taken some 10 or 12 bottles. I considered myself well once more. HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA did me so much good that it seems as if it must do others good." MRS. CHRISTINA TEMPLE, Bangor, Me.

All Happens in a Second.

A second is the smallest division of time in general use, and when we consider that in one year there are about 31,558,000 of these periods it would certainly seem as if it was small enough for all practical purposes. But after all a good deal can happen even in a fraction of a second. A light wave, for instance, passes through a distance of about 185,000 miles in this length of time. A current of electricity has probably an even greater speed. The earth itself moves in its orbit at a rate of about twenty miles a second, thus far exceeding the fastest railroad trains on its surface. A tuning fork of the French standard vibrates 870 times per second to produce the note A on the the treble staff.—Popular Science.

Miserly.

The man who was so mean that he sat in the back pew in church to save the interest on his cent while the contribution-box was coming around has at last found a rival.

This man, it is declared, took his supper a little later each night.

"Now, why does he do that?" some one asked, in surprise, who did not know him very well.

"Why, so that presently his supper will come after twelve o'clock, and then he'll call it his breakfast and save one meal!"

THE use of Ely's Cream Balm, a sure cure for Catarrh and Cold in head, is attended with no pain, inconvenience or dread, which can be said of no other remedy.

I FEEL it my duty to say a few words in regard to Ely's Cream Balm, and I do so entirely without solicitation. I have used it half a year, and have found it to be most admirable. I have suffered from catarrh of the worst kind ever since I was a little boy and I never hoped for cure, but Cream Balm seems to do even that. From Small Beginnings.

Most great men are of humble origin. Timothy Healy, M. P., the leader of the anti-Parnellite wing in the Irish party, is the son of the janitor at the Lismore Poor-house, County Waterford. He has distinguished himself by the bitterness of his attacks upon his enemies. His speeches have led to more riots than those of any other man connected with Irish politics. He is evidently no believer in the adage "that molasses catches more flies than vinegar," but after all mildness is as effectual in politics as in medicine. The distinguishing characteristics of the Laxative Gum Drops is their freedom from all deleterious substances and the gentleness with which they do their work. They are most effectual in cases of long continued constipation. They are absolutely safe, while they will cure any bowel or stomach trouble. Ask your druggist for them; if he will not order them for you write to us. The small boxes are 10 cents, the large ones 25 cents.

CORRESPONDENCE

WATERLOO.

Mr. Dilgard's youngest child died last week.

Mr. Rath of Kendallville was in Waterloo last week.

Monday of this week Mr. Kime of Kendallville, was here.

Thursday of last week, Mr. Flemming of Ft Wayne, was in town.

Mrs. S. D. Long of Auburn, is visiting friends here for a day or two.

E. R. Shoemaker who has been very sick, is reported a little better.

The Bryan band, the best in that state, discoursed sweet music for the fair.

J. J. Fitzgerald of Bryan, was here attending the fair, and visiting friends.

Dr. Carpenter's mother of Defiance, is visiting her son and family a few days.

Miss Jennie North, south of town is lying quite low, probably with consumption.

Mrs. Mary Boyer went to Battle Creek last week, for treatment at the Sanitarium.

F. W. Willis and wife, went to Lagrange Tuesday, to attend the reunion of the 44th.

Simeon Duck followed the buggy factory to Auburn, and removed his family there Wednesday.

Thursday evening during the fair, Mr. and Mrs. Dell Locke furnished 100 guests with supper.

The L. M. C. met Tuesday evening with Mrs. Dora Locke, the opening meeting for this year.

A gasolene stove exploded at the fair grounds Thursday, and a small child was quite badly burned.

Mrs. Clutter of Ft. Wayne, spent last week here, attending the fair, and looking after her property here.

The specimens of Roman work exhibited in the art hall this year at the fair eliceted much admiration from visitors.

Mrs. Henry Willis and Mrs. J. C. Boyer are at Bellefontaine, Ohio, to attend the funeral of their sister, Mrs. Colwell.

Mrs. Eli Williamson is quite low, with almost no hope of recovery. Her sister, Mrs. Blattner of Toledo, and other relatives are here.

Mrs. Eckhart of Toledo, visited her sisters here, last week, Mrs. Klotz and Mrs. W. Jackman, her brother, Mr. McClure, and her niece, Mrs. Dora Locke and also attended the fair.

Jacob Bachtel, a farmer near town, aged about 70, died last week Wednesday from a stroke of appolexy; this was the second attack, he having received the first stroke some years ago.

In addition to the hotels and boarding houses, there were a number of eating houses opened during fair week, and of saloons there were quite too many. Even in the forenoon, men were seen who evidently needed the whole walk for themselves.

Rev. Aaron Lilly is assigned to the United Brethren society (liberal) of this place, in the place of Rev. McMillen, whose year has expired. Their services are held in the Evangelical church, preaching in the morning every two weeks in the evening, on the alternate Sundays.

BUTLER.

Our items went astray last week.

Tomlinson's vacant store room has been occupied recently by a sort of toy store.

Butler people contributed very liberally to the success of the Waterloo fair by attending in large numbers.

Our people have organized a fire company a very desirable adjunct to our efficient system of water works.

The Nebraska product cars drew a large crowd all day while they were open here to the inspection of our people.

Our school board and teachers are making every effort to successfully celebrate the Columbian anniversary, and we hope they will be successful.

The scare about the scarcity of potatoes has nearly subsided. The late fall and favorable weather helped us out wonderfully and they will hardly sell for more than 70 cents per bushel.

A force of men are now engaged in cleaning up our streets, making drains at sides of the streets and tiling all the low places. We hope the result will be that our streets will not become quagmires this winter again.

Our popular restauranter, Mr. Rickets, has sold out his business to a Mr. Tustison who will continue the business. Mr. Tustison comes here well recommended and we wish him abundant success. Mr. Ricketts retires on account of ill health.

The dwelling on the C. R. Wanemaker farm, five miles southeast of Butler, burned Friday together with about everything in it. The farm now belongs to parties at Edgerton, O., and was occupied by a tenant. We believe there was no insurance.

Benjamin Kelsey the veteran adjuster for the Hartford Insurance Co., with J. A. Campbell, adjusted the John J. Zurbrugg barn loss on the county line west of Hamilton, last Wednesday at $1190. The barn burned Sept. 27th, cause unknown, entailing a loss of nearly $2,000.

The Butler Record of last weeks complains of the high rate of insurance paid by our people and speaks of the fire losses being less than $600 a year, and now that we have water works the losses will be less than $100 per year. The writer has kept account of the fire losses in this place for fully twenty years, and finds they will not fall much below $100,000 for that time, or nearer $5,000 a year than $600. The premiums paid by the whole town, will hardly reach $3,000 a year, so that the insurance companies are hardly getting rich on Butler profits—besides being subject at all times to a sweeping fire that would effectually wipe out profits for many future years.

Died.

Freddie Earl, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Harkey, at their home in Hicksville, Oct. 5, 1892, at the tender age of 5 months and 15 days.

About Buying Votes.

In spite of the heavy penalties, under the new election laws, and the great danger to all parties to a corrupt bargain there is a possibility that money will be used. The scheme the republicans are going to work to control elections with money, under the present election laws, is to hire men to stay away from the polls. Of course even now, a man who would take money to stay at home is liable to come around and vote his own ticket on the sly. But they are prepared for this, as they will have watchers. This plan gives them half a vote, instead of the whole vote they used to get when Dudley bought votes, in blocks-of-five. A prominent republican in Auburn, has been giving away the secrets of the former campaigns and telling how they used to manage to buy floater votes. After getting the money here, they gave the work into the hands of three men. One would go out into his neighborhood and find who were purchaseable; the second would go to the men and find what price; the third man would then go to the floater's house at dead of night, knock at the door, which the floater would partly open when "the trusted man," would throw in an envelope containing the stipulated sum. In this way it was made safe for all parties for the crime was so divided between several that nothing could be proved on anyone. The plan as now revealed was guessed at, at the time. And it fits in well, with the telegram that fell into the hands of the COURIER in 1888, a few days before the election, in which the DeKalb committee was directed to purchase so many votes in each precinct, and charge the same to John C. New, the votes not to cost over $15 each.

New, was paid by being appointed consul at London, a place worth $50,000 a year, and Wanamaker, who raised a vast corruption fund that was used in electing Harrison was made Postmaster-general. These are facts known to all, and yet men who claim to believe in better things are supporting the party that is guilty.

Gov. Chase Attacks Democrats.

Governor Chase at Union City, April 21, 1892.

Democrats are imps of hell. If I had a mind to swear I'd say God damn them to hell. They ought to be dead, and moldering in the dust of the earth, and the dust be scattered to the four winds of heaven, that they might be completely obliterated from the memory of man.

(Union City Eagle, Republican Organ of Randolph county, April 23, 1892.)

"We submit the question whether Gov. Chase's speech was as courteous, discreet, patriotic and manly as the resolutions claim it to be. Was it discreet or courteous for a minister of the church of God, a follower of the lowly Nazarene and a teacher of His word, with its lessons mercy toward "even the least of these," to speak of a human being, even the vilest, as "imps of hell," and express the wish that "God would damn them to hell," thereby violating His commands, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain." Was it discreet, patriotic or manly? We leave the question with our readers."

The Indianapolis Sentinel keeps the above matter standing in its columns, having investigated the case carefully, and being satisfied that the language attributed to Chase is correct. The Indianapolis News, a paper that is supporting Harrison, has also carefully investigated it and is forced to condemn the language which friend and foe alike say agree substantially with the quotation. Chase himself does not deny it, but he says he referred to "copperheads." The News says "Chase seems to have made a bad break." It is evident that the Union City Eagle thinks the same, and probably, the republicans all think so.—Laport Argus.

The COURIER has been slow to believe that Gov. Chase would descend to the use of such vile language, but we have seen the item going the rounds of the papers for a month, and no denial or explanation is offered. And as the republican paper at Union City, and the News of Indianapolis, also republican, both admit it, it begins to show bad for the governor. Democrats should read it.

Republican Arguments.

They are not worthy to be called arguments but are tricks of speech, calculated to deceive. They will not stand to have the light of facts turned on them. We notice a few.

JEFFERSON AS A PROTECTIONIST.

This is one of their hobbies, and they say Cleveland is wrong to speak against the doctrines of Jefferson, Madison and other old time democrats. Here they deceive, Jefferson and the rest, only asked for a tariff of 5 to 10 per cent., and Cleveland has been for years fighting to get the tariff rate reduced to 42 per cent., as the republicans had it at 47, and now at nearly 60. None of the early statesmen wanted more than a light duty, to help pay the difference in wages between this country and foreign countries. A light duty would do this, but republicans have put the duty high enough to pay not only the "difference in wages," but the entire amount of the wages—sometimes more. For example: On window glass, according to republican statistics, we pay abroad for 100 lbs., of a certain grade $1.80. The duty on this at 132 per cent., as it stands in the McKinley bill, would be $2.38, which is the amount they claim they need to pay the difference in wages. But the total wages paid to make this 100 lbs., in this country was only 75 cents. Do you see where the steal comes in? And there are thousands of cases just like this, and some people like it.

TARIFF HIGHER THAN THE COST.

Here is another fraud. They publish a list of articles, and give the tariff rate, and the selling price, thus: "Tariff 65 cents, selling price only 45 cents," and that "the tariff has nothing whatever to do with the price." If it does not, then why not drop off the tariff? And why do manufacturers go to congress and ask to have it raised? Is there a republican in DeKalb county that can explain why a tariff "protects" on any other theory than that it helps to keep up the price? They cannot. If it has nothing to do with prices, how is it that the increased tariff in the McKinley bill raised the price of tin, of wire nails, of ladies' cloaks, and thousands of other things? And how did taking the tariff off of sugar, reduce the price? In brief all the articles named in these "campaign tests of prices and tariffs" would be much cheaper than they are. They would be as cheap accordingly as our wheat. Not a week day passes, but the ladies in Detroit, go across the river and buy goods at about two-thirds what they would have to pay in Detroit. This proves that the "tariff has something to do with the price."

CLOSING THE FACTORIES.

Drivel like this is sent broadcast to be read by intelligent people, more intelligent by far than the shallow idiot who invented the idea. Who believes they will be closed? No one. There never was any danger of their being closed. We can manufacture any material produced in this country, cheaper than it can be done abroad, because our materials are cheaper, and our labor is at least as cheap. We manufactured many things, even iron articles and shipped and sold to Great Britian, while we were yet colonies, and of course had no "protection." And for a hundred years, articles have been manufactured at a profit much greater than any farmer ever made, so that they were getting profits large enough. Now, they merely want a tariff so as to make their profits larger. In this way, the manufacturing states get rich by making the west pay too high prices. Then they turn around, and lend us this very money at 8 per cent., and in time get many of our farms. Then republicans get together and say "how prosperous we are!"

COMPARED TO 40 YEARS AGO.

The silliest thing we have seen is a novel with slips of "protection talk" sandwiched in between its paragraphs The lovers in the story have a tough time of it. They have to pay high prices for their gum, ice cream is a new thing, and only to be had in cities, and at a high price, hammocks for "spooning purposes only" were scarce, and so the hero and herione of the story, suffered many inconveniences—so different from what lovers now enjoy, And then at the conclusion, this campaign novel, adds: "Reader, this is no fancy picture, but a true recital of the misery, crime and famine, settling like a deadly miasma over our fair country; less than 40 years ago." (But in the years named, we got $1.50 for the same bushel of wheat we now sell for 70 cents.)

REPUBLICAN REVENUE TARIFF.

Here again, they show the cloven foot. In arguing against a revenue tariff, they go on and construct an artificial plan,—one that never will exist, levying a duty on nothing but tea, coffee, sugar, fruits, cocoa, spices, tobacco, malt liquors, brandy and wines,—not a thing else No man of sense has any idea we will ever confine our tariff rates to this list. There are hundreds of other things, on which we can raise money for revenue, and we can, also get half the revenue we need, by a light tax on incomes.

OUR SHIPPING INTERESTS.

How ridiculous for republicans to boast of a recent law, that is likely to permit our people to put a few ships on the water, when we remember that when they came into power, we had shipping, next in amount to Great Britian, but that in 25 or 30 years, republican mismanagement drove our ships from the sea.

CHEAPER GOODS.

Goods they say are cheaper because taxed by a tariff duty. How silly! Goods are cheaper in spite of a tariff burden. We make nearly all things cheaper, because we have improved our machinery, and invented new processes, discovered new principles, and adopted labor saving methods. We can make steel from iron at one-tenth the cost of 30 years ago. Thirty years ago, metal aluminum was worth three times as much as silver, because we had not found how to separate it from clay Now we can make it for 40 cents a pound Did the tariff tax cheapen this metal, or steel? We make things cheaper, but they are not yet as cheap as they should be, else why are goods cheaper in Canada and England? They cost more labor and material than ours

The New Great South American Kidney Cure.

The acknowledged superior cure and immediate relief for all derangements, painfulness and decay of the kidneys or bladder, Bright's disease, diabetes or any complaint that hurts or despoils either of these delicate organs. This new remedy has been thoroughly tested by learned physicians and found far superior to any medicine yet discovered for quickly relieving all weaknesses, aches, pains and distresses arising from disease of any part of the urinary passages. It is a great relief for the old, middle aged and children, male or female. It relieves at once retention and pain in passing water, and it is very effective in relieving prostatic troubles in the old, and for nightly incontinence of water in children, or others, caused by weakness of the bladder. It may be worth to many a hundred times its cost. This is a remedy of great value to ladies, because they are very liable to weakness and pain peculiar to their sex. Sold by Robbins & McCord, druggists, Auburn, Ind. tf

Good Looks.

Good looks are more than skin deep, depending upon a healthy condition of all the vital organs. If the liver be inactive, you have a bilious look, if your stomach be disordered you have a dyspeptic look and if your kidneys be affected you have a pinched look. Secure good health and you will have good looks. Electric Bitters is the great alterative and tonic acts directly on these vital organs. Cures pimples, blotches boils and gives a good complexion Sold at Robbins & McCords drugstore 50c. per bottle. 4

Perhaps those circulars said to have been burned by Mr. Peck had Mr. Blaine's postscript "burn this" attached to them.

Physicians Outdone.

My wife has been suffering with female trouble of the severest kind for over three years. I have paid twenty-five dollars during the last three months, and she had no relief. She had doctored continually with the best of physicians. I bought three bottles each of Dullam's Great German Female Uterine Tonic and Dullam's Great German blood, liver, stomach and kidney cure, and can say to day that she is entirely cured.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

1865—Continued.

The veterans of the various regiments and batteries mostly returned in June and it was the general sentiment of the public that their presence should be appropriately acknowledged by a 4th of July celebration at the county seat.

Accordingly a meeting was held at the court house on June 12th, of which Rev. S. B. Ward was chairman. The committee of arrangements was composed of T. C. Elson, W. Griswold, Geo. Barney, Chester P. Hodge and T. D. Gross.

Robert Lowry and James I. Best were invited to deliver orations and John P. Widney was chosen President of the day. The day arrived and was ushered in by ringing bells, discharges from anvils on the public square and the music of national airs by the Auburn brass band standing on the balustrade of the court house cupola.

Throngs poured in from all directions and a multitude assembled witnessed the raising of a liberty pole 160 feet high, from the center of the west side of the public square, and cheers loud and long greeted the stars and stripes as a fine large flag was run up and unfurled to the morning breeze.

Soldiers in uniform were numerous and everywhere met with cheerful welcome. By 10:30 a. m. a procession was formed by the marshal, W. Griswold assisted by Fred Raut. First marched the Auburn band of sixteen pieces, next came children of the Sabbath schools, Masons and Oddfellows wearing regalia, then martial music and soldiers of the war for the union. The place assigned the veterans in the rear gave offense and they with citizens filed off and marched down Main street to the shade of tall locust trees then standing along the north side of what is now the property of Wm. H. McIntosh, where they enjoyed a sumptous banquet, while the others proceeded to the grove west of town and listened to the declaration read by James B. Morrison and to an oration pronounced by Judge Lowry, of Goshen.

The two celebrations over, the crowd commingled and the day passed happily. Private patriotism and liberality provided evening fireworks and the soldiers were everywhere made to feel their welcome home again.

A month or so later, enterprising citizens of Newville, gave a dinner to returned soldiers which was largely attended at which in a grove near by. Gen. L. J. Blair delivered an impassioned address to his comrades and to the citizens. He never spoke more eloquently, nor acquitted himself with greater credit than on this occasion.

It was in August of this year that Wesley Park, the pioneer of Auburn, was again and finally heard from by the good people of the town. He wrote a letter that gives us our last impression of the man once familiarly known here. He was patriotic, prosperous but estranged from the scene of his early experience.

He had entered the army, became sutler of the 44th Ind., and on leaving the service had located at Grasons, Missouri, where he had purchased a farm of 776 acres composed of the finest land in the state paying $9,000, and had sent word to old acquaintances: "We don't want to flatter our friends to come here till they get tired of being sick in DeKalb county" from which it may be inferred that he was extremely well satisfied with his location.

As a matter of public interest belonging to this period, a brief statement of the number of men furnished by DeKalb county to the armies of the Union together with the amount paid out officially in the line of bounties and otherwise, is here offered which will serve to convey some idea of the heavy drain made upon the material resources of the people aside from individual interest and family deprivation.

The number of DeKalb county volunteers in service on Oct. 6, 1862 was 158. Under the call of Oct. 17, 1863, the quota of the county was 155 which was readily filled by recruiting. Under calls of 1864, there were 60 veterans and 600 new recruits credited to the county and 54 men were drafted making a total of 714 of whom the greater number were three years men.

The last call of Dec. 19, 1864 supplied 63 enlistments and 172 conscripts or 235 men for periods of one and two years. A summary of the preceding, making no allowance for re-enlistments, credits this county with the surprising number of 1862 men.

The amount expended by the county for bounties was $126,600. By township $12,600. For relief of families of volunteers $24,481. This gives a grand total of $163,731. The loss to community and to families through absence of the soldier, the killed, the maimed, the health-impaired, the private contributions to sanitary stores beyond estimate, were a part of the price by which this great nation was rescued from dissolution.

The idea of a county monumental association to cherish, perpetuate and hand down to posterity the names of all these brave soldiers by engraving them upon enduring stone, was first suggested by Jason Hubbell, of Wilmington township, in communnication to the press of Jan. 2, 1863. At the close of the war the matter was agitated and a society was formed for the erection of a monument to the fallen.

Leading citizens throughout the county identified themselves with the project. T. R. Dickinson was chosen president of the society, Frank W. Willis, secretary; John Sinclair, treasurer, and for directors a representative man from each township, James W. Case being chosen for Auburn.

Funds were to be raised by private subscription. A person paying $5 was to receive a certificate of membership for one share. Robert M. Lockhart was appointed a committee to procure a site. He made a favorable report and the project seemed in a fair way of being realized when it unaccountably fell through.

The monument should have been built. The purpose was noble, worthy and desirable and such designs have been executed at very many places in this and other states reflecting credit upon the builders and doing honor to the patriotic public sense of invaluable and meritorious services. May we not ardently hope that the time is at hand when the matter will be again brought up and carried to completion, that a beautiful shaft on the public square might long stand a thing of beauty, a lesson to the young, a recognition by the public and a well earned tribute to the men who saved the Union.

NOT SINCERE.

We have been telling our readers that republican editors are not sincere in opposing the new tax law, especially that part where the state raised its levy 6 cents on the hundred dollars. To show this fully we will quote a little from their columns, where they advise this very raise to be made, though now they oppose it.

In the campaign of 1890 the COURIER quoted from the Columbus Ind., "Republican" these words:

> "What this state wants is a republican legislature, and a slightly increased tax levy."

The Waterloo Press in commenting on this item from a republican paper said, in its issue of August 28, 1890, which now lies before us, these words:

> "The republicans believe in paying debts and not increasing them. Now as the state debt is about $8,000,000, and the present levy will not keep up this interest and pay our running expenses, what are the chances of continuing the present rate of taxes?"

And in its issue of July 17, of the same year in speaking of the refusal of democrats to put the tax levy higher, it added:

> "It is absolutely necessary that this policy be changed, and that immediately, if we would escape bankruptcy."

And now they are kicking because this very thing has been done,—by democrats.

The Dispatch takes the same course. It never tires of objecting to the raise of the levy, now that it thinks it can make a vote or two, though it was advocating a raise in the levy, at the same time the Press was. This is shown in the issue of the Dispatch of Feb. 20, 1890 in which it says among other things:

> "The steady increase of the state debt during the past few years is due to the make shift policy of the democrats, the principal feature of which has been a refusal to levy taxes adequate to the wants of the state. * * * Prior to 1877 the tax levy of the state was 15 cents on every $100 and that was none too much. It is less than the rate which prevails in most western states. * * * Yet in 1877 the democrats reduced the state levy from 15 cents to 12 cents, notwithstanding the obvious fact that the lower rate would not furnish adequate revenue for the increasing expenses of the state. * * * AN INCREASE OF THE TAX LEVY IS INDISPENSABLE, but it will not be done as long as the democrats control the legislature."

And so it goes on in a long article, in which it speaks approvingly of Gov. Gray's advice to the legislature of 1889, to raise the levy a little. And now it, and the Indianapolis Journal from which it had copied this, and all other republican papers are telling how wrong it was to raise that levy. We could quote much more of their contradictory items if we had space. If any one doubts it let him come to the COURIER office and see the papers themselves. So we repeat these criticisms of these editors about the tax law, and the democratic legislature, and the democratic commissioners is not sincere. The editors were dishonest in what they said in 1890, or else they are dishonest in what they say now in 1892. In each case they were trying to get votes—in 1890 by crying for a higher state levy and higher taxes and now by crying against that very thing. For this sort of double dealing the COURIER which believes in square dealing, delights to hold these editors up by the collar, while it dusts their coats.

MR. F. B. ARCHER.

LIVURA M'F'G. CO., DEAR SIRS:—"For about 5 years I have been afflicted with Liver trouble, causing me to become very Bilious. I had headache continually, my appetite was very poor, and a deathly faintness at the pit of the stomach accompanied by a terrible distress. During the past two years my Kidneys became very weak and pained me so badly I could not rest. Owing to extreme nervousness I was unable to attend to my business, and in January I came down with Nervous Prostration. Eight different Physicians have had me under their care, but I grew worse instead of better.

Learning of PITCHER'S LIVURA I began taking it and my improvement was noticeable from the first. I have taken 3 bottles and am ENTIRELY CURED, able to attend to my work, and have not felt so well for 6 years. I give all the credit to Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

The epic "Story of Columbus," supplemented with the information embodied in lately discovered documents, and illustrated with reproductions of rare portraits, charts, historical paintings and photographic views, fittingly heads the October number of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly. The leading contemporary Women Painters in France, including Mmes. Rosa Bonheur, Madeline Lemaire, Henriette Rohner, Demont-Breton and Fleury, and Miles. Rongier, Breslau, Abbema, Lacombe de Presle, and others, are introduced in an interesting article by Arthur Hornblow, with numerous portraits, autographs, and reproductions of the work of the artists mentioned. Another artistic and exquistely illustrated paper is Frieda Voelter Redmand's "Letter from a Monastery." Caraccas, the capital city of Venezuela, is described by Don Ramon Paez. Nelly Hart Woodworth writes charmingly about birds and "The songs they sing," and George W. Hayes gives some vivid and entertaining pages from "A Correspondent's Notebook." All that is known about that interesting planet "Our Neighbor Mars" is told in a succinct article by Arthur Vaughan Abbott. There is, as usual, a great variety of stories, poems and miscellany.

Tin is Higher.

When the COURIER says a thing it usually sticks to it, for the good reason, that it is usually correct. We recently said that tin is higher on account of the McKinley increase in the duty paid. We cited several Auburn business men to prove it, among then being ex-Clerk Husselman and W. J. Wallace and John Harris. All these have been paying higher prices for the tin they use. Now comes the Dispatch of last week, and says the COURIER was wrong, because H. A. Lash, of the Pioneer Hardware store says they are paying "no more for either American or imported tin made under the McKinley, than they did before it was enacted, and that the quality of tin now used is as good, and a roof can be put on just as cheap as it ever could." But the full facts are not stated. They are buying and using a cheaper grade of tin, in order to put on a roof at the old prices. And they have not bought a pound of "American tin." W. J. Wallace lately bought as he supposed some "American tin" but noticed that the sheets were stamped "I. C." which proved it had come from Great Britian, for all American tin of this grade is stamped "No 30, Birmingham wire gauge." It was noticed, however, that the boards of the boxing were of American wood, and not of the cypress used in the English boxes. This proved what has been often asserted, that much of the tin sold as Ameican, is English tin, brought over here to "American factories," taken out of the boxes, and put into new boxes and then sold as home made. We are also informed by James Lewis, who is the tinner at the Pioneer store, and well posted on prices, quality, etc., that the best roofing tin made, the "I. C. Gilbert's Old Method," which cost in Philadelphia before the McKinley law, $15.75 a box, now costs at the same place, $19.25, and advance of $3.50 a box of 24 lbs. Now, the McKinley law raised the duty 1.2 cents a pound higher than before, and on 240 lbs., this would be $2.88, and with the profits which must also be charged on the tariff as a part of the cost, the other 62 cents is easily accounted for. At all events it costs $3.50 cents more than it did. And that is the way any tariff works. It don't cheapen anything. It keeps it from getting cheaper. This grade of tin is used on the best buildings, and the price for putting on a roof of it, has always been about $7.25 a square, while now, at the increased McKinley price of the material, tinners have to charge about $8.50. So they cannot use as good material and do the work at old prices. It reminds us of the cheap calico republicans are boasting of. But cheap calico won't wear long, and good calico is still high.

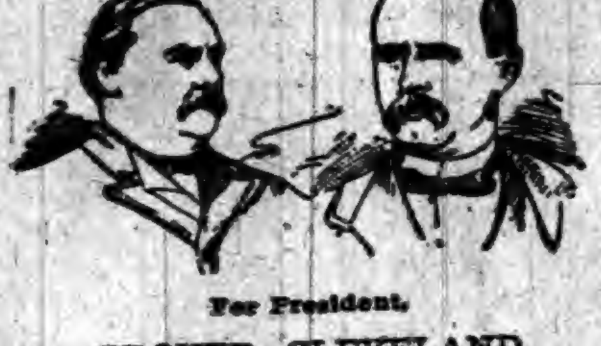
JAMES A. BARNS, - - PUBLISHER.



For President,
GROVER CLEVELAND,
OF NEW YORK.
For Vice President,
ADLAI E. STEVENSON,
OF ILLINOIS.

MR. CLEVELAND in the process of boiling his letter appears to have incidentally scalded several Republican editors.

A MAN can't grow a good crop of chin whiskers now without a Republican declaring that it was due to the McKinley bill.

IN order to be thoroughly efficacious, Mr. McKinley ought to go to England and develop there his plan for raising the wages of English workmen.

INDIANA is lost to Harrison. The whole West is in doubt, and he can't carry New York. This is a bad year for Quay, Dudley, Platt, and the rest of the Placated.

APPEAL-AVALANCHE: The platform of the People's party is that the country is going to the deuce. It is hardly necessary to add that the People's party is going there too.

"NEARLY the entire cost of every fabricated article, whether useful or ornamental, is labor cost," says Mr. Ammonia Hartshorn. Why, then, don't the protected manufacturers raise the wages of their workmen?

FOUR years ago Vermont gave Harrison 29,000 majority. The majority for Governor in last week's election is less than 19,000, which is much the smallest majority ever given in a Presidential year since the Republican party was organized.

HARRISON is holding on to Raum, who is discredited, and to John W. Foster, who, discredited himself, has also discredited the Attorney General. And he is holding on because he can't let go of them. But he will soon get help from the people—more than he wants of it.

NO HONORABLE soldier regrets that Mr. Cleveland vetoed fraudulent pension bills. To say that Mr. Harrison vetoes no pension bills is to charge him with participation in fraud. What veteran wants to be placed on a level with bounty jumpers and deserters, and men who never smelt powder?

NOT so very long ago Mr. Harrison met the Democrats' proposition to reduce tariff taxation and cheapen prices with the sneer that "a cheap coat makes a cheap man." He now claims that the great object of the Republican tariff policy was to cheapen prices. Evidently the President has added not only a cheap coat but a turn-coat to his wardrobe.

THE announcement that Judge Gresham will vote for Cleveland will be worth many votes to the Democrats, especially in Indiana. Judge Gresham is a man whose purity of life and sincerity of convictions have given him a national influence. His sympathies are all with the people, and it is natural that he should join the party of the people, abandoning a party which has now come to look upon the people as its legitimate prey.

THE Grand Old Party is just now waging a Salvation Army crusade against the "gerrymanders" in New York and Indiana. It is not making any efforts, however, to overthrow the gerrymanders in States like Ohio and Maine. In Maine the gerrymander is so unfair that while the Republicans have lost a third of their plurality in the State they have increased their numbers in the Legislature. Indeed, it is estimated that the Democrats could carry Maine by 30,000 majority and yet fail to carry the Legislature.

CHICAGO HERALD: The proper comment to make upon Judge Gresham's action is not to speculate as to its probable effect upon Democratic chances in the coming election. It is rather to call attention in the most emphatic way to the fact that he leaves the Republican party because that party as at present constituted and managed has become an actual menace to the rights and liberties of the people. Its leaders hesitate at nothing that is corrupt. Its success means the further promotion of boodlers and scoundrels to exalted public station. Its platform favors the robbery of all the people for the enrichment of the privileged classes. In view of these conditions, what else could Judge Gresham, as an honorable man, do except turn his back upon the Republican party?

THE National Association of Democratic Clubs has done most effective work for party success, and Democrats ought to give it their active cooperation everywhere. There should be in every election district a Democratic club to co-operate with the League as well as with the local committee. League clubs and local clubs ought to work together under the League's plans of thorough organization and complete knowledge of the politics of every neighborhood.

THE Republicans have been industriously spreading the report that State Statistician Peelle, of Indiana, had issued a report showing that Indiana workingmen have been receiving higher wages since the passage of the McKinley bill. Mr. Peelle now announces that he has made no such report; that he will make no report until next January, and that he has no data upon which to base such a report, as no report of wages received before the passage of the McKinley bill has ever been made to his office. Not having the data, he refuses to do what Peck did—evolve them from the depths of his consciousness.

THE American Economist which has gained for itself an enviable reputation as one of the most reliable tariff liars in the country, publishes a picture this week of a dozen bottles of beer, in a basket with the following inscription beneath: "Taxed 60 cents per dozen. Price 60 cents per dozen." Of course this is a lie. Bottled beer to the consumer usually costs 15 cents a bottle, and if purchased by the dozen cannot be obtained for less than 10 cents a bottle with the bottle returned. Every beer-drinker in Memphis knows that he could not buy a dozen bottles of beer, and keep the bottles for 5 cents a bottle.

COURIER-JOURNAL: The results of the late elections in Georgia and Florida are better than the most sanguine Democrats had expected. With majorities in each State double what had been counted on, they are, indeed, all that could be desired, and leave no longer a doubt that the South will stand true to the Democracy in the coming national election. The people have spoken with such emphasis that this verdict will be accepted as conclusive. It settles the question of a solid South. It will demoralize the Weaver party in that section, and recall wavering Democrats to their duty. It proves that the Southern people understand the situation; that they have not been blinded to their real interests by the agitators of an impossible third party; that they realize that the Democracy is their only hope for the relief they so much need, and their only barrier against a party which by disfranchising them would deprive them of all power to aid in securing that relief. The effect of these elections will be most beneficial to the party everywhere. It will give new courage and confidence to the Democracy in the East and West, and will add new inspiration to the gallant fight it is making for Cleveland and Stevenson. The tide in the South, as in the North, seems to be with us. If the Southern elections do not mean that, then there is meaning in nothing.

CHICAGO TIMES: The third-party movement has run its course. The outcome of the State election in Georgia demonstrates that the electors of the country, wiser than would-be leaders, understand precisely where the fight lies. The populists are opposed to John Sherman's management of the finances of the country. John Sherman stands for Republicanism. The populists are opposed to the plutocratic tendencies and achievements of the Republican party. The populists are opposed to corruption at the ballot box; to that abuse of the electoral system which gave, in 1876, the electoral vote of Florida to Hayes, when the people of the State had voted for Tilden; to that corruption which Dudley practiced when he wrote his "blocks-of-five" circular, and which a judicial favorite of President Harrison, advanced since then to higher place, showed when he sought to protect Dudley from condign punishment. The populists are opposed to the high taxation of the people, which McKinleyism, otherwise Republicanism, has foisted upon this nation. Their thought and hope was directly and positively to secure the election of their own nominees. Herein they did not take the true measure of the popular sentiment. If Republicanism is to be overthrown the agent of its downfall will be the Democratic party. It must be necessarily. It is the only possible agent for carrying out the ideas which the populists in common with the Democracy uphold when they arraign Republicanism. There are practically but two candidates and two parties in this contest. The elector who is against Cleveland is for Harrison, though he may not vote for the Republican candidate. His vote for Weaver is aid and comfort to Republicanism.

THE PRESENT CAMPAIGN

A PROCESSION OF G. O. P. DISAPPOINTMENTS.

One by One the Winged Lies Have Fallen Before the Democratic Huntsmen—Republicans Are Now Occupying Their Last Redoubt.

Flight of the Roorbacks.

The Republican campaign has up to date been a procession of disappointments to the party. Every move made by the Republicans has been promptly met by the alert and smiling Democrats. When Congress was about to adjourn the Republicans immediately made the charge that the Democratic House had failed to cut down expenses, and that the Fifty-second Congress would also be a billion dollar affair. The Democrats promptly showed that nearly eighty millions of the appropriations of this Congress were a legacy from the previous Republican Congress, which could not be eliminated, and that had it not been for the Democratic House the appropriations would have been forty or fifty millions more. Thus was campaign lie number one nailed. Then it was claimed that the McKinley bill had lowered prices and raised wages, but Senator Carlisle showed that in the principal protected industries wages had been decreased while in the principal unprotected industries wages had been increased. The claim that the McKinley bill had lowered prices became embarrassing from the fact that the Republicans were trying to convince the farmers that they were getting more for their products, and to satisfy the general consumer that he was paying less for these same products. Obviously this was an impossible undertaking, and so the conflicting untruths killed each other. Campaign lie No. 2, therefore, came to a bad end. Mr. Harrison and Mr. Blaine both told us that reciprocity had opened up new markets for the United States. We do not like to speak of these eminent gentlemen as circulating a campaign lie, but it has assumed the exact counterfeit of one, and must be treated as such; for the Statistical Abstract issued from the office of Secretary Charles Foster shows that while in 1891 under reciprocity we exported not quite a million dollars more of our products to the South American countries and islands, we imported from them fully $30,000,000 more of their products than we did in 1890. Thus reciprocity has made the United States a splendid market for Brazil, Cuba and other countries. And so perished campaign lie No. 3. The next charge was that the Democratic party had come out for the first time unequivocally for Free Trade, that they proposed to burn up the custom houses and perpetrate other heinous offenses against the holy tariff. A reference to the Republican campaign documents and newspapers of four years ago shows that exactly the same untruth was circulated then, and so the Republicans have done the Democrats the favor of taking all the scare off the free-trade scare, as the results in Maine and Vermont show. Campaign lie No 4, therefore, came to a natural death in Vermont, and the body was interred in Maine. Then came the wholesale accusation that the negroes in Mississippi, Arkansas, and other States had been disfranchised by the new ballot laws, coupled with the suggestion that the Congressional representation of those States should be cut down. The vote of Arkansas proved, however, to be up to high-water mark, showing that the illiterates of that State were not so sensitive as those of Maine and other Republican States. But we have called the attention of those Republican papers that were crying for a reduction or representation in Mississippi, not only to be the fact that Massachusetts and other Northern States had property qualifications, but to the fact that under the secret ballot laws, some 18,000 voters had been "disfranchised" in Maine, 10,000 in Vermont, and 76,000 in the President's own State of Indiana; and, strange to say, there has been no talk of a reduction of representatives in any of these States. Campaign lie No. 5 is therefore in a dying condition, and Dr. Tom Carter can give no hopes. The Republican party is now occupying its last redoubt. "Harrison has given us a safe administration, and it will never do to disturb the business of the country by a change of administration and a modification of the tariff." So say the desperate advocates of Plutocracy; but it will not avail them. The business stability of the United States has been demonstrated not to depend on the election of a Republican president; and, as a matter of fact, there has never been so much distress among the working people of the country as during this administration. The farmers of the South are grasping at every straw for relief. The farmers of the West have repudiated the high protection party, and they, too, are borne down by burdens which make the talk about prosperity a mockery to their hearts. The Republican party has for years lied the party of the plain people—the Democracy—out of their heritage. The people have been tricked and cheated until their eyes are opened, and there is good ground for believing that the efficacy of Republican falsehood has lost all its virility. One by one the winged lies have fallen before the Democratic huntsmen, and the hunt is nearly over.—Appeal-Avalanche.

More Figgers Ordered.

The very interesting announcement is made that the Republicans have hit upon a better plan to secure statistics than through the Commissioners of various States. They have given an order, it seems, to Census Superintendent Porter for a wholesale job lot of figgers showing that wages have been raised in one hundred cities of the country.

This looks like business. Instead of bothering with a statistician here and another there, they determined to go straight to headquarters for Republican figgers, and the National Committee placed with the Census Superintendent the order for the required reports.

There is no disputing the wisdom of this course. As a purveyor of Republican statistics, the Census Superintendent has no superior, and the Republican National Committee can rest assured that its large order will be promptly and carefully filled.

The Georgia Election.

Several State elections have been held since June 21, when the Democratic party nominated Grover Cleveland for President of the United States. These elections have occurred at different times. In every instance the Democrats have gained. These States were remote from each other—Maine and Florida, Vermont and Arkansas. And now comes Georgia with a Democratic majority of about 70,000. The Populites declared at Omaha that they would carry the State of Ben Hill and Alexander Stephens. It was in that State where it was supposed the Ocala doctrines had taken the firmest root. It was in that State where the Populites had been most aggressive. But the result of the election shows Georgia had not been affected in the slightest degree by the assault. Her Democrats are true to the old banner, and they have grandly demonstrated their unswerving fealty to the party of Thomas Jefferson. The stars in their courses are fighting for the Democracy, and victory is in the air. The people have turned to Grover Cleveland as the man to lead them out of the distresses brought upon them by the maladministration of the Republican party during the last thirty years. They will not be content with the specious promises and unsubstantial dreams of the third party. They are demanding a restoration of the government to the Jeffersonian basis, and they look to the Democratic party and its leaders to abolish class legislation. The news from Georgia will inspire confidence among Democrats throughout the Union. The supreme test of the power of the third party was made in Georgia, and the blow struck by the Georgia Democrats has been a finishing stroke. It will not recover. The exposure of the numerical weakness of the party has been complete.—Appeal-Avalanche.

They Are on the Run.

The voters of the United States are not overlooking the straws which infallibly fix the direction of the political breeze. Republican flock-gatherers are endeavoring to repudiate the force bill issue, and Secretary Elkins has gone so far in his West Virginia campaign as to denounce it as an infamous measure, such as his party would never seek to make a part of our national legislation. That these declarations are made for campaign purposes only, and to soothe the alarm of those who foresee the practical workings of such an enormity, is apparent to all who read and observe. The one hope of perpetuating the Republican party in power is for it to secure absolute control of the election machinery throughout the country. The New York Tribune recognized what the party hoped to secure through the force bill by saying that in it were four McKinley bills.

On the tariff question the Republicans fear and refuse a joint discussion between men ably representing the respective views of the two parties, even the patron saint of high protection failing to enter the lists, though challenged by men who are more than worthy of his steel. The tools of monopolistic interests are content to place their misrepresentations before the people in the most plausible manner, and, if possible, lead them to the indorsement of a tariff system which is constantly reducing the number of those who control the capital and the vast resources of this country, while poverty or reduced income and privileges is the inevitable fate of all others.

These professed friends of the laboring classes, who include nearly all members of great trusts, corporations, and monopolies, have drawn upon the absurdly false report of Commissioner Peck, of New York, and sought to make political capital of evidence so unwarranted that it was burned to avoid an exposure of its rottenness. They have signally failed to establish a claim that wage earners have fared better in Massachusetts than before the McKinley bill was enacted, and in pettifogging a hopeless case are only injuring their own cause.

In some of the silver States, notably Colorado, Republican stump orators, whose sole mission is to secure votes for Harrison, regardless of methods, are proclaiming his fealty to the cause of free silver. Ex-Senator Thomas M. Bowen so proclaimed in his speech at Creede, and guaranteed the correctness of his statement to his thousands of listeners.

Much else might be truthfully said to show that the Republican party has degenerated to an organized hypocrisy. It has outlived the days of its usefulness, and it is not only on the defensive but on the run.

Some Cleveland Utterances.

The world has not produced so grand a spectacle as a nation of freedom determining its own cause.

We seek to win a victory which shall redeem the pledges we have made to regard constantly the interests of the people of the land.

We have now on hand all the silver dollars necessary to supply the present needs of the people, and to satisfy those who from sentiment wish to see them in circulation.

This reflection lends to the bestowal of pensions a kind of sacredness which invites the adoption of such principles and regulations as will exclude perversions as well as insure a liberal and generous application of grateful and benevolent designs.

A party should at all times, and in all places, be made to feel the consequences of their misdeeds as long as they have remaining any power for harm, and as long as they justify and defend their wrong-doing.

I am convinced that our duty to those who have trusted us consists in pushing on, continuously and vigorously, the principles in the advocacy of which we have triumphed, and thus superseding all that is ignoble and unworthy.

With a party united and zealous; with no avoidance of any legitimate issue; with a refusal to be diverted from the consideration of great national and State questions to the discussion of misleading things, and with such a presentation of the issues involved as will prove our faith in the intelligence of the people, the result cannot be doubted.

Judge Gresham's Value.

DEMOCRATS can afford to exchange General Sickles for Judge Gresham.—Toledo Bee.

THE action of Judge Gresham takes Indiana out of the list of doubtful States. There is not the least question about that.—Evansville Courier.

"I SHALL vote for Mr. Cleveland, and that is all there is about it," says Judge Gresham. Well, there is a good deal about that.—Louisville Times.

WHEN life-long Republicans like Judge Gresham, Judge Cooley and General MacVeagh bolt their party's ticket there is something decidedly wrong with that ticket.—Wheeling Register.

THE accession of Judge Gresham, Judge Cooley and ex-Attorney General MacVeagh to the ranks of Democracy is likely to cause a panic among the Republican managers.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

IT is safe to say that it means more than the transfer of a few doubtful Western States to the Cleveland column. Judge Gresham has a very large following both in the Republican and People's parties.—Philadelphia Record.

HIS example will be followed by all who, like him, have respect for their convictions and strength of character to assert themselves.—Illinois State Register.

THE number of voters who will follow his lead will be even larger than would have been the case if he had yielded to the blandishments of the third party.—Buffalo Inquirer.

TO HIM as to great multitudes of people, the truth is no longer disguisable that the McKinley bill was passed for the benefit of a comparatively few persons.—Brooklyn Citizen.

IT carries consternation into the enemy's camp. It defeats the last ray of hope of carrying Indiana for Harrison. It makes the State of Illinois doubly doubtful.—Utica Observer.

WE know of no man whose defection would injure the Republican party in the West more than Judge Gresham's. He is a man of the highest character.—Macon Telegraph.

THE accession of Judge Gresham will go far toward breaking the backbone of the Harrison ticket in Indiana, Illinois and other Western States where he is most popular and has been commanding influence.—Rochester Union.

READ THE TESTIMONY.

413 N. 20th St., Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 22, [illegible]
Western Pearl Co., Chicago, Ill.
Dear Gentlemen:—I received the Safety Bicycle last Saturday about 5 p. m. I was very much surprised at seeing such an elegant, handsome Safety. It is really more than I expected. By trials and testimonials I find your firm is reliable in its dealings and promises. I really cannot express my thanks for the nice Safety.
Yours truly, [illegible]

Dear Sirs:—The Bicycle came promptly. The boy is overjoyed. He acted like a crazy child for awhile. Over and over he repeated, "It seems as if I were dreaming, but no, there it is"; and then he would go to it and pat it and talk to it. We have found you men of your word. Thanking you for your faithfulness to your word, I remain, Yours respectfully, [illegible]

Warning.

Many internal remedies are glibly advertised, to shorten labor and lessen the pains of Child-Birth, and with wonderful inconsistency to regulate menstruation. Common sense should teach any woman that a preparation adapted for menstrual disorders will not prepare the system for Child-Birth. We earnestly say, beware of all such; they can at this critical time do no good; and their use may be fatal. It is only by persistent external treatment, thus relaxing and softening all the parts, that the dread hour is robbed of its pain and terror, and no remedy on earth does this but "Mother's Friend." Bradfield Reg. Co., Atlanta, Ga. Sold by all druggists.

Age of Animals.

As circumstances alter cases, so the age of any full-grown animal cannot be determined by the teeth. When all the permanent teeth appear an animal is full grown, and its age to this time is decided by this fact. But after this the teeth may be worn by sandy pasture, or discolored, or fail by disease, or be affected in various ways so as to make it impossible to certainly fix the age.

A FEAST IN ZULULAND.

The Killing of the Cattle for the Occasion an Exciting Event.

A dozen magnificent long-horned cattle were run into the kraal, and seven stalwart warriors followed them in, assagais in hand. Crowding the cattle in a bunch against the wall, each warrior singled out a victim, and with a mighty thrust plunged the keen, bright blade into the animal's heart. Generally speaking, the one swift, sure blow was sufficient, but in two or three cases the stricken animals avoided the death thrust, and, goaded to madness by the deep wound, made matters exceedingly lively for the Zulus for the next few minutes, chasing them frantically about the kraal until some well-hurled assegai brought them to earth. One big steer, horned like a Texan, kept his feet and fought till a dozen assegai blades were hurled buried in his body, and in his blind rushing he knocked over a couple of men, and ripped one very badly up the thigh.

The whole affair was as exciting as a Spanish bull-fight. When they were all killed the crowd, who had been enjoying the fun from the kraal wall, hopped into the arena and assisted in the work of skinning and cutting up. As many as could get around an animal assisted, and one could scarce imagine a more barbarous spectacle than a horde of Zulus skinning and dissecting a dozen cows The blood was allowed to remain in the flesh, and men, women and children were seen carrying off huge pieces of red, quivering flesh, slung over their shoulders, with the blood trickling down their sleek, dark skins to their heels. Children besmeared their faces and bodies for fun, and about each carcass a group of tall, black warriors hacked and slashed, like the savages they were. While the women boiled the beef in big iron kettles obtained from Natal, the warriors engaged in a big dance.

You can never quite catch the spirit of a Zulu dance by merely hearing it described, any more than you can realize the exhilaration of wine without trying it. The warriors turned out about 300 strong on this occasion, and the dance took place on a level bit of ground outside the kraal. The whole community was gathered in a black mass, squatting in irregular ranks on the grass to see the dance. After the beeves had all been cut up, the warriors retired to their huts. Then very shortly they came straggling out again, one by one, the blood washed off and their bodies decorated with all the gewgaws of war. Many wore kilts of Zanzibar cat-tails or the tails of wolves and foxes, and round their calves and biceps were ornaments of bead and of leopard skin. On each warrior's head was a discus of black mimosa gum, polished until it looked like a circle of jet. With ox-hide shields and bright assegais they trooped into the kraal until all were assembled.

Then, forming into ranks as natural as a company of grenadiers, they marched out into the dancing ground, singing a strange, weird chant in accompaniment to the rattle of assegai on shield and measured tramp of feet. One could see at a glance now that every Zulu is a warrior born. Here they were, the veriest savages to all intent, naked as animals, yet playing soldier with a bearing and precision of movement that European troops, with all their scientific training, could hardly hope to beat. Forward they stepped, then filing off into semi-circles two deep, they stood, proud and erect, the most splendid specimens of martial manhood I ever saw, their black eyes glistening with suppressed fire, their chests heaving and muscles twitching in anticipation of the signal to begin. For a minute they stood there, every foot in the crescent keeping time, and every assegai softly tapping time against the shield to a low, buzzing melody.—Boston Bulletin.

A DRUNKEN ELEPHANT.

Raises a Big Rumpus in a Circus in Indiana.

The mistake of a careless keeper in the menagerie of Ringling Brothers' circus, while exhibiting in Frankfort, Ind., recently, almost resulted in the killing of one of the attendants and the breaking loose of the wild animals of the menagerie. "Babe," the biggest elephant of the circus, was taken with cramps, and the veterinary surgeon of the show prescribed a tablespoonful of peppermint in a pint of whisky once in half an hour. Ryan, the elephant keeper, procured a jug containing a gallon of whisky, and Babe was given a dose. Ryan had occasion to leave the tent, and carelessly left the jug within reach of the elephant, who had had a taste of the contents. When Ryan returned he was surprised to find the jug uncorked and empty. Fearing discharge, should his carelessness be discovered, and knowing full well where the contents of the jug had gone, he hastened to a near-by saloon to have it refilled before the mistake should be found out.

But it was not long before the elephant began to develop symptoms of intoxication. The attention of other keepers was attracted by peculiar noises, the like of which they had never heard before. They hastened to the tent to find the huge brute rocking from side to side with a peculiar light in its little eyes. One of the men took an elephant hook and endeavored to calm the excited beast, but the medicine was not of a soothing nature, and Babe became very angry. With a remarkably quick motion the keeper was seized by the elephant's trunk, and after being held aloft fully a minute was violently thrown about twenty-five feet, fortunately striking against the side of the tent and narrowly missing a pole.

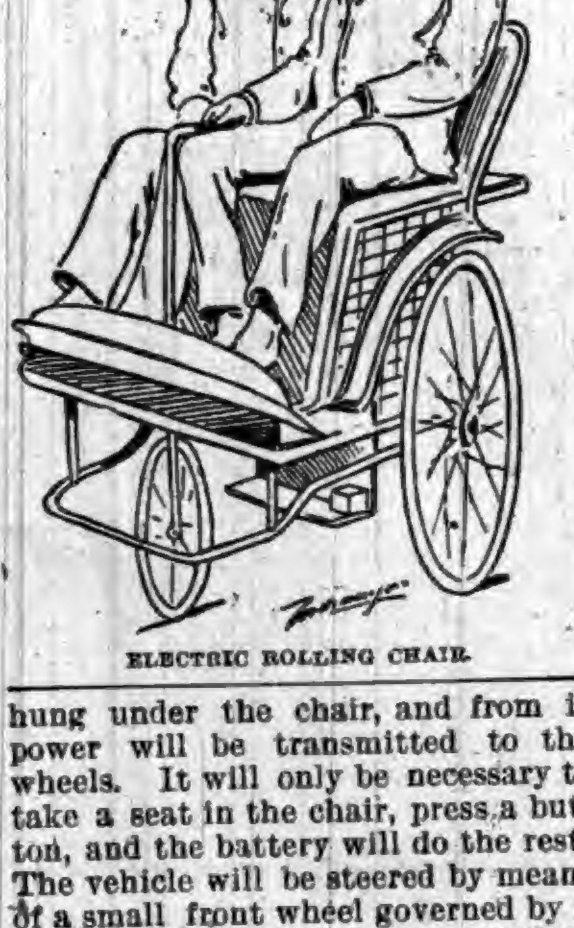
With a single mighty effort the chains were broken and Babe was free. Staggering from side to side, the animal commenced a wild rampage through the menagerie. The other elephants were panic-stricken, and the caged animals made mad efforts to free themselves. The tank of the hippopotamus was in the path of the reeling elephant, and with loud trumpetings it commenced an attack which would have shortly demolished the cage had not the keepers succeeded in entangling the legs of the elephant in ropes in such a manner that it was rendered helpless. In two hours the effects of the whisky had passed off, and Babe was as peaceable as ever and free from cramps.

ROLLING CHAIRS

Make It Possible for the Physically Disabled to Go the Rounds.

You can press a button and take a seat and ride in an electric rolling chair at the World's Fair. It has been decided that no carriages will be allowed within the grounds, and some means of conveyance must be provided for those who are physically unable to meet the exertion of walking through all the departments. In this emergency another "button" device has been provided. It is in the shape of an electric tricycle with a chair frame.

The tricycle will be operated by electricity. A storage battery will be hung under the chair, and from it power will be transmitted to the wheels. It will only be necessary to take a seat in the chair, press a button, and the battery will do the rest. The vehicle will be steered by means of a small front wheel governed by a lever. The battery is warranted to last fourteen hours without recharging, so that there will be no danger of its balking at an unfortunate moment. The machines will be rented at so much an hour, the Exposition sharing in the profits.



ELECTRIC ROLLING CHAIR.

Kentucky Mountaineers.

In Mr. James Lane Allen's interesting book, "The Blue-Grass Region of Kentucky," one chapter is devoted to the inhabitants of the Cumberland Mountains. They are abjectly poor, for the most part. As the author expresses it, "They appear to have no sense of accumulation." "In some regions the great problem of life is to raise two dollars and a half during the year for county taxes." Agricultural methods are primitive. The plow is a "bull-tongue"—little more than a sharpened stick with a metal rim. Formerly the digging of "sang," ginseng, was one of the principal occupations. Much of it was shipped to China. The crop is now nearly exhausted, although in some of the wilder regions whole families may still be seen 'out sangin'."

The people took it into town in bags, selling it at a dollar and ten cents—perhaps a dollar and a half—a pound. This was mainly the labor of the women and children, who went to work barefooted, amid briers and chestnut burrs, copperheads and rattlesnakes. Indeed, the woman prefer to go barefooted, finding shoes a trouble and constraint.

It was a sad day for the people when the "sang" grew scarce. A few years ago one of the counties was nearly depopulated in consequence of the exodus into Arkansas, whence had come the news that "sang" was plentiful.

The dwellings—often mere cabins with a single room—are built of rough-hewn logs, chinked or daubed, though not always. One mountaineer, called into court to testify as to the household goods of a defendant neighbor, gave in as the inventory: A string of pumpkins, a skillet without a handle, and a "wild Bill." A "wild Bill" is a bed made by boring auger-holes in a log, driving sticks into these, and overlaying them with hickory bark and sedge-grass—a favorite couch.

The low chimneys, made usually of laths daubed, are so low that the saying, inelegant but true, is current, that you may sit by the fire inside and spit out over the top. The cracks in the walls are often large enough to give ingress and egress to child or dog.

Naturally there is little desire for education. The mountain schools have sometimes less than half a dozen pupils for the few months they are in session. A gentleman who wanted a coal bank opened engaged for the work a man passing along the road. Some days later he learned that his workman was a school teacher who, in consideration of the seventy-five cents a day, had dismissed his academy.

Many of the people, allured by rumors from the West, have migrated thither, but nearly all come back from love of the mountains and indisposition to cope with the rush and vigor and enterprise of frontier life. Theirs, they say, is a good lazy man's home.

Praise and Appreciation.

There are persons in this world—and the pity is that there are not more of them—who care less for praise than appreciation. They have an ideal after which they are striving, but of which they consciously fall short, as every one who has a lofty ideal is sure to do. When that ideal is recognized by another, and they are praised or commended for something—let that something be important or not—in its direction, they are grateful, not for praise, but for appreciation. An element of sympathy enters into that recognition, and they feel that they have something in common with the observer who admires what they admire and praises what they think is most worthy of praise.

IF Christopher Columbus had landed among a people like the denizens of Fire Island, the settlement of America might have been delayed several centuries. They were more gentle savages where he first came in contact with them.

THE INDUSTRIAL ADVANTAGES
—OF—
FORT WAYNE, IND.

As a place of residence Fort Wayne is unsurpassed by any city in Indiana. Its agreeable climate, the prevalence of thrift and comfort apparent even in the dwellings of the working people, and the numerous and costly residences of the wealthy, together with unsurpassed Religious Privileges and Educational Facilities, combine to make this city one to be desired.

It is surely a City of Homes, as the visitor will be convinced when he looks with infinite pleasure upon the houses of the mechanic, the clerk, the young business man, and the laborer, miles and miles of streets being lined with neat but inexpensive houses, often surrounded by a plat of ground and owned by its occupant. Land has never been held at fancy prices, but the reasonable terms upon which the working classes have been able to obtain the great boon of owning their own homes has naturally enhanced the welfare of the city, and, apart from stimulating habits of thrift, has created a class of citizens who are content, and, having a stake in the country, are not so prone to become mixed up in labor troubles. The Savings Banks and Building and Loan Associations have done much good in this direction and numerous capitalists also stand ready to build and sell houses, payments to be made in small monthly sums, and no mechanic need be without a home of his own in Fort Wayne. Hundreds have been, and are now being built in that way, and the suburbs of Fort Wayne are rapidly filling up with neat and tasteful residences for the masses.

The climatic and sanitary conditions of Fort Wayne are first-class. Statistics show it to be one of the most healthful cities in the State. It is subject to no prevailing diseases, and has a perfect sewerage system.

The water works are city property, and the water taken from a nest of about eighty wells many hundred feet deep, and filtered through the sand and gravel of the naturally porous soil, thus making it absolutely pure and cool. The works are equipped with the Holly system having a capacity of four times the actual needs of the city.

The Fire Department is conceded to be among the best managed and most complete in the country and never has the city suffered from any great loss by fire.

Of its educational institutions enough cannot be said. No expense is spared in perfecting and developing a complete system of public schools and besides several scholastic institutions of high rank have here found adequate support and management.

The right place for the business man or manufacturer is where they can get the many advantages required to run their business and successfully compete with others in the same line. These many advantages are to be found in Fort Wayne with her Natural Gas (at about one-half the cost of other fuel) the many trunk lines of railroad running through the city, every express company in existence represented by their agents, cheap rents, or if they wish to purchase, good value in real estate, and low taxes.

HORACE FAIRBANKS, President of the St. Johnsbury and Lake Champlain railroad, Vermont, says: "I believe the business interests of the country, as well as the best interests of the railroad corporations, would be subserved by suspending the running of railroad trains on the Lord's day."

WIRE lath and glass shingles are now being manufactured, and by and by it will be so that a dutiful father will have to go clear up into the primeval lumber camps to pick up something with which to caress his erring boy.—Burlington Hawkeye.

The Sultan's Day's Work.

A salary of $10,000 a day would appear to those who have but few wants a nice competency. That is the daily wages of Abdul Hamid, and no sovereign alive earns his money harder. Out of that sum he has, moreover, to pay for his own board, fire, and candles, his lodgings alone are free; so that considering the footing on which his establishment is placed, he must be a man of order and economy to make both ends meet with so small an income at his command. There is, indeed, no more diligent or active man in his empire than the sultan, and it is literally true of him to say that he eats his bread in the sweat of his brow. He gives personal audience to everyone who applies for it, whenever it is possible; when not, his first adjutant gives audience for him. The 600 wives of Abdul-Aziz have vanished and Abdul Hamid finds it as much as he can do to meet the milliner's bills of a poor three dozen spouses. This scanty harem leaves him a good deal more time for devotion and state business. He leaves his apartment betimes, and bathes the prison of his soul in tepid water, after which he stretches himself full length upon a carpet and breathes a silent morning prayer. He then drinks a cup of chocolate and proceeds immediately after to the affairs of the state. Dispatches are received and sent, reports examined and approved of, expenses consented to, decorations granted, ministers and ambassadors received, and that goes on for several hours. Toward noon a second carpet is spread at the feet of the ruler of the faithful, whereon he prays again, and then takes his second breakfast. After that he goes out for a drive, and when he returns he is at the disposal of his family and the inhabitants of the palace. He gives audience to his brothers and sisters, listens to the report of the household officers, confers with the chief of the eunuchs on all sorts of delicate subjects and gives him his orders. The imaum, or chaplain of the palace, also comes in the evening, and the sultan prays or reads some pious book with him. Three times in the week the sultan takes lessons on the piano from a French teacher—that is, he listens to his teacher playing a few morceaux, but never plays a single scale himself. Later in the evening he dispatches more state business, and then an hour before midnight he, accompanied only by the chief of the eunuchs, retires to the mysterious recesses of the harem.—Exchange.

His Regular Business.

According to the Hour, young Rounceville was very much in love with Ida Mumfey. Rounceville was manly, dressed well, danced gracefully, and, more than all, was an excellent talker, being famous for his brilliant and entertaining conversation. He had not yet proposed to the young lady, but in order to meet her at one party gave up another very large and brilliant one at Wedgewood Hendrick's, at which Mr. Prodder was present. Prodder had always said that Rounceville was a good fellow, but could not afford to marry, and positively forbade his daughter to become interested in the young man.

At the party just mentioned Rounceville determined to offer himself to Miss Ida, tell her frankly that he was poor, and leave his fate in her hands. When he had spoken to her alone in a little side-room, and she replied by putting her hand on his shoulder, he knew that he had lost nothing by his candor.

Just then the couple heard Prodder and Mumfey in low conversation outside the alcove.

"All there is about him is just this," Prodder said. "I was telling young Perk I wished I could find some bright fellow like himself to come to my wife's birthday party and stir up the stupid folks a little. He named Rounceville and said I could hire him at $25 a night, that being his regular business. He's gone back on Mrs. Wedgewood Hendrick to-night, and lost $25 just to see your daughter. What can you think of such a fellow?"

"Why, I think he must care a good deal for the girl," exclaimed Mumfey. "When I was a young fellow I cared more for $25 than all the girls alive."

As soon as the conversation ceased for a moment the young man turned toward the girl and whispered: "It is all true," and Ida threw her arms around Rounceville's neck.

"Well, what are you going to do about it?" The couple heard Prodder ask.

"I'm going to say 'yes,' if he asks me for my daughter," said Mumfey, "and I'm going to offer him a half interest in my business. Young fellows that can make themselves agreeable, even when they're paid for it, are hard to find, and those that care more for a decent girl than they do for upper-crust society and a $25 job are scarcer."

Uses of Sweet Oil.

Clean bronzes with sweet oil, carefully rubbed on, then polish with chamois.

If troubled with croaking shoes, rub the sides of the soles with a little sweet oil.

Sweet oil will clean Britannia metal; rub it well with a flannel cloth and then wash off in warm suds.

For sunburn, sweet oil and lime water—two parts oil to one of lime water—will be found very efficacious.

To remove warts, apply sweet oil and cinnamon, which will in time cause them to disappear.

For inflammatory rheumatism, dissolve into a pint of sweet oil one ounce of pulverized saltpetre and thoroughly rub the parts affected.—Good Housekeeper.

Silage.

Whenever the conditions are favorable for the rotting of silage, there it is quite possible for the sidelining to rot also if the lining be of wood.

No more old pills for me. Small Bile Beans, if you please.

A MAN sentenced to be hanged is above suspicion.

THE GETTING IT DOWN is bad enough, with the ordinary pill. But the having it down is worse. And, after all the disturbance, there's only a little temporary good. From beginning to end, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are better. They're the smallest and easiest to take—tiny, sugar-coated granules that any child is ready for. Then they do their work so easily and so naturally that it lasts. They absolutely and permanently cure Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, Sick and Bilious Headaches, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels. They're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned.

THE MAKERS of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy say: "If we can't cure your Catarrh no matter what your case is, we'll pay you $500 in cash." Now you can see what is said of other remedies, and decide which is most likely to cure you. Costs only 50 cents.

Caving In.

Just as a rotten tenement collapses when too great a weight or strain is brought to bear upon its upper floors, so does a puny physique collapse and cave in when subjected to the strain of disease which must come sooner or later if it is not re-enforced and built up. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is of immense service to the debilitated, the nervous and the dyspeptic, because it strengthens and prevents them from caving in. It is not necessary to have the biceps of a Samson to be healthfully vigorous. Many slender, apparently fragile and undersized people enjoy phenomenal health. Vigor means the ability to digest, sleep, and eat well. This power Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will confer. It will, besides, cure malaria, bilious, rheumatic and kidney ailments, mitigate the infirmities of age, and overcome nervousness.

Inoculating Cattle in Africa.

During our midday halt he had all our oxen inoculated with the virus of the lung sickness, for this fatal malady was then raging in Khama's country. Our wagons were placed side by side, and with an ingenious contrivance of thongs our conductor and driver managed to fasten the plunging animals by the horns, while a string steeped in the virus was passed with a needle through their tails. Sometimes after this process the tails swell and fall off, and up country a tailless ox has a value peculiarly his own. It is always rather a sickly time for the poor beasts, but as we lost only two out of thirty-six from this disease, we voted the remedy successful.—Fortnightly Review.

The Condition of the Country.

The New York Herald declares that the business of the country is in a provokingly healthy and flourishing condition. Business failures for the first half of the present year have been 1,000 fewer in number and $40,000,000 in gross liabilities than they were during the corresponding period of 1891. The average man can therefore look forward to long continued prosperity, but let him not, in the face and eyes of this, neglect his health and break down from overwork, care and intense desire to do too much. Let him guard against the slightest inroads of ill health. Almost all the diseases that attack men in middle life begin with a cold. If neglected it soon develops and leads to great trouble. When you have a cold get a bottle of Reid's German Cough and Kidney Cure, the best remedy in the world for every form of throat and lung trouble. It contains nothing delterious and can be given to the tenderest infant without the slightest danger. It is unrivaled for croup and will cure the worst case of pneumonia. The small bottles are 25c: the large ones 50c.

THURSDAY.......OCTOBER 20, 1892.

VOORHEES here Thursday—to-day.

REMEMBER McNagny at Cedar Creek to-morrow.

HEAVY snow last week in the mountains of Colorado.

BYNUM made a great speech at Butler last week. He is becoming one of the best that we have.

HOMESTEAD strikers offer $500 for a proved case, when a man's wages have been increased by the McKinley tariff.

CAPT. GEO. W. BELL, the silver-tongued tariff talker, speaks at Hudson, Oct. 26, at 2 p. m. It is as good as a school, to hear him. All come.

CAPT. W. R. MYRES speaks at Garrett Nov. 3. Everybody likes Capt. Myres, and he is besides an able speaker on any subject. Don't forget his date.

THE republicans boast of reciprocity, and of "free trade between the states," and then object to the democratic plan of giving us more of the same sort.

COLUMBUS discovered America 400 years ago to-morrow, Oct. 21, according to the present mode of reckoning time, although Oct. 12 is usually given in our histories.

GOV. JAMES E. CAMPBELL, of Ohio, speaks at Columbia City, next Tuesday, October 25, in the afternoon. Everybody should go and hear the ablest and pluckiest Buckeye of the age.

IT is rather a give away, on our republican exchanges to picture Mr. Cleveland as carrying around a bottle of that old Scotch whisky that Carnegie sent over to his dear friend Benjamin Harrison.

MRS. LEASE, the lady speaker, who has been speaking for the people's party, now turns around and advises them to vote for Harrison. And yet there are a few democrats who can't see that the whole thing is a fine game to elect republican candidates.

GOV. CHASE did not make himself any more popular by taking the occasion of a soldiers' reunion at Garrett to make a political speech—especially a bitter, abusive one. Many old soldiers dropped out of the procession, and went off. From what we hear of him, it is evident he is just the sort of a man to call people "imps of hell"

THE cry for a "home market" is a fraud. We could not live on a home market. Suppose DeKalb county could not send any of its surplus wheat abroad who would buy and use it inside of the county. And so of everything else. Let us sell to all the world. We can supply all they need. The wider our market, the more work will we have to supply it, and business will boom.

A GREAT deal of false truck is published by republicans about state banks issuing "wild-cat money." They don't know what they are talking about. No state bank ever issued any "wildcat money." The so called wildcat money was issued by private parties only, and that kind of business can never be revived. The state banks had no more to do with wildcat money than the national banks now have.

Money to Loan.

I am now prepared to loan money on the best terms to farmers who can give mortgage on land as security. Come and see me and be satisfied, Office over Farmers Bank. My regular office days are Saturdays.

E. L. CASEBEER,
Auburn, Ind.

REPUBLICANS of this state are helping the railroads to fight the new tax law, and the railroads are now asking their employes to vote the republican ticket, so that the next legislature will give railroads lower taxes. But the people will have to pay that much more tax in such a case, as it costs a certain sum to run the state government, whoever pays it. How do our people like to have any more monopolies to rule over them?

DUPE the people is the republican style. McKinley fixed up a tariff on tin plates of 2 2 cents a pound instead of the old rate of 1 cent. Then he had the date for it to go into operation fixed some time ahead. Then his friends, the importers, made big orders, at old rates, but put up the price at once, and made big money. Even when the law went into effect, they had large stocks on hand, of cheap tin, which they sold at high prices.

CLEVELAND'S administration had no scandals such as seen in Harrison's. It was clean and honest, and the country prospered better. And the cry about old soldiers not having a fair chance, is false. He signed more pension bills, than all other presidents. And his commissioner of pensions, Gen. Black rejected only 185,000 pension cases in the same time that Raum has rejected 407,000. The pensions granted under Cleveland, were as liberal to say the least as those under Harrison.

REPUBLICAN papers have about stopped complaining of the new democratic tax law, which they advocated all up to the time the campaign opened. The state taxes have been increased, $1,230,000, of which the railroads alone pay $987,000, or nearly five sixths. On the other hand, it is proved by the reports of the counties, that local republican officers, school trustees, and republican commissioners, have increased local taxes over $1,600,000 though the money all came out of the people, and was not needed as was the case for the state. They did it to make the law odious. The law is all right, if more of the officers were democrats.

THE FT. WAYNE GAZETTE of Sunday, Oct. 16, has an article admitting that its party is paying the campaign expenses of the people's party, in all cases where they can thus divide the democratic vote and possibly elect their own men by that means. This especial article alludes to the people's party in Alabama. It says "Alabama's democratic majority is usually about 40,000, and it may be overcome next month. * * * The republican managers are alert to the opportunity presented, and are paying the campaign expenses of the third partyites."

We shall keep this copy of the Gazette, the leading republican party organ of northern Indiana, and any people's party democrat, who still doubts he is being made a tool of to elect the republican ticket, can come to the COURIER office and read it.

THE Dispatch had quite an article last week about "Democratic Protection Leaders." We have already asserted, and we defy proof of the contrary, that of the early democrats named, not one was what is now called a protectionist. A protectionist now means one who favors the high McKinley rate of nearly or quite 60 per cent on an average. We have already shown, and it has not yet been denied, that early democrats who are being quoted as protectionists, only wanted 5 to 10 per cent protection, on an average: Four years ago we were fighting to get a 47 rate reduced to 42, and the republican party put it up to 60. Such a rate would not have been tolerated, for a moment by those "early protection democrats." No not even by early republicans. The first national republican convention, in 1856, said no word about "protection." That of 1860 spoke of it merely in connection with raising revenue. But from this time on, the demands of the pet interests kept steadily growing till now a "protectionist" means a man who will take as high a rate as he can get, or a man who is willing to give as high a rate as any man will ask.

False Issues.

We have already said that republicans either have not the courage or the ability to fight fair. They have been driven from all the real issues, and have fallen back, as in other campaigns, to false positions and false issues. One of these is, "Wildcat Banks." But we have shown that no one favors or thinks of favoring any "wildcat bank." Another of their false issues is the cry that "England favors Cleveland." The full measure of the silliness of this cry, will appear, when we add that it has been known for some months that "Lying Bill Smith," the fellow who lied so rankly about Judge McClellan about two years ago, had been sent to England, to establish a temporary literary bureau over there, and furnish these letters for the London Times. As soon as Smith had time to get there, the letters began to appear in the Times, just as agreed on, and at the same time they were put in type in this country and sent out in plates to republican papers that are now using them. The Waterloo Press had them last week, and they have been in nearly all the others.

"The Farmer and the Tariff" would seem a real issue, but they make it ridiculous by claiming that under a low tariff, sheep did not increase, but did as soon as a high tariff was put on wool. Now, just imagine these poor untutored sheep standing around the halls of Congress bleating for favorable legislation, in order that they might go back to their homes and enter on a career of increase. We have already exploded their claim that Madison, Jefferson, etc., believed in protection. Very few protectionists would go back to the old rate of 5 to 10 per cent. They make another false issue by claiming that railway employes get higher wages here than abroad. But railroading is not a protected industry. Even a protectionist will not claim that foreigners are likely to bring their pauper railways over here to compete with ours.

The Apportionment Cases.

Judge McClellan's trip to Albion last week, was a surprise to the conspirators who were trying to steal the U. S. senatorship for millionaire Fairbanks. The Judge puncturde the bubble with neatness and dispatch. He promptly moved to have the cases dropped, and gave such unanswerable reasons, that it was done at once.

The same day, the supreme court at Indianapolis, refused a request to have the cases from Henry county "advanced" and brought up at once. While claiming the right to try the case, they decided to take more time, and so set the case for trial after election, Nov. 17. This stopped the whole matter till then. It also left poor Henry county, with its 600 republican majority, without a chance to elect anybody to the legislature unless their judge, Judge Bundy, could be permitted to go back on his own decision. This the supreme court now orders him to do, by ordering that his decision be stayed till after the supreme court has decided the matter. Of course if Henry county had been democratic, they would not have done this. But the republicans feel very foolish over the entire blundering business.

Rev. W. L. Meese, the inventor and manufacturer of the popular Auburn Swing Washer, has been meeting with continued and increasing success. He took first premium at the Waterloo fair, getting the diploma, the highest award they give for manufactured articles. Last week he received an order for one dozen machines from one man, Mr. Samuel Dotterer, a dealer at Junction, Paulding county, O., and he will also become county agent for the sale of the machines. This is quite a compliment as the new man knows them to be good machines, some six or seven of his relatives being already using them. Mr. Meese has greatly improved his washer since last year.

Fred C. Davis.

The community was saddened and shocked by the news early Wednesday morning of the death of Fred Davis. He had been sick a week or so with something like typhoid fever, but had been getting better. But on Saturday, he had a chill, and then took a relapse. Tuesday, he was very bad, and there was a consultation of physicians. The result of their deliberations, when made known gave the people the first intimation of the danger. It was almost certain he could not recover. He grew gradually worse, and died that night, at 11:25. The funeral will be on Saturday at 2 p. m. The early hour at which we go to press prevents a more complete notice.

Court,

There has been an unusual amount of work done, especially in the matter of estates and other probate business. The criminal docket is not large, but has been lively. The man Reed, who killed the showman at Garrett, was discharged because no proof could be secured. The proof depended on showmen, who are all out of reach. There is little doubt of his guilt, so Deputy prosecutor Garwood thinks. But a man cannot be convicted without at least a little proof, and in this case there was none.

Then there was the robbery case at Garrett. A man named Dunn found a stranger lying in an ice house, and assaulted and robbed him. The man it seems resisted, and Dunn took the pistol from him and struck him with it, killing him. Dunn and two companions then went out into the country together, and Dunn gave them a share of the money. But they afterwards repented and gave the money back to Dunn. He was arrested, and has plead guilty. He is now in jail awaiting sentence. Another case comes from Waterloo. Enos Vian who was assaulted the other day, by a man named Cross, is lying at last accounts, in a dangerous condition. Cross is in jail here awaiting results. There are seven in jail at present.

Curtis Dunham, the young chap who took Dell Purdy's team, is serving out a jail sentence of 60 days.

Erances Maxwell was divorced from E. B. Maxwell.

Case of Charles Kelley vs O. S. Davison and Mary Loveland, resulted in Kelley's favor. He had bought a mortgage note against the printing office of the People's Advocate, which Davison had bought of Miss Loveland. The judgment gives him $62, and the material of the office is ordered sold. Miss Loveland gets $230 on the rest of the chattel mortgages she holds, and will come in after Kelley's judgment is satisfied. Then Davison will get what is left. In other words, Davison will get left.

Word comes from Albion that the jury that tried Beck for the murder of Piatt at Rome City in June, decided to assess Beck a fine of $1 for assault. Piatt was beaten in his own buggy, and his body allowed to hang over the seat till taken out next morning.

CAMPBELL—TARNEY.

According to announcement last week, the marriage of Wallace B Campbell, of the Dispatch, to Miss Sadie E. Tarney was celebrated at the home of the bride's parents in Jackson township yesterday, Oct. 19, 1892, the ceremony being at 2 p. m., by Rev. Geo. Wade Healy of the Presbyterian church in Auburn.

Rarely will such a brief, though usual announcement, be read with more interest than this. Both parties are not only prominent in social and similar relations, but among the best known and most highly regarded of our young people.

Miss Sarah Elizabeth Tarney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Tarney, has a wide acquaintance, and a wider circle of friends and admirers among our literary people and in the educational circles of the state. She graduated from the State Normal school in 1884, and in the following year became principal of the schools at Bourbon, Marshall Co. But in 1886, she was elected assistant to the chair of Psychology and Methods in the State Normal, which place she held with marked ability and success till she resigned it last July. She has also been a prominent and strong worker in county and other teachers' institutes, gaining a high reputation wherever she appeared.

Wallace Bruce Campbell, the fortunate groom, has also won for himself an honorable place. He graduated at the State University at Bloomington in 1886, and was for a time assistant teacher of botany. The same year, he was elected principal of the High School at Paxton, Ill. In 1887, he was admitted to the bar at Crawfordsville, Ind., and practiced law two years. In 1889, he with Mr. Stevens, bought the Dispatch, and he has since been connected with that paper, and a citizen of Auburn.

Surely a union so auspiciously entered upon, will be a happy one, and to this sentiment, the COURIER heartily adds the full measure of its best wishes.

It might not be amiss, to add a few words as to the wedding itself. The home was most tastefully decorated with bright autumn leaves, ferns, etc. The bride looked lovely in a dress of cream colored crepe, trimmed in lace and ribbons of the same color. The groom wore a full dress suit. The ceremony was followed by an elegant lunch of creams, ices, cakes, fruits, etc.

Mr. and Mrs. Campbell took the afternoon train over the B. & O., and after seeing the world's fair celebration at Chicago, will make a short visit with the groom's parents at Roberts, Ill.

There were quite a number of friends of both parties to witness the ceremony, both from town and country and the wedding gifts were numerous, and in most excellent taste.

B. & O. Wreck.

There was a bad freight wreck on the B. & O. Sunday morning. At about half past five a through freight going east, met another going west, about one half mile west of the side track called Inverness, east of town. They had orders to meet there and the east bound was slowing up, expecting to run by the other which should have been on the side track. But the west bound had forgotten its orders and kept right on at full speed. There was a dense fog, and the headlights could not be seen till too late. The men jumped, but the fireman of the west bound and its head brakeman, also in the cab, were caught in the wreck. The latter was pinned fast by the iron ends of the cab and tender, and his legs crushed. It was several hours before he could be freed, and then only by having his legs sawed off, where they were crushed, Dr. Thompson, of Garrett, doing this, as he would lose his legs any way. Later they were properly amputated. An arm was badly hurt, and may also have to be taken off. He lives in Kentucky, and wrote a brief letter to his wife, while he lay pinned fast and crushed by the heavy iron ends. He stood it like a hero. The fireman, who resides at Garrett, was badly burned up and scalded by escaping steam. Both were taken to Garrett, where the fireman died that night. Two wreck trains were summoned early, and spent the day clearing the track. The two engines were the last things moved, but their heads were jammed together so hard, that the strength of two heavy locomotives could not pull them apart, and they were then pushed bodily to the sidetrack. Many cars in each train were destroyed, one being a valuable cargo of pearl ash, imported from Northwich, England, to be used in making the finer quality of glass. The east bound tender was run clear up atop of its engine, and freight cars were piled still higher. The engines and the other tender remained on the track, in spite of the frightful force of the meeting. It was a terrible sight, and thousands of people, including citizens of Auburn, and for many miles about in the country came to see it. For a half a mile the roadside was lined with teams on each side. One of these got lose and smashed a buggy in a wild runaway.

THE WAY THINGS LOOK

IN THIS GREAT WORLD OF OURS.

Men and Sheep Perish in the Great Colorado Storm—An Inhuman School Teacher—Killed by Giant Powder—Cold Blooded Murder—O'Brien Wants to Settle.

Cold-Blooded Murder.

Cheyenne (Wyoming) special: News has just reached here of a cold-blooded assassination of two men in the Big Horn country. J. S. Bedford and several other men had been arrested, charged with horse stealing, and acquitted. Some shooting took place in the courtroom at the close of the trial. Bedford and a man named Burch were fined for contempt of court. They were ordered confined in jail at Buffalo, and after being disarmed, started to that place in custody of officers. Five miles out of Bonanza a party appeared from ambush and came up with their Winchesters and ordered the officers to ride ahead. They did so, and the following morning returned to find Bedford and Birch riddled with bullets and their horses dead beside them. There is no clue to the identity of the men who committed the murders, and no inquiry is likely to be made.

Excitement Causes a Squirrel Hunter to Shoot Himself.

Ignorance in handling a shotgun resulted in an accident at Middletown, Ohio, which will probably cause the death of Fred Rieff, the 18-year-old son of a saloon keeper. Rieff and several friends were squirrel hunting in Hagman's woods. Rieff had a double-barrel shotgun. He fired at a squirrel and missed. In his excitement he attempted to load the first barrel, forgetting that the second one had not been discharged. While he was ramming the charge in one barrel the other was discharged and the boy's right arm was nearly blown off. The chance for his recovery is slight.

He Had Nerve.

As the Big Four passenger and mail train, from Indianapolis, was pulling out of Clark's Hill, fifteen miles from Lafayette, Ind., an attempt was made to rob the mail train. Mail Agent John Hauley was in the car alone and attempted to prevent the man from entering the car, but the robber shot him through the left arm, inflicting an ugly wound. The Baggagemaster hearing the shot pulled the bell and stopped the train, when the fellow jumped off and made his escape. A posse of men started out in pursuit.

An Inhuman School Teacher.

At Boston, Ind., School Teacher Theodore Longest has been found guilty of hanging 10-year-old Daniel Starr in school by the neck with a whip cord till the boy was black in the face and his tongue lolled out. The little fellow had been obstreperous and was drawn up till he stood on his toes and left thus until a class recited, and not noticed until the children in the school raised the alarm by their cries. Longest will be suspended.

Men and Sheep Perish in the Great Storm.

Denver special: Reports are just coming in of the loss of life during the great storm recently. A track walker was found dead near Limon on the Rock Island. A sheep herder and 300 sheep perished near Colorado Springs, while Charles Beattie, living in a tent near Colorado Springs, died of exposure. There were undoubtedly a number of lives lost in the mountains of which news will not be received for many days.

Boodler Convicted.

In the case of John Daly, the member of the Toledo, Ohio, City Council charged with bribery, the jury was out only about one hour and returned a verdict of guilty. This is the first of the seven cases, and means a conviction in all of them. Daly's attorney immediately filed notice of appeal. The verdict gives universal satisfaction.

The Lightning's Work.

Denison, Texas, was visited by a severe electrical storm. The Missouri, Kansas and Texas round house was badly wrecked by lightning. The dwelling of Mr. Cordes, north of the city, was completely demolished by a bolt. A boat on Red River was struck and sunk. This was the first rain that has fallen there since August.

O'Brien Wants to Settle.

M. J. O'Brien, defaulting ex-Supreme Treasurer Catholic Knights of America, who is at his home in Chattanooga, Tenn., under $30,000 bonds, has written the Chairman of the Supreme Board of Trustees asking to have a conference for the purpose of arranging some settlement of his difficulties.

Killed by Giant Powder.

August Danielson and Alex. Basin, miners employed at No. 2 shaft of the East Norris Mine at Ironwood, Wis., were killed by an explosion of giant powder.

Vice-Consul Coates.

The President has recognized Abraham George Coates, as British Vice-Consul at Philadelphia.

Fraudulent Coffee.

John K. McIntyre, a prominent and wealthy wholesale grocer of Dayton, Ohio., was arrested for selling adulterated coffee. He pleaded guilty, and was fined $50 and costs.

Fatally Hurt.

James A. Hunter, superintendent of the Kelly Nail Mill at Ironton, Ohio, fell while in the mill and sustained a probable fatal fracture of the skull. He can hardly recover.

Gas Explodes in a Mine.

Shamokin, Pa., dispatch: An explosion of gas at the Sterling mine probably killed nine men and injured a number of others. Those dead and supposed to be dead are: Samuel Collins, Isaac Doney, Joe Ketchie, Joseph Milestock, Thomas O'Gara, Benjamin Thomas, Mike Wetcheck. The injured are: Wm. Mack, Horace Price, Samuel Rogers, and Daniel Reed, who will likely die.

Found a Petrified Man.

A petrified man was found about two miles north of Chadron, Neb., by Edward Rossiter, who was offered $2,000 for the specimen, but refused it.

HOSTILE TO THE STRIKERS.

Chief Justice Paxson's Charge to the Jury in the Homestead Case.

The unusual spectacle of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the State sitting as a judge in the court of oyer and terminer of a county in the State was witnessed by a large crowd in the Criminal court-room in Pittsburg, when Chief Justice Paxson charged the grand jury as to what constitutes treason. After detailing the causes leading up to the Homestead strike, Justice Paxson said: "The mutual right of the parties to contract in regard to wages, and the character of the employment, whether by the piece or by the day, or whether for ten hours or less, is fixed as is any other right which we enjoy under the constitution and laws of this State. It is a right which belongs to every citizen, whether laborer or capitalist, and it is the plain duty of the State to protect them in the enjoyment of it." The Judge detailed how the authority of the sheriff had been defied, the arrival of the Pinkertons, the riot following, and finally the mobilization of the State troops, adding: "If we were to concede the doctrine that the employe may dictate to his employer the terms of his employment, and upon the refusal of the latter to accede to them to take possession of his property and drive others away who were willing to work, we would have anarchy. No business could be conducted upon such a basis; that doctrine, when once countenanced, would be extended to every industry." The Justice then defined as treason the organization of a large number of men in a common purpose to defy the law, resist its officers, and to deprive any portion of their fellow-citizens of their rights under the constitution and laws. "It is a state of war," said he, "when a business plant has to be surrounded by the army of the State to protect it from unlawful violence at the hands of former employes."

TO FREE MRS. MAYBRICK.

A Dying Man Confesses He Committed the Crime She Now Suffers For.

In the next issue of the Review of Reviews Mr. Stead, its editor, will have an article headed, "Ought Mrs. Maybrick Be Tortured to Death?" in which he vigorously and at great length reopens the whole case of the unfortunate American woman who is now undergoing a sentence of life-imprisonment in Woking prison for the alleged poisoning of her husband, who was a well-known Liverpool merchant. In the course of his article Mr. Stead says that both he and Sir Charles Russell, the attorney general, have received from South Africa copies of the deathbed confession of Harry Wilson, who declared that he, with a woman whose name is not given, placed arsenic in the medicine that was administered to Mr. Maybrick during his last illness. Mr. Stead investigated into this matter, and declares that he attaches weight to the confession, "but," he adds, "even if it were valueless, it would be of service in directing attention to the travesty of justice which has exposed Great Britain to serious objections from the United States, and which is not unlikely to become a subject of diplomatic remonstrances." Mr. Stead makes a strong appeal for the release of Mrs. Maybrick before Christmas. "Her condition is such," he says, "that she will speedily die if she is not released."

GREAT CELEBRATION IN MADRID.

Splendid Parade in Honor of the Discovery of the New World.

The celebration in Madrid of the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of American by Columbus began at daybreak Wednesday. The bells of all the churches in the city began to peal and military bands parade the streets playing a reveille. Early in the morning the streets began to fill and in a short time were crowded. Early masses were said in all the churches in honor of Columbus and the services were attended by immense throngs of people. Later in the day a great procession was formed of the professors and students of the Spanish universities. They were all attired in gay costumes of the medieval period and in the ranks were borne ancient standards, some of which were carried in the wars before Columbus was born. The procession was formed in the vicinity of the Plaza de Independencia, and, headed by representatives of the University of Salamanca, marched through all the principal streets of the city.

FEDERAL SUPREME COURT.

Justice Shiras Sworn In and Several Attorneys Admitted to Practice.

The Supreme Court of the United States convened in Washington for the fall term with the usual simple, impressive ceremonies. There were the usual number of lawyers within the bar and of spectators without. The only new feature in the event was the taking of the oath by the new Justice, George Shiras, Jr., of Pennsylvania. Justices Field, Gray, Lamar and Brown sat on the right of Chief Justice Fuller and Justices Harlan, Blatchford, Brewer and Shiras on the left. The oath was administered to the applicants for permission to practice before the court.

FIENDISH DEED OF A MADMAN.

He Kills His Wife and Attempts the Life of His Daughter.

In the town of Tilden, near Chippewa Falls, Wis., Tuesday morning, Daniel O'Brien shot and killed his wife while she was sitting in a chair. He then tried to set fire to the house and cremate the body, but his daughter's arrival prevented this. O'Brien started after her, but she escaped, giving the alarm to the neighbors. O'Brien escaped to the woods, taking with him his gun. He is about 60 years old, and is demented. He was not considered dangerous. Sheriff Stumm and a posse are in search.

Stricken from the Roll.

The Minister of Militia has struck off the roll of militia officers of Canada the name of Lieutenant E. A. Macdonald, of Toronto, who has recently been lecturing in Boston in favor of the annexation of Canada to the United States. Mr. Bowell says he does not wish to interfere with the freedom of speech, but he thinks Macdonald's views incompatible with holding a commission in her Majesty's forces.

Attempted Suicide with Morphine.

At Lima, Ohio, Horace A. Hanna, of Fort Wayne, Ind., a grandson of Judge Samuel Hanna, for several years vice president of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railway, swallowed thirty quarter-grain morphine pills with suicidal intent. After working over him for two hours two physicians succeeded in restoring him to consciousness, and it is believed he will recover.

Want Judge Scott Removed.

A committee of Burt County, Neb., lawyers ask the removal of Judge Scott from the bench of the judicial district on the ground of insanity. The trouble between him and the members of the bar at Tekamah, the county seat, culminated when the Judge fined a lawyer for contempt. A complaint of insanity was filed, and warrants issued for Scott's apprehension.

Editor Seward Shot.

At Stillwater, Minn., Victor C. Seward, the veteran Minnesota journalist and editor of the Stillwater Messenger, was shot, probably with fatal results, by a young man named George Peters, an ex-reporter with whom he had trouble.

To Cross Niagara Gorge on a Cable.

Gifford Calverly, of Toronto, aged 22 years, will walk a three-quarter-inch steel cable across Niagara gorge against time.

They Expected the Daltons.

Reports had been current since the slaughter of the robbers that friends of the Daltons were organizing in the Indian Territory to make a raid on Coffeyville, avenge the killing of the outlaws and carry off Emmet Dalton, the surviving member of the gang, who is recovering despite four wounds from Winchester rifles. Telegrams were sent to Mayor Gregory at Parsons, Kan., stating that the bandits were advancing on Coffeyville, and calling for aid. A special train carrying fifty men armed to the teeth was about to start when a message was received that assistance was not necessary. The train was abandoned, and it is now regarded as improbable that any assault will be made to wreak revenge or to secure the wounded robber.

CORN AND POTATO CROPS.

The Farmers' Review Reports Their Condition Generally Poor.

The corn crop is in poor shape quite generally throughout the eleven States covered by our report, says the Farmers' Review for this week. In Illinois more than one-half of the correspondents report that the crop will, in their counties, fall below three-fourths of an average; the rest report from three-fourths to an average. In Indiana and Michigan the condition is about the same. In Ohio half of the correspondents say that the crop will be a full average, while most of the others report two-thirds or three-fourths crop. In Kentucky half report a full average, while most of the others report above three-fourths. In Missouri, Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota the outlook is good for nearly a full crop. In Kansas the condition is decidedly poor, and will fall a good deal below a three-fourths crop. The general condition in Nebraska is fair, and in Dakota the crop will be nearly an average one. The potato crops, early and late, taken together, are very poor. In not one county in five of the States mentioned will there be an average crop. In Illinois 90 per cent of the correspondents report that the crop is very poor, in many cases almost a complete failure. A nearly similar state of affairs exists in Indiana, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, and Wisconsin. In Ohio and Michigan the crops are slightly better, about two-thirds of the counties reporting from a three-fourths to a full crop. Kentucky reports a full average crop in about half of the counties. In Minnesota about one-third of the counties will yield an average crop, but in most of the others it is decidedly poor. More than half of the correspondents in Dakota report a full crop.

NIGHT EXPRESS HELD UP.

Two Masked Robbers Loot the Express Car Near Caney, Kan.

The night express on the Denver branch of the Missouri Pacific Railway was held up and the express car robbed between Caney and Tyro, Kan., at midnight by two masked men. When the train stopped at Caney at 11 o'clock one of the robbers secreted himself on the forward platform of the combination express and baggage car. Shortly after leaving Caney the robber climbed over the tender, and, presenting a heavy revolver, ordered the engineer to stop the train. The engineer brought the train to a standstill, and the robber cut the combination car from the train and compelled the engineer to draw the car to a deep cut about half a mile farther east. Here the other robber made his appearance and both began firing their revolvers. The express messenger was ordered to open the door of the car and after several shots were fired through the panels he complied. One of the robbers entered the car while the other remained on guard outside. The messenger opened the safe, and the robber, hastily grabbing the packages and envelopes which it contained, placed them in a small sack and jumped from the car. They then ordered the engineer to back the car to where the train was left standing, and after firing a few more shots as a warning, disappeared in the darkness. Both robbers wore heavy black masks and their clothing was spattered with mud, indicating that they were mounted and had ridden hard.

QUADRUPLE LYNCHING.

Negro Fiends Are Hanged and Burned —One Roasted Alive.

Alabama reports the quadruple lynching, shooting and burning of four negroes who had confessed to the crime of murdering Richard L. Johnston and his daughter, Miss Jeannette, after having assaulted the latter at their country home, near Davis Ferry, in Monroe County, on the Alabama River. A gentleman from Monroeville, the county seat, says that ever since the commission of the crime the people, both white and black, in that section, have not left a stone unturned to ferret out the perpetrators of the murders. Ten negroes were arrested and closely examined. The rage of the people was so intense that those of the men who were innocent, fearing lest their lives should be lost, began to talk. This resulted in a confession of four, Mose Johnson, Jim and John Packer, and Burrell Johnston. They were all boys between 18 and 23 and lived near the home of their victims.

Has Been Decided.

The New York legislative apportionment law has been declared constitutional by the Court of Appeals. The Court is unanimous upon all the questions except those discussed in Judge Andrews' opinion. Judge Andrews writes a dissenting opinion, holding the apportionment law to be unconstitutional, in which Judge Finch concurs.

Financial Trouble Causes Suicide.

Louis Marx, of the firm of Marx Brothers, of McKeesport, Pa., shot and killed himself. Financial troubles form the supposed cause. He was 34 years old. His firm had one of the leading clothing houses in McKeesport, but failed a few days ago. Marx Brothers also have a large store in Huntington, Ind.

GAY TIMES IN GOTHAM.

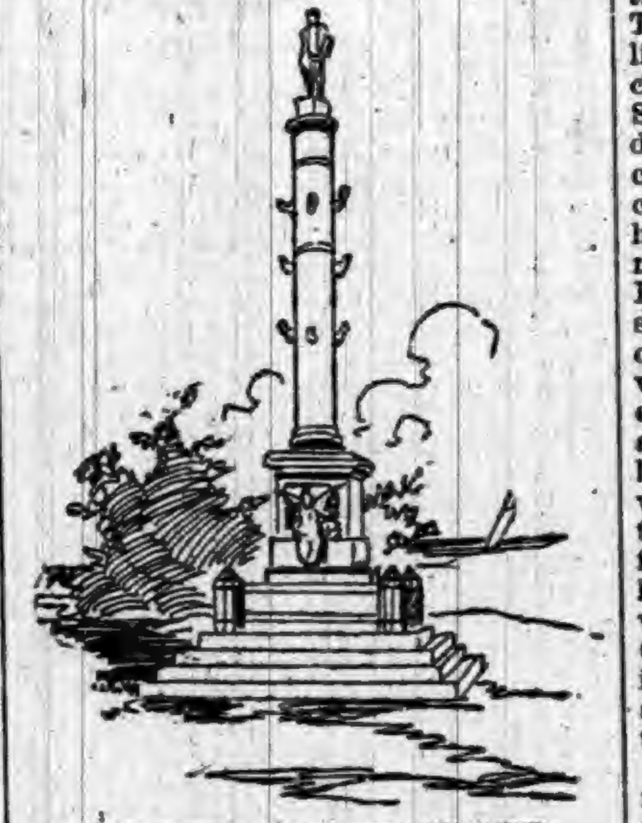
GRANDEST CELEBRATION EVER SEEN IN THIS COUNTRY.

Thousands of Enthusiastic Visitors Block the Streets of the Eastern Metropolis—Imposing Parade of School Children—Great Spectacular Pageant—Gorgeous Fireworks, Etc.

In Columbus' Honor.

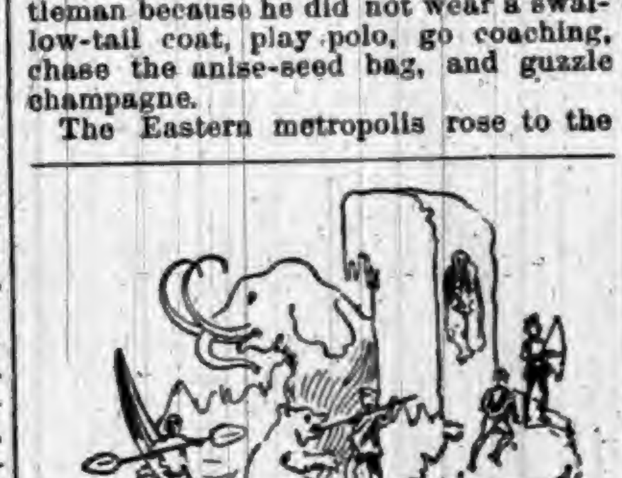
The city of New York did the handsome thing by the memory of Columbus, and did it right well. The Jews inaugurated the celebration on Saturday, their Sabbath, with song and sermon in their synagogues, of both which the subject-matter was Columbus and the discovery of America. On Sunday Protestants and Catholics followed it up in their churches and cathedrals with religious services, interspersed with the singing and playing of National hymns—and where can the "Star Spangled Banner" be heard more appropriately than in the church.

Monday was the schools' day, and school children of the public, private, and parochial schools marched by thousands through the gayly decorated streets. In the evening Mr. S. G. Pratt's innocent cantata, "The Triumph of Columbus," was sung at one hall. There were concerts in other halls, a loan exhibition, and a display of fireworks at the East River bridge. Tuesday the great naval parade took place, in which American, French, Spanish, and Italian war vessels, the naval militia of the State of New York, municipal boats, yachts, steamboats, ferryboats, tugs, and revenue cutters all took part, proceeding from the lower bay up through the narrows amid the salutes of the forts, and thence up the North River to a point opposite Gen. Grant's tomb. In the evening there was a parade of the Roman Catholic societies, the German singing societies gave a concert, the Catholic societies had memorial celebration, and there were displays of fireworks on the Brooklyn bridge and in the parks. Wednesday was the culmination of the pageant. In the morning there was a military parade with 20,000 men in line, including troops of the regular army, the naval brigade, State guards, the Grand Army of the Republic, volunteer firemen, German-American societies, and Italian military organizations. In the afternoon the Columbus monument, of which an illustration is given, was dedicated and in the evening there was an historical parade, during which the city was splendidly illuminated. Thursday the ceremonies closed with a banquet at the Lenox Lyceum, at which the orators did their part towards the apotheosis of Christopher Columbus, notwithstanding the declaration of Mr. Ward McAllister, arbiter of New York "sassiety," that Christopher was not a gentleman because he did not wear a swallow-tail coat, play polo, go coaching, chase the anise-seed bag, and guzzle champagne.



NEW YORK'S COLUMBUS MONUMENT.

The Eastern metropolis rose to the occasion. The arrangements seem to have been perfect. The decorations of the city were magnificent and the crowds in attendance immense. It is estimated by the press that not less than 500,000 strangers were in the city during the three days of actual celebration. This is a hint to Chicago of the number it may be called to provide for at the actual opening of the Columbian Exposition.



THE PREHISTORIC CAR.

Parade of School Children.

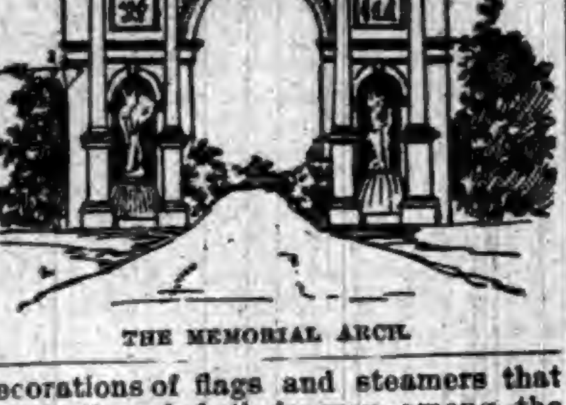
The great parade of school children in which, according to telegraphic reports, nearly 20,000 participated, served to demonstrate the patriotism of the rising generation. As an object lesson showing the tremendous interest centered in the schools it was a phenomenal success. From the wee tot in his first knickerbockers who came first to the college student in mortar board and gown who closed the spectacle, it was a series of climaxes driving home the value of the schools to the city, the State, and the nation. The Catholic pupils alone, with their significant banner, "The Defender of the Faith and the Constitution;" the Indian students from Carlisle, Pa., magnificently disciplined and drilled; colored pupils touching elbows with white boys; Italians, Japanese, Chinese, Irish—all marched shoulder to shoulder in the enormous educational columns, and all marched under the stars and stripes.

In the minds of the beholders the impressiveness of the occasion centered upon the union of these diverse forces in the one patriotic purpose—honor to Columbus and the Goverment his discovery made possible. The column took more than three hours to pass a given point.

While the line of march of the parade was banked on either side by crowded masses from the starting point to the disbanding point, the greatest numbers congregated in Madison square, Union square and Washington square. The west side of Fifth avenue at Madison square was occupied by an immense stand with 3,200 seats. Of these 200 seats were reserved for reporters and each seat was furnished with a writing desk. Opposite was a stand that seated 6,000 persons. Among those seated there were Vice President Morton, Secretary of the Treasury Foster, Gov. R. P. Flower and his staff, Gov. Tillman, of South Carolina, United Marshal Jacobus and many local officials.

The Naval Display.

New York has had three big naval parades in recent years, but neither one of these as a maritime demonstration could compare in splendor and magnificence with the great pageant which took place in the harbor in connection with the Columbian exercises. From dawn the waters of the harbor, the bay and the broad channel of the Hudson were literally alive with craft of all sorts and sizes, from the small yachts trimmed and draped with gay flags and bunting, forming ever-changing pictures as they darted to and fro in confusing maze, to the big steamers with their gorgeous decorations of flags and steamers that slowly threaded their way among the swarms of little boats that surrounded them on all sides.

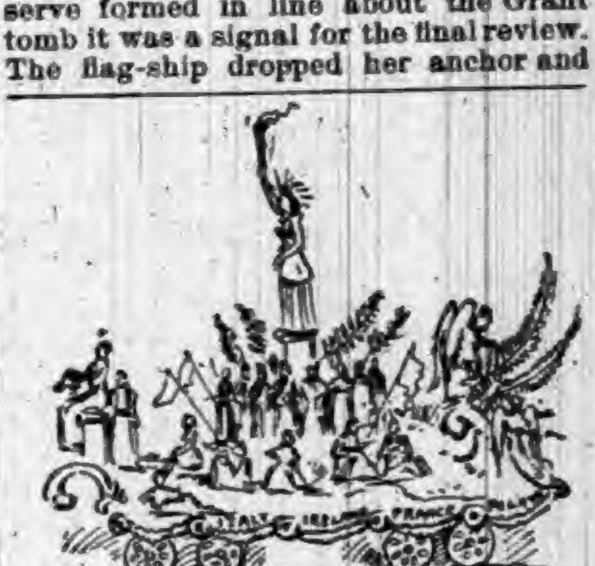


THE MEMORIAL ARCH.

Commodore Erben gave the signal to start. A stir of preparation followed in the squadron, a puff of smoke came from Fort Hamilton, then a crash and the firing began. Boom! Boom! Boom! The peaceful bombardment sounded like a naval combat, with all creation as contestants. The Italian, French and Spanish vessels joined in the fun. The dynamite cruiser Vesuvius added its crashing detonation; even the revenue cutters with their toy cannons took a hand. Steaming steadily up-stream the myriad fleet came in view of the Battery. If the people ashore were surprised at the size of the naval demonstration, the voyagers of the fleet were astounded at the multitudes gathered along the water's edge. The park at the Battery, Brooklyn bridge, the housetops, business blocks, even the very steeples, were black with spectators. Moving up the stream the same feature presented itself. Every pier had its swarm of sight-seers; every warehouse roof was a vantage point. Cross-trees of vessels at their moorings, telegraph poles, ferryboats, drays, abandoned hulks, all were pressed into the public service.

Incredible as it may seem in the statement, not less than a million people must have seen the parade from both shores between its start at the forts and the grand review at Riverside. Old New-Yorkers declared that no such popular interest in any demonstration has ever been seen in the history of the city.

When the squadron of the naval reserve formed in line about the Grant tomb it was a signal for the final review. The flag-ship dropped her anchor and swung round in the tide. Her followers did likewise, and the merchant fleet steamed past in review up the river, saluting with dipped flags. Forming in parallel lines the parade then dropped down the stream, the battleships pealed forth a farewell salute, while a regiment of regulars ashore answered with a land battery and the national hymn was played by a regiment band. The last shot marked the close of the parade. The greatest naval spectacle of the great city had ended and the journey home began. Tugs whistled, steamers joined in, railroad whistles answered from the shore and the orderly lines broke up, making for the piers down the river.

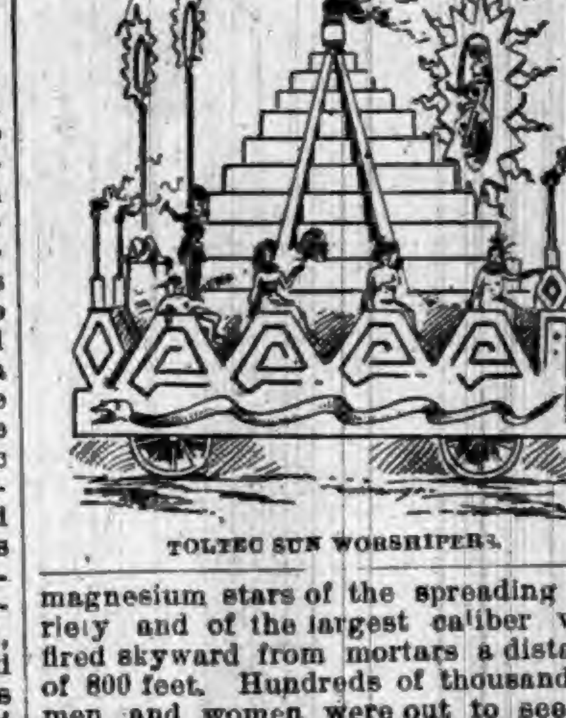


CAR OF LIBERTY.

Vice President Morton, Chauncy M. Depew, ex-President Hayes, Governor Flower, Mayor Grant, and other notables, were on the Howard Carroll, which led the way. Ex-President Cleveland and his wife were the guests of E. C. Benedict on his private yacht, the Corsair.

Fine Display of Fireworks.

The fireworks display on the Brooklyn Bridge began at 10:30 and lasted until midnight. The display was gorgeous. There were illuminations from the towers in the shape of Chinese suns six feet in circumference, and of an illuminating power which enabled them to be seen at a distance of twenty-five miles. There were groups of bouquets and thousands of rockets fired simultaneously from the towers, crossing and intersecting in their flight. Millions of magnesium stars of the spreading variety and of the largest caliber were fired skyward from mortars a distance of 800 feet. Hundreds of thousands of men and women were out to see the wonders.



TOLTEC SUN WORSHIPERS.

The celebration culminated in the night pageant, which was the spectacular event of the week. Eighteen thousand people, costumed to represent the various types to be illustrated, were in line. The floats shown in this parade were the finest ever seen, and altogether the affair was the greatest of the kind ever attempted in this country.

The News Aftermath.

Omaha, Neb., is suffering from a flood of bogus dollars.

John Tolliver was killed by a shock from a "live" wire at Indianapolis.

Bothwell Bros.' shingle mill, at Seattle, Wash., burned. Loss, $30,000.

Myriads of grasshoppers have appeared in Kansas and are destroying the winter wheat.

Charles G. Seymour, 80 years of age, one of the oldest and most respected citizens of Aurora, Ill., died from injuries sustained in an accidental fall a year or more ago.

Dr. and Mrs. Dudley, the venerable parents of Col. W. W. Dudley, narrowly escaped suffocation in the Strathmore Arms, a Washington boarding place. The fire did little damage.

Scarlet fever is raging in some parts of Morgan County to an alarming degree, as is also diphtheria. The public schools of Brooklyn have closed on this account, and several of the district schools are being greatly interferred with. Several deaths have occurred at Morgan town from diphtheria.

At Vincennes, in a fire which destroyed the home of Mrs. Mary Holscher, an aged German, she was badly burned about the head and face while endeavoring to save valuable papers. The fire finally compelled her to abandon the attempt, and the papers were recovered by the firemen. The woman died.

The thirty-eighth annual State Convention of Good Templars held its opening session in Logansport last week. The proceedings were secret, the only public matters being the report of the Secretary, showing 106 active lodges, with a membership of 5,015, a gain of 27 lodges and 2,090 members in the past year. The report also showed 36 juvenile temples, with a membership of 1,006.

Charles Murray, Thomas Sheehan, Arthur Bishop, Frank Arnold, Charles Willard, William Bennett and Frank Smith, seven conscienceless tramps arrested at Evansville last spring after a desperate fight with the police, have each been sentenced to the Penitentiary for two years, for criminally assaulting Mrs. Annie Rigsby. Their trial was in progress, but they suddenly terminated it by pleading guilty and throwing themselves upon the mercy of the Court.

B. L. Ornbaum, a wealthy resident of Crawfordsville, was driving into an elevator, and as the team entered the building his head struck the sharp corner of the beam above, taking the sclap entirely off. The flap was sewed on and he may recover.

Numerous cases of sickness among the farmers in Jefferson County, who have been using bone-dust fertilizers are reported. Severe colds, sore throats and fevers have been caused by the use of certain brands of bone-dust. The death of a young man not long since, was thought to have been caused by the handling of bone fertilizer.

Search is being made on the Broderich farm, near Waynetown, Montgomery County, for a box of buried treasure, the plunder of an ancient gang of robbers who one time infested that section.

In the eastern part of Bartholomew County, on the farm of Newton Hanks, where a short time ago a heavy forest grew, a new gravel pit was opened. A square space was struck, which was not over four feet on each side and about eleven feet deep, and from this eight human skeletons closely wedged together were taken. The skeletons were in an erect position, but no evidence of any coffin or inclosure could be found. The skull bones do not indicate that they are those of Indians.

THE TOSS OF A COPPER.

Story of My Experience with Two Lovers.

BY ALEXANDRE DUMAS, JR.

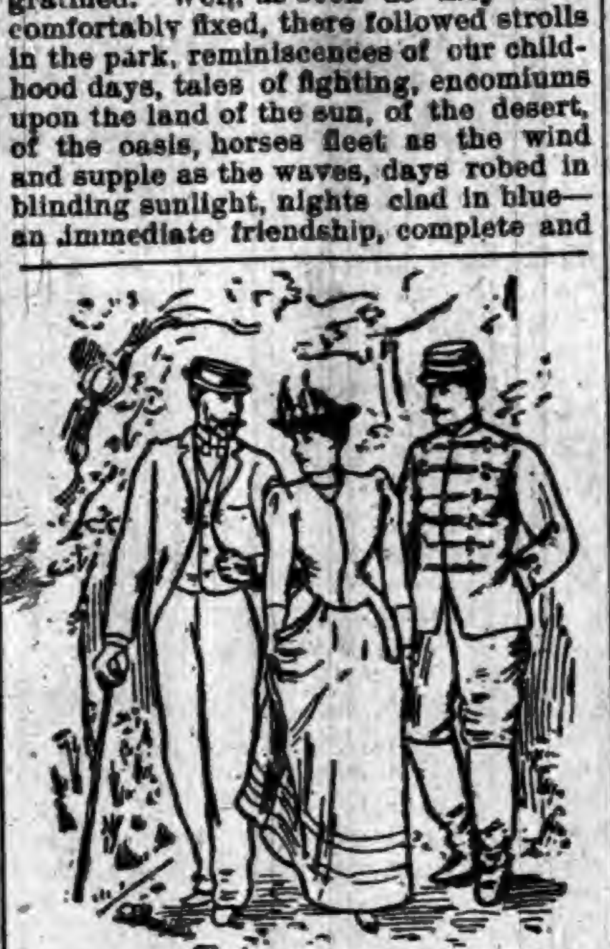
There was a tinge of respect in that "my" of his by which I was strangely gratified. Well, as soon as they were comfortably fixed, there followed strolls in the park, reminiscences of our childhood days, tales of fighting, encomiums upon the land of the sun, of the desert, of the oasis, horses fleet as the wind and supple as the waves, days robed in blinding sunlight, nights clad in blue—an immediate friendship, complete and trustful. Not a shadow of any mental trickery, neither on his part nor on mine. We were cousins, we were brother and sister. Of his father, left behind and watching over his extensive vineyards, Rene spoke with the tenderness of a child, and little by little I came upon the gentleness and sweetness of a young girl hidden away in the character of this Bedouin. Shall I tell you exactly what I discovered? It is this: In all the glimpse of his life, which up to the present has been that of a true soldier devoted to his profession, I don't see any place for a woman. He has never been in love, that's certain. I see it, I feel it. For ten years—he's thirty now—it's been his custom to keep a journal. I asked him to let me see it. He promised to do so without the slightest hesitation. Think of it, dear Blanche, a man of thirty, an officer being able to hand the daily record of his life to a young girl to read! He only had his diary of the current year with him.



THERE FOLLOWED STROLLS IN THE PARK.

"It's fortunate," said he, "for you'd be bored to death if you attempted to read many of these books. Filled as they are with a constant recurrence of the same subject, you'd find them insufferably monotonous."

I was anxious to look the book through at once. Would there be a mention of me? Why this curiosity on my part? He sets down everything, so there must be something about his coming to see us. How would he express himself?

Under date of June 13 I found this: "Yesterday mother received a letter from Madame de Marias. Her daughter must be a very pretty girl if she has fulfilled the promise she gave ten years ago."

Farther along, under the date of his arrival, June 27, I found this:

"Adrienne is a very pretty girl, and very intellectual, too, and very kind."

That's all I found, Blanche. I wish there had been more. I had told Casimir of my cousin's expected arrival. I had talked about him as if he were a big boy, not very bright, in fact, a mere nobody. You would have laughed if you could have seen his look of astonishment, of disappointment, when the two men came face to face. I hadn't told him of the transformation which had surprised me. Why didn't I tell him? I can't say; possibly I didn't want him to know that I had seen any change. I didn't want to seem to have taken any particular notice of Rene.

"The profession of arms has benefited your cousin very much," remarked Casimir. "He has become a very handsome fellow, and bears very little resemblance to your description."

"He has been very ill," I stammered.

"That makes him the more interesting," he made answer slowly, and as he uttered these words Casimir looked steadily into my eyes. His filled with sadness. I had almost said tears. I yearned to throw my arms around his neck, so thankful was I to him for this involuntary display of jealousy. I wanted to say to him:

"Are you out of your wits? Can you suppose that Rene seemed to me any more than a playmate of my childhood, a relative seen after long absence?"

But I held my peace. Something told me that that was the best. I even appeared a little nettled by his remark, but in manner only. After all, I was not engaged to Casimir; he had no right to make such a remark. The more so or the less so, as Rene himself, after the presentation, had shown the keenest discernment and the greatest delicacy.

"Cousin," he had said to me, "there's no need of seeing you and M. de Villelong together for any length of time without being able to predict a marriage. I must say he impresses me as a most thorough gentleman."

"You are in error!"

"He is not a thorough gentleman?"

"Oh, yes; but there is no question of any marriage."

Why did I tell this falsehood? What impulse led me to utter it? I was under no obligation to make Rene my confidant, but I felt that the moment he guessed the truth I would be in honor bound not to deny it to Casimir. I was ashamed of myself. I turned abruptly away from Rene. I hurried to my room. I burst into tears. I can write no more now. God help me! Would that you were here, Blanche!

LETTER NO. 4.

SAME TO SAME.

When I left my room the next morning, dear Blanche, I had made up my mind to one thing—it was to say to mamma that she might authorize Casimir to ask for my hand. It was the only thing I could do to make atonement to my own conscience for the cowardly act—yes, there's no other word for it—which I had committed. It was necessary for me to punish myself at once. Why punish myself? Would my becoming Casimir's wife be a punishment? What juggling with words was this? I was deeply agitated, dissatisfied with Casimir, with Rene, with myself above all, for the two others were quite innocent. Casimir loved me and was jealous. He was afraid he was going to lose me. He let me see it; it was very natural he should. Rene had guessed our love, divined our intentions. He had told me so frankly. He praised the man that I was in love with. Why shouldn't he, since he wasn't in love with me himself? Why should he love me? He had other things to do. He was to return to Africa to fight, to stop some bit of murderous lead, while Casimir and I were amusing ourselves at the opera.

I must confess some men really do deserve credit. Look at this young man of thirty, a handsome, intelligent fellow, fighting out there in No Man's Land, just escaping death in a hospital ward, and perfectly satisfied to come and spend his sick leave with his mother like a simple college boy at our country home! No woman is in his life. No, not one! He receives no letters, he writes none. He will soon join his regiment to begin anew a life of fatigue, obedience, toil, devotion, renunciation, to end in getting shot in some out-of-the-way corner, and dying like an animal, without careful attention, without tender nursing. Isn't it admirable?

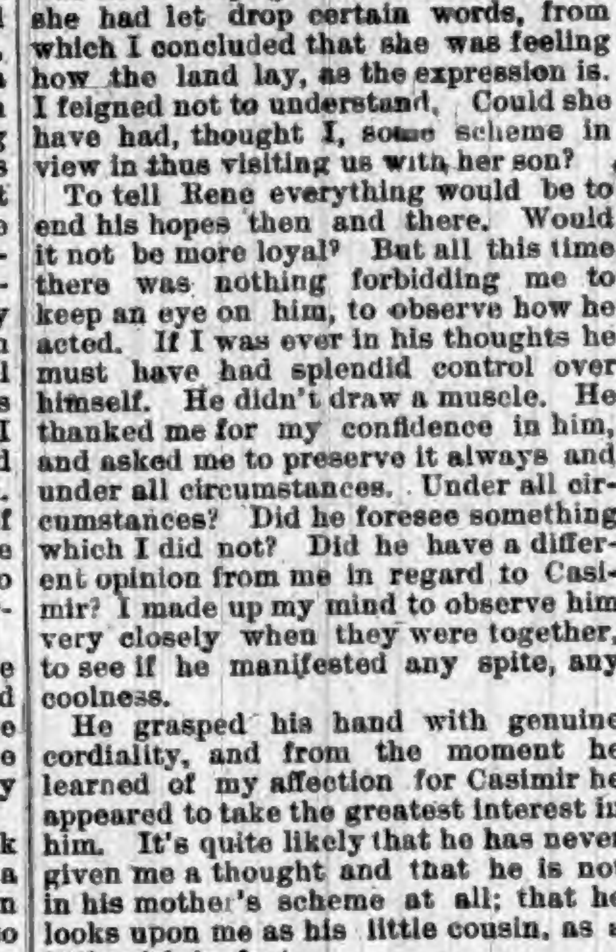
I could not bring myself to ask mamma to authorize Casimir to propose. But I did the next best thing. As he only came out to the country twice a week, I found out a way to have him there all the time. I told Rene freely and frankly everything in regard to my intention of marrying Casimir, and by so doing I made it possible for me to talk about him at any and all times, just as if he were present. I knew I could trust Rene, that he wouldn't mention it either to mamma or to his mother. Wasn't I right in doing so? Suppose my marriage shouldn't take place—an absurd supposition, but everything is possible—Rene's lips would be sealed forever.

In thus making a confidant of my cousin I would have the satisfaction of seeing how he took it—what effect it had upon him—for while out walking the day before with his mother, who was absolutely ignorant of my intent, she had let drop certain words, from which I concluded that she was feeling how the land lay, as the expression is. I feigned not to understand. Could she have had, thought I, some scheme in view in thus visiting us with her son?

To tell Rene everything would be to end his hopes then and there. Would it not be more loyal? But all this time there was nothing forbidding me to keep an eye on him, to observe how he acted. If I was ever in his thoughts he must have had splendid control over himself. He didn't draw a muscle. He thanked me for my confidence in him, and asked me to preserve it always and under all circumstances. Under all circumstances? Did he foresee something which I did not? Did he have a different opinion from me in regard to Casimir? I made up my mind to observe him very closely when they were together, to see if he manifested any spite, any coolness.

He grasped his hand with genuine cordiality, and from the moment he learned of my affection for Casimir he appeared to take the greatest interest in him. It's quite likely that he has never given me a thought and that he is not in his mother's scheme at all; that he looks upon me as his little cousin, as a little girl, in fact.

Meanwhile I'm delighted with the effect of my frankness. Casimir has completely gotten over his alarm and is perfectly at ease with Rene. They've become the best of friends, and take real pleasure in being together. And so we three pass our time walking, talking and riding. Rene is a fine artist, and Casimir is a good musician. Now that Rene is with us there was no reason why Casimir should keep up his fixed and official visits, and so mamma invited him to come and spend a fortnight with us. "And, in the meantime," said she, "I shall, as occasion offers, let our friends know the truth of the matter."



TAKE REAL PLEASURE IN BEING TOGETHER.

But, dear Blanche, I have asked for a delay. My soul is so deeply and mysteriously enraptured as I am, that is, when I don't get terror-stricken at my position. I protest to you that Rene has not made Casimir lose in my eyes, but still Casimir's rights have not blinded me as to Rene's qualities. When one of them is away I lack something. How shall I express myself? They are complementary to one another. One is light, the other is dark; one is a Parisian full of wit, the other is an Oriental full of melancholy; both are handsome, brave, intelligent, refined. Need I assure you, Blanche, that if I had been Casimir's wife before Rene arrived I should not have glanced at my cousin, for I'm quite sure of my own honesty; or had I been Rene's wife I shouldn't have noted Casimir. To sum up, dearest, incredible as it may seem, I'm as happy with one as with the other, but when they are both with me my happiness is much greater. Yes, it is perfect.

When I am alone at night I interrogate myself. I prove myself; I attempt to compare these two beings. I see them in no uncertain light, but just as they are, completely different, but equally full of tenderness and sympathy. I resolved last night to fall asleep while all my thoughts were with Casimir, and I succeeded, but I dreamt of Rene all night long. In a word, dear Blanche, give ear but keep my secret: I love two men, and say it I must, I love one as well as the other. It's monstrous! At times I wish that some deadly ailment might come upon me to get me out of this tangle. Have pity on me, dearest, and tell me what to do. You know.

LETTER NO. 5.

BLANCHE TO ADRIENNE. (Return mail.)

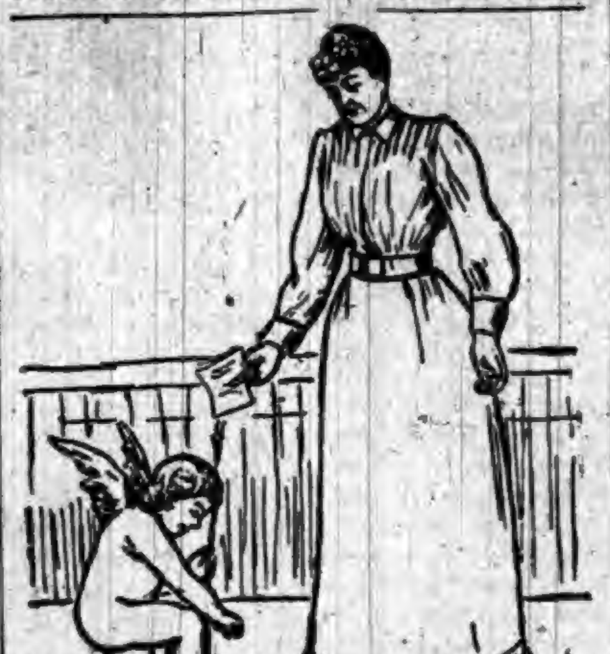
Since you love one as well as you do the other, toss up a copper! Marry the one chance selects for you. You will probably regret the other up to the morning of your marriage. You won't think of him after that. Kisses and consolation from your old school friend,

BLANCHE.

LETTER NO. 6.

ADRIENNE TO BLANCHE.

Now I know what I've always suspected, that you never loved M. de Gressan. I'm as sure of it now as if your heart were open before me and I could look into its very depths. It all dawns upon me now—the expression of your cold, steel-gray eyes when he showered pet names upon you or covered your hands with kisses, that terrible look of indifference when he encircled you with his arm, that calmness at his coming and his going, that marble composure the day the news came that he had been challenged and must fight. All, all, it all breaks upon me with the hard, harsh glare of reality after some delicious dream is ended. No, you never loved M. de Gressan, you have never loved any man, or you would not have written me such words. No one can jest at love who has ever felt its terrible dignity, its awful seriousness, its dread solemnity. I can well imagine a person smiling at the news of the loss of a fortune, I can even conceive of a dying person being so frivolous as to push the holy sacrament aside with ribald epithet, but I cannot imagine a woman who has ever truly loved a man as jesting over the pang of a sister. No, Blanche, like the eyeless fish of the black waters of some subterranean lake, the glory of the sunshine is lost upon you! I love you still, dear Blanche. I always shall love you, but you're not the woman I stand in need of just at present. Many thanks for the suggestion, but I never carry copper coin in my portemonnaie.



MARRY THE ONE CHANCE SELECTS.

LETTER NO. 7.

SAME TO SAME.

Well, dear Blanche, it's all settled, and settled, I believe, by a gracious and all-wise Providence, which takes far more interest in the affairs of this world than such scoffers as you are would fain admit. Now that it is all history, I'll play the historian and give you a plain recital without word or comment. You no doubt remember my telling you of the genuine friendship which sprang up between Casimir and Rene. The more they saw of each other the more they liked each other, and would you believe it, I was often obliged to send a servant the second time to call them when I was waiting for their escort, so fond did they become of each other's society. One morning, to my great surprise, Casimir didn't make his appearance, although the post brought both of us letters. When I say both of us I mean that there was a letter for Rene, too, as he and Casimir were to go hunting that afternoon.

The day was chilly, and there was a fire burning on the hearth. Rene was standing leaning on the mantel when the servant handed him Casimir's letter. I took no note of him I was so eagerly deciphering my letter from Casimir, who, by the way, writes awful scrawls. The letter was very tender. A sudden business engagement had interfered to prevent his coming. It was full of those sweet nothings which a woman so loves to get from the man who is dear to her. I wanted to press it to my lips, but I was ashamed—no, unwilling to hurt Rene's feelings so needlessly. But suddenly, as I glanced at him, I was startled by the change that had taken place in his face. It was as if his old ailment had come back upon him, and I thought it had. He was deathly pale, and his hands trembled as he tore up Casimir's letter and threw it into the fire.

"Rene!" I exclaimed, springing toward him, "you're ill. Let me call one of the servants."

"No, no, cousin," he stammered; "it's absolutely nothing. I'll be better in a moment. Come to think, I'll go and take some of my medicine and join you later."

The moment the door closed behind him a strange chill came over me. I stepped toward the fire. There lay Casimir's note, only half burned. An irresistible impulse prompted me to stoop and pick it up. What remained uncharred read as follows:

"Old Chappie: You and—cruel indeed—intended to—sweetheart, but can't refuse you—keep seat—beside the divine Goija."

As I read the words the cold perspiration started out on my brow, my limbs bent under me; I came near falling.

"Great heavens," I whispered, "can it be possible that Casimir is decoying Rene to Paris? Oh, no, that would be too terrible; it must be that in his haste he has put the wrong letter in the envelope addressed to Rene."

Rene now made his appearance quite himself again. I thrust the remnants of the letter into my pocket and we went out for a ride. Once in the open air his gayety and good humor came back to him. Once or twice I turned the conversation to Casimir's failure to keep his engagement.

"Oh, cousin," said he, "it's of no importance; we shall have him to-morrow."

After dinner we all strolled out on the terrace, but after half an hour or so mamma and aunt complained of the dew and went in. Rene and I were left alone. The night was wonderously beautiful. We talked of many things. In stooping to pick up my fan his face came so close to mine that I felt the warmth of his breath on my cheek. Our hands touched. It seemed as if the world was slipping away beneath me; that terrible letter burned upon my inward sight in letters of fire. I clung to Rene's hand as if I were drowning and it were held out to me.

"Rene," I whispered, "Rene, you rejoin your regiment next week; we may never see each other again. Have you nothing to say to me?"

"Yes, yes, cousin," he replied, speaking with great difficulty. "Casimir will make you very happy. God bless you both!" And springing up, he seized me by the hand and dragged me toward the house.

The next morning mamma came to my room before I was dressed. She was greatly agitated.

"My darling," she fairly gasped, "I have sent a messenger to M. de Villelong requesting him to discontinue his visits."

"Discontinue his visits?" I exclaimed in mock surprise.

"Yes, my child," she continued, "I have positive evidence that he attended a dinner given at the Cafe Anglais last night to that infamous Gioja."

LETTER NO. 8.

CASIMIR TO RENE. (Three months later.)

DEAR RENE: It was the best thing for me to do. I felt that Adrienne loved you better than me, and I knew that you were more worthy of her. God bless you, dear boy. I shall get well of the hurt when I hear how happy you both are.

Swearing him in.

CHICAGO is troubled with the question what to do with its bad boys—hoodlums that are growing up to be vagabonds and thieves. It is proposed to establish training schools to be opened by the State, where youthful offenders against the law can be taught useful trades. Better still will it be to make provision for the commitment of the dependent children to such institutions before they become criminals, and to close the saloons, where many of the parents of children are made incapable of caring for them.

GANTER'S MAGIC —CHICKEN— CHOLERA CURE!

Thousands of dollars worth of chickens are destroyed by Cholera every year. It is more fatal to them than all other diseases combined. But the discovery of a liquid remedy that positively destroys the Microbes has been made. Half of the young chickens are killed by Microbes before they are fryers. A 50-cent bottle is enough for 100 chickens. It is guaranteed. If, after using two thirds of a bottle, you are not satisfied with it as a cure for Cholera, return it to the druggist from whom you purchased it, and he will refund your money.

MARYLAND ROASTER AND BAKER

IMPROVED
ROASTER & BAKER
FOR MEATS, FOWL, FISH, ETC., AND FOR BAKING BREAD, CAKES AND PUDDINGS.
BEST SIMPLEST AND CHEAPEST

THE STEAM produced by the process of cooking cannot escape, is absorbed by the article in the roaster, and acts as a basting. There is no evaporation, no drying up or burning, hence no shrinkage or loss of weight, and all the flavor and nutritious qualities of the food are retained. Tough meats are made tender, and any article roasted or baked will be sweeter, healthier and more digestible. Put the food in the roaster, place the roaster in a well heated oven; the roaster will do the cooking. It requires no attention. Can only be bought from dealers, the trade supplied by:

It Should be in Every House.

J. B. Wilson, 371 Clay St., Sharpsburg, Pa., says he will not be without Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, that it cured his wife who was threatened with pneumonia after an attack of "LaGrippe," when various other remedies and several physicians had done her no good. Robert Barber, of Cooksport, Pa., claims Dr. King's New Discovery has done him more good than anything he ever used for lung trouble. Nothing like it. A Druggist Talks.

Will F. Crawford, druggist at Des Moines, Iowa, says it is remarkable the way Cubeb Cough Cure sells, that his customers speak of the highest terms of praise. One man in particular who has been troubled with Bronchitis for years, never found any relief until he uses the Cubeb Cough Cure. He says it stops it at once. He does not hesitate to recommend it for all throat and lung troubles.

WATERLOO.

Mrs. J. E. M. Hodge, of Auburn, drove over to Mrs Winslow's last week.

Mrs. Winslow has built cement walks in front of two lots on Center street.

C. M. Phillips has put a cement side walk in front of his property on south Railroad street.

Mrs. W. A. Fisher went to Ft. Wayne last week Thurday, to visit her mother who resides there, and other friends.

A barn belonging to Geo. Duncan who lives north of town, burned last Wednesday night. The loss was $1,500.

John Brand has left the Edge hotel, and moved his family back into his own residence further south on the same street.

The L. M. C. hold their session this week Tuesday evening Oct. 18 with Mrs. Boozer at her pleasant home southeast of town.

Rumors are going that Waterloo will soon become a division of the Lake Shore road. There seems to be some foundation to it.

Rev. E. F. Albertson has removed his furniture and other household goods to Logansport, where his family will reside, for the present.

Rev. Mr. Suman who succeeds Rev. Mr. Albertson as pastor in the M. E. church in Waterloo, preached in the pulpit of that church Sunday.

The ladies of the north section of the Presbyterian Society gave a social at the home of Mrs. R. M. Lockhart, last Friday evening, at which supper was served from 5 to 8.

Dr. Myers has returned from Deshler, Ohio, to this place where he expects to practice dentistry. He has a wife and two children and has rented a residence of Mr. Abby on South Railroad street.

Artists should improve these beautiful days to transfer to canvas, the beautiful colors, tints and shapes of our lovely forest trees, "en masse" and singly, as we see them in yards and in line on the street.

Andy Duncan has bought the barn on the property now owned by the Conservative U. B. society where the hotel was burned. Mr. Duncan will move the barn onto his own property on Washington street.

BUTLER.

Quite a number of strange families are coming to Butler and the demand for houses to live in continues.

The new foundry in connection with the Butler manufacturing company's building is nearing completion.

Mrs. Childers, married daughter of Joseph and Sarah Oberlin lies critically ill at her home on West North street. She has the sympathy of many sincere friends in our place.

A number of Butler's prominent Odd fellows went over to Hudson last Monday to assist and participate in the institution of a lodge of that order at the latter place. We learn that they were royally entertained and had an enjoyable time.

H. L. Jess has disposed of his stock of books, news and stationery to Bro. Downey of the Butler Review who has opened up a depot on West Oak street, to which place he will remove the Review office. We wish him success in this venture.

The sere and yellow leaf is again spreading its variegated hues to the autumn breeze and its beauty is wonderfully heightened by the mellow, sunshiny and mild atmosphere. Our autumn is one of the most beautiful the writer remembers to have seen.

Edward May's tailoring establishment had a narrow escape from fire Saturday night. Fire caught in the rear addition and burned through the floor. Mr. May happened to go in about 9:30 and discovered the fire and extinguished it. A boy was sleeping in the room but his cries failed to awaken him. So he put out the fire and let him asleep.

A couple of feeble efforts have been made the past week by the grand old parties to awake the sleeping political situation but no go, the small boys and mouthy girls monopolized everything and the speakers found themselves surrounded by a noisy crowd that cared more for its own amusement than to listen to the rounded sentences of the eloquent speakers who tried in vain to get their attention or to interest them.

The union memorial service conducted at the M. E. church Sunday evening by the leading churches was largely attended. The principal address was delivered by Prof. Sniff of Angola, who made a forcible impression on his audience by his effort to prove that our American people were the ten lost tribes of Israel. The idea seemed unique and awakened any amount of remark and criticism. All in all the address was a very good one and abounded in new thoughts.

SUMMIT.

Rosa Shiffli who has been visiting in Ohio, returned Saturday.

Dona and Laurence Shiffli went to Garrett to work, last week.

Henry Snowberger and wife were the guests of Henry Lawson and wife Sunday.

Mrs. Edwin Erwin, Mrs. Geo. Erwin and Mr. Shock and wife visited Thos. Shock jr., and wife Monday.

Mrs. Clara Miller and children, who have been visiting the past two weeks returned to her home in Michigan Monday.

Gilbert Greenwood had the misfortune to mash three fingers coupling cars one day last week. He is afraid he will have to have two of them amputated.

Sherman Grambling and wife who have been here visiting a short time, went to Chicago Thursday where they will spend a few days, then they will return to their home in Pennsylvania.

Orlando, Leonard and Lincoln Dirrim with their families of Hamilton, also I. N. Turner and wife of Waterloo, Jay Shafer and Misses Jennie and Georgia Chapman were guests of Milton Barker and wife Sunday.

On Thursday evening Oct. 13 a number of young people of Auburn, Garrett Leo and Summit to the number of 175 assembled at the home of Mike Shoudel 7 miles south of Auburn. After refreshments were served, to which all did justice the young people spent the time in dancing until the hour when all returned to their homes.

MRS. GROVER CLEVELAND

IS A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN, and the finest portrait that has been done of her since she has added to her charms that of motherhood, is offered with DEMOREST'S FAMILY MAGAZINE for November. The portrait is exquisitely executed in soft color tints, and what greatly adds to its value is the fact that it is personally authorized by Mrs. CLEVELAND. This honor was reserved for Demorest's Family Magazine alone, with the November number of which this superb picture (8½x11½ inches, and worth at least $2) is presented FREE. Don't fail to secure a copy; and when you see the beauty of this elegant work of art, you will frame it and give it the place of honor in your home that Mrs. Cleveland's portrait deserves. The November number of Demorest's Family Magazine is a remarkable one, containing over 200 illustrations, and something to interest every member of the family. Price 20 cents. Take it home. Everybody will be delighted with it. For sale by all Booksellers and News-dealers. Or send 20 cents to the publisher, W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, 15 East 14th Street, New York.

Goes Wild on Taxes.

The last Dispatch went wild on taxes. Forgetting that it and its party favor a tariff tax of $60 on $100, it goes into spasms, about a state levy of 18 cents and a county levy of 40 to 50 cents. As it has the paper nearly full of these things, we will alude, though more briefly to several points it tries to make. First, the Dispatch goes for the legislature. It says the last one "made mistakes." We say, the last republican legislature made nothing else but mistakes And we further assert, and defy contradiction, that no legislature the state ever had, did as much valuable work for the common people, as the last two.

The Dispatch says "the last legislature gave us the worst gerrymander." Not so. The worst was the one the republicans made in 1872. Look at the map.

It says further, "It gave us a sham fee and salary bill." But the officers whose fees are reduced one half, will not find it a sham. And about half of these changes in salary are made in about four weeks from now. No republican legislature ever did as much and people know it. All they ever changed in fees was to make them greater.

"It gave us a tax law that disturbed valuation," says the Dispatch. Well, we think that change is just what was needed. Valuations on certain property had gone so low as to be ridiculous. For instance, that Auburn lot assessed under the old law $210, but worth $3,000, is assessed $2,500 under the new; another lot valued under the old law at $250, was sold for $4,000, and under the new law taxed at $3,000. Don't our readers think such "values" ought to be disturbed" and the "taxes increased?"

Then it rehashes the old matter, which we disproved long ago, by using their own figures. It makes this assertion again, that taxes have been increased on ordinary property more than on railroads, etc, when its own figures show the reverse. The only way the increase or decrease can be compared is by percentage. To get this rate per cent, we divide the increase or decrease, by the original amount of tax under the old law. One example will suffice for the whole table. Using their own figures, we find that under the old law, the railroads, etc, paid in taxes $28,339 and under the new, $33,714 an increase of $5,275. Now divide this increase by the original amount of $28,339, and we have a rate of increase, 18 per cent, which is the rate increase in taxes on railroads In the same manner, we divide the increase of tax on property, $21,295, by the amount of the previous year, $134,338, and we find the rate of increase on general property is 15 per cent, that is, it is 3 per cent less than the increase on railroads. Evidently the Dispatch did not understand this. But the utter worthlessness of the Dispatch's figures, however, are shown by a second article on this subject, in the same number of the paper, in which it is solemnly stated that the total increase of taxes on land and common property, among the farmers is $6,083 49. Using this amount of increase as before, and dividing it by the total tax as they here give it under the old law, we find the increase of tax on common property is not quite 7 per cent.

This would leave his balance of his totals given on another page (47,080) to raise the rest of his increase of tax, (15,212). This will of course, be the tax paid in the incorporated towns, and dividing as before, we have a rate of increase of 32 per cent. In other words, his own figures show, that the tax increase on farmers is 7 per cent; on people in town, 32 per cent. Yet this is the very set of figures he uses to prove that "the law catches the farmers" the hardest

Then it goes on to complain that the Board of Commissioners "controlled by democrats," has raised the taxes." But in the same column, a little farther down, it complains because "the board made the levy so low that $840 was added to the county debt." Here again, the Dispatch deceives, by omitting to state what it must surely know; that there would have been no $840 added if the B. & O. road had paid its tax of over $4,000, when it should. It was paid in, however a day or two after the 31st of May, at which date, the accounts close by law. Had this $4,000 been paid in as early as in other years, the county debt would have been lessened by over $3,000. This shows that the commissioners had figured about right Nor do they say what the republican member of the board of commissioners was doing all this while, when the levy was being put too low and too high. Mr. Lockwood probably was not paying any attention to his duties as commissioner. More than a week after the board had adjourned after the regular session of September, we looked over the record of their daily work. On each of the nine days, "the two democratic members," Mr. Henderson and Mr. Hoffelder signed the records, but Mr. Lockwood's name did not appear once. We suppose it is not yet signed by him. For a man who puts in his time posing before the combined republican and people's party as a reformer, we think this record of his nine days work rather interesting. The people need men who will work honestly, rather than those spend the time talking reform, while trying to build a $5,000 bridge on a $1,200 site. Yes, we think the people will be glad that the two democratic members "control the board."

We showed last week, that it was not the commissioners who had raised the taxes, by giving the following table to show how much less they and the trustees had put the levy. as compared with the levy under the old law. Here it is:

	Old	New
Butler township	$1.79	$1.15
Jackson "	1.94	1.15
Concord "	2.04	1.20
Newville "	2.04	1.40
Stafford "	1.79	1.20
Wilmington "	1.69	1.00
Union "	1.59	1.00
Richland "	1.94	1.20
Fairfield "	1.84	1.20
Smithfield "	1.94	1.20
Franklin "	2.04	1.20
Troy "	1.89	1.05
Keyser "	2.09	1.10
Grant "	1.94	1.00
Auburn	3.49	1.75
Waterloo	2.04	1.21
Butler	2.04	1.20
Garrett	3.94	1.70

This shows the rates to be but little over half what they had been. Those who pay higher taxes, can lay it to the assessor who put the assessment higher, if they wish to blame anyone, except in the one case where the state levy was raised 6 cents. But the law will produce good. We have only cited Auburn town lots that paid but a trifle of tax, while poorer owners paid to the full value. We could cite hundreds of such cases. And it is in such cases mostly, that the increase of taxes comes in That is where this "increase of $3,354 in Auburn comes in

The assertion that the new law or any other assessment law. "favors the broker or money lender" is the merest twaddle. Money and good notes etc., are assessed at their face value, while it is well known, that even the high assessments the Dispatch complains of are put at only about three-fourths the real value.

The New Great South American Kidney Cure.

The acknowledged superior cure and immediate relief for all derangements, painfulness and decay of the kidneys or bladder, Bright's disease, diabetes or any complaint that hurts or despoils either of these delicate organs. This new remedy has been thoroughly tested by learned physicians and found far superior to any medicine yet discovered for quickly relieving all weaknesses, aches, pains and distresses arising from disease of any part of the urinary passages. It is a great relief for the old, middle aged and children, male or female. It relieves at once retention and pain in passing water, and it is very effective in relieving prostatic troubles in the old, and for nightly incontinence of water in children, or others, caused by weakness of the bladder. It may be worth to many a hundred times its cost. This is a remedy of great value to ladies, because they are very liable to weakness and pain peculiar to their sex. Sold by Robbins & McCord, druggists, Auburn, Ind. tf

SCHOOLS OF DEKALB,

And What They Did Columbus Day.

We have received only a partial report of the various schools but give those we have up to the time of closing this week.

NO. 6, UNION.

Miss Minnie Duesler is the teacher. She had arranged a program, prepared the work, and invited the patrons and friends to attend The exercises began at 10 a. m. and each of the pupils took some part. There were recitations, etc., interspersed with music by the Union Chapel band, Phillip Carper, leader. At noon parents, teachers and all had a grand picnic dinner, and a good time generally. At 2 p. m., they were called to order again by reading the scriptures, and each of the parents or heads of families made a short speech, as did also several others. Then three trees were planted, and named Christopher Columbus, Ferdinand and Isabella, respectively, and that each pupil might have a part in this, each threw in a shovelful of earth as they marched around. There was singing and prayer at the raising of the flag, and at the close they sang "God be with you till we meet again." Among the patrons and friends present were: Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wallace; Byron Cosper and wife; C. F. Wingard; L G. Duesler and wife; John Pyle and wife; John Hornberger and wife: S. M. Brown and wife; Frank Cosper and wife; J. R Cosper; Wm. Poorman and wife: George Hoodelmire and wife; Addie Poorman, Mary Luce, H J. Luce, Dennis Poorman, Gay Hay, Zay Cosper, M. H. Porter, Russel Brown, Geo. Clouse, Amanda Clouse, Mrs. Sue Sherwood, Mrs. Nannie Kosht, Belinda Metcalf, Mrs. Clara Farnsworth, Mrs. Daniel Miller, Ione Nieswander, Anna Porter, John Speer, Spencer Lahnum, Lewis Steward, Wm. Blodgett, Zula Cosper, E. O. Likens, J. A. Wilson, J. W. Duesler, Frank Pyle, Phillip Carper, A B. Walsworth, J. W. Lutz, T. S. Hoodelmire, Hiram J. Springer, U. Hodelmire, Mrs. Ella Rainstraw, and others whose names were not secured.

TROY TOWNSHIP.

Trustee W. S. Morgan reports all the money raised to get flags for his districts, though the flags did not arrive in time for the exercises. Other townships have also failed to get their flags owing, no doubt to the great demand just now. Each of his schools held exercises, working the program furnished by W. A. Bell of the school Journal. In each case the patrons came in, and they had picnic dinner, speaking, music, etc. Columbus trees were planted at at least three places, though some were already well supplied with trees. In District No 1, there was an address by the pastor of the U. B. church, Rev. Durler. There was a good time all along the line.

NO. 4, JACKSON.

Harris G. Provines, teacher, reports a grand time Columbus Day. There was a fine dinner, and parents and friends of the school came in and enjoyed the day with the school. Two trees were planted. There were literary exercises, and speeches by the parents, etc. Over 70 were present, including the pupils. Among them were the following with their families: Mrs James Reed, Cyrus Cahill, Henry Magginis, John Weaver, Hiram Elson, Mrs. J. G. Lawhead, Mrs. John Eargood, Mrs Lyman Lockwood, Mrs. Tom Cool, Benjamin Lawhead, Miss Lovina Magginis and others.

NO. 2, WILMINGTON.

Miss Nelle Klum teacher, reports a good and profitable time and a collection of $1 10 as requested by the Indiana Committee on Education of the World's Fair Managers.

NO 2 BUTLER TOWNSHIP.

The citizens assembled at the school house in the morning and the exercises of the day were as follows; Reading of the president's proclamation raising and saluting the flag by the people and pupils; devotional exercises conducted by Rev. H. Stackhouse; recitations and singing by the pupils and people of the district. After the exercises an eloquent address was given by Rev. H Stackhouse in which he showed the possibility of great and grand achiovments yet to be accomplished. The exercises being over a bountiful dinner was served. The afternoon was spent in planting trees, games of various kinds and social enjoyment. The occasion was one of great enjoyment and long to be remembered Mary Essig, teacher; John Heitz and Phillip Noel, committee.

ST. JOE.

Such a large number of people as gathered at the grove on Columbus Day in the quiet village of St. Joe has not met there for many a day. The fact that Concord township has for many years been thoroughly alive to all matters pertaining to education easily explains why so many gathered together in the afternoon to participate in the joint exercises At a meeting of the teachers some time ago it was decided that each school should hold exercises at their respective schools in the forenoon following the program given in the Youth's Companion and that in the afternoon all the schools should meet in St.

THE WAY THINGS LOOK

IN THIS GREAT WORLD OF OURS.

A Bad Railroad Wreck in Wisconsin—G. A. R. Appointments—Destructive Fire—Utah Progressing—Bicycle Works at Indianapolis Destroyed by Fire.

RAILROAD WRECK.

Two Killed and a Half Dozen Injured.

Milwaukee special: A disastrous railroad wreck occurred on the Milwaukee and Northern branch of the St. Paul railroad near Plymouth, sixty miles north of this city, resulting in the death of two men and the injuring of half a dozen more, some of whom are likely to die. The dead are Thomas Fitzgerald, section hand, and Nick Rengle, section hand.

The list of injured as far as known is Frank Bowen, section foreman, shoulder and wrist sprained; John Jacob, badly cut about the face; William Peal, four ribs crushed on right side with other internal injuries, condition serious; Chris. Esling, contusion of the shoulder. The wrecked train was a construction train, and was backing down to Plymouth from a gravel pit. A flagman was sent back to flag No. 14 (freight), coming south. Either the flagman failed to perform his duty or the signals were unobserved, and train No. 14 ran into the working train.

G. A. R. Appointments.

Milwaukee special: Commander-in-Chief Wessert of the Grand Army of the Republic, has issued general order No. 2 from national headquarters, in this city, in which he announces the appointment of five members of his official family as follows: Adjutant General, E. B. Gray, Milwaukee; Quartermaster General, John Taylor, Philadelphia; Inspector General, Geo. L. Goodall, Boston, Mass.; Assistant Adjutant General, J. L. Bennett, Chicago; Senior Aid-de-camp, Ford H. Rogers, Detroit, Mich. The appointment of Adjutant Judge Advocate is still to be announced. Five of the members of the Executive Committee of the Council of Administration are also announced as follows: Henry S. Deitrich, Chicago; L. B. Raymond, Hampton, Iowa; W. H. Armstrong, Indianapolis, Ind.; H. C. Luther, Providence, R. I.; A. P. Burchfield, Pa.

Utah Progressing.

Arthur L. Thomas, Governor of Utah Territory, has in his annual report estimated the population of the Territory to be 223,930, an increase of 17,005 over the enumeration of 1890. The foreign immigration has fallen below the average of previous years; but there has been a steady growth in the commercial and mining centers and railroad cities and towns. The assessed valuation of property for 1892 was $87,200,000, an increase of 1-6 per cent. Natural gas has been found in Lake Valley, and wells have been bored which promise gratifying results. Valuable deposits of slate and other materials have been discovered. The denominational schools are steadily giving way to the public schools. He believes Mormonism is dying out and says that no recent polygamous marriages have come to light.

Judge Blodgett Resigns.

Judge Blodgett, who for twenty-two years has presided over the United States District Court, in Chicago, confirmed the statement that his resignation was in the hands of the President. His resignation was to take effect the first Monday in December, he said. One of the reasons for Judge Blodgett's retirement is the fact that his duties as counsel for the Behring Sea Commission will compel him to be absent from Chicago until a decision is reached by the arbitrators.

Killed by a Cup of Coffee.

A peculiar accident that resulted in the death of a 3-year-old girl happened at Pittsburgh, Pa. Stella Tirevel was the little victim. Her mother was filling a cup of coffee over the child's head, as she sat in the chair at the table, when the handle of the coffee-pot broke and the contents were poured over the little one. She was scalded dreadfully, and despite the efforts of the physicians died a few hours after the accident.

Extensive Damage by Fire.

The extensive planning mills, saw-mill, feed and grain-mill, lumber yard, and warehouse belonging to the D. W. Chandler Company at Oxford, Pa., were entirely destroyed by fire, together with eight cars loaded with grain which stood on a siding in the yards. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Fire at Indianapolis.

The Indiana Bicycle works at Indianapolis, one of the largest factories of the kind in the West was partially destroyed by a fire starting in the paint shop, either from spontaneous combustion or incendiarism. Loss, $85,000; insurance on portion burned, $5,000.

Damaging Forest Fires.

The damage already done by the great fire that is sweeping through the woodlands of Atlantic County, New Jersey, will amount to nearly $100,000. The flames are visible for many miles and the air is filled with smoke.

Froze to Death in a Storm.

The body of S. H. Coleman, a Denver attorney, was found in a mountain gulch near Morrison, Col. He attempted to walk from the railway station to his ranch and froze to death in the storm.

Twenty-seven Killed by Earthquakes.

Five villages have been destroyed by earthquakes in Kootias, a government of Asiatic Russia. Twenty-seven persons are known to have perished and many more are missing.

Was Divorced by Death.

Death beat the Wichita, Kan., district court in divorcing Mrs. Minnie Padrick from her husband, Marshall Padrick. Judge Reed granted a decree, and had just signed the document when a messenger brought word that Mrs. Padrick had died an hour before.

Locked in a Burning Building.

While Mrs. Michael Hanses was attending the Columbian exercises at Manannah, Minn., her house, 200 yards away, was burned. Her two children, aged 1 and 4 years, whom she had locked in the house twenty minutes before, were burned to death.

FIGHTING THE COAL BARONS.

Supplementary Information Filed Against the Reading Company.

A Trenton, N. J., dispatch says: Attorney General Stockton has filed a supplementary information against the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, which recites the conditions under which the former information had been filed against the Central, Port Reading, and Reading Companies in the Reading deal. It further shows that the price of coal on or about July 1, 1892, had been raised from 10 to 15 per cent., and that on September 7, 1892, the Philadelphia and Reading and New Jersey Central raised the price of egg and stove coal about 25 per cent., and the chancellor is asked to direct that this company must not further advance the price of coal. The prayer of the informations is that the railroad company shall be obliged, under seal, to give facts as to the increase in the price of coal, and that the Philadelphia and Reading and Central Railroad Companies may be restrained from further continuing to maintain the advance.

NEW YORK FIRM FAILS.

Burkhalter & Co., the Wholesale Grocery House, Makes an Assignment.

C. Burkhalter & Co., New York, wholesale grocers, failed, with liabilities which may reach $700,000 or more. They have preferences aggregating $183,167. All the preferences are for borrowed money. The partners in the firm are cousins. Both live in New Jersey—Charles at East Orange and John H. at Glen Ridge. The business was established in 1820, and has passed through several generations and various changes in style. The partners have declared right along that they were worth $300,000 over and above all liabilities. Charles, the senior partner, has been in poor health for six months past but has been able to attend to business off and on. John H. Burkhalter said; "We preferred only our confidential debts to secure money which we borrowed from our friends. Besides the preferences there are, I should think, about $250,000 notes out and the rest of our indebtedness is for merchandise."

WORLD-SURPASSING.

The Scene at the Dedicatory Exercises of the World's Fair.

The scene at the dedication of the World's Columbian Exposition was one that amazed the throng of nearly 200,000 people who attended, and it was one which has never before been paralleled in the history of the universe. In the vast building devoted to manufactures there were fully 100,000 people, most of them seated, and twice that number would not have crowded the structure. The decorations were lavish in profusion, beautiful in design, and the ceremonies were of the most impressive order. Naturally, but a small proportion of those present could hear the addresses, and in consequence the throng outside the building equaled that inside. The fireworks display in the evening at three parks simultaneously was most elaborate, and was seen for many miles about.

GREATEST IN AMERICA.

Monster Parade at Chicago to Inaugurate Dedication Ceremonies.

The civic parade, Thursday, at Chicago, was the most notable affair of the kind ever seen in this country. Eighty thousand men on foot and thousands more mounted and in carriages, tramped over the route between the densest masses of people on sidewalks. The spectators numbered over a million, and were so closely massed that for hours men and women were as effectually confined as if prison. The buildings along the line of march were apparently bursting with humanity, and the decorations of the city were something wonderful. There were over 200,000 strangers in the city.

NEW OCEAN RECORD.

The City of Paris Makes New York in 5 Days 14 Hours and 24 Minutes.

The steamship City of Paris, of the Inman Line, has again broken the westward record from Queenstown, which was made by her when she made the run in July in five days fifteen hours and fifty-eight minutes. She also beats the record for a single day's run by covering 530 miles, against the record of 528 miles made by the Teutonic. The City of Paris sailed from Liverpool and arrived at Sandy Hook lighthouse, covering a distance of 2,782 miles, in five days fourteen hours and twenty-four minutes, beating the record by one hour and thirty-four minutes. Her days' runs were as follows: 448, 508, 503, 505, 530 and 288.

CARNEGIE EMPLOYES BEATEN.

Laborers in the Pittsburg Mill Attacked by Alleged Union Men.

Early Thursday morning as Gus Smith and Hans Sutter, day laborers in Carnegie's upper Union mill, Pittsburg, were set upon and terribly beaten by five men, alleged to be strikers. They were found an hour later and sent to the West Penn Hospital. Smith's injuries are thought to be fatal, while Sutter lies unconscious and in an extremely critical condition. There is no positive clew to the assailants.

ECHO OF THE BERGMAN CASE.

Chief of Police O'Mara, of Pittsburg, Indicted in New Jersey.

The Monmouth County, N. J., grand jury have found indictments for kidnaping against Chief of Police O'Mara, of Pittsburg, for conveying Frank Mollick, who was arrested on suspicion of being an accomplice of Bergman in the attempted assassination of H. C. Frick, of the Carnegie Company. He took Mollick out of the State of New Jersey without a requisition.

Ohio Masons Choose Officers.

At Springfeld, Ohio, the Masonic Grand Lodge of Ohio adjourned to meet in Cleveland the third week in October, 1893. Reports showed 37,044 Masons in the State, a gain of 1,441 during the year. The treasurer's report showed a balance of $22,682. The following officers were elected and installed: Grand Master, Allan Andrews, Hamilton; Deputy Grand Master, Carroll F. Clapp, Warren; Senior Grand Warden, William R. Melish, Cincinnati; Junior Grand Warden, Barton Smith, Toledo; Grand Chaplin, Rev. F. G. Mitchell, Piqua; Grand Orator, Nelson Williams, Hamilton; Grand Marshal, J. M. Robinson, Cleveland; Senior Grand Deacon, C. F. Baldwin, Mt. Vernon; Junior Grand Deacon, C. E. Guilford, Cleveland; Grand Tyler, Jacob Randall, Waynesville.

Cholera Lingers in Germany.

At Hamburg there were two fresh cases of cholera Friday and two deaths. It snowed all the afternoon. There is no doubt that cholera exists in the district of which Coblenz is the center. Deaths from the disease are known to have occurred in that city and in Mentz and Polch. It is feared that the malady is on the increase.

Spain's Exhibition Postponed.

A Madrid correspondent says that the opening of the Spanish Columbus exhibition has been postponed in consequence of illness of King Alfonso.

Fire in a Foundry.

The Stewart Brothers iron works at Wichita, Kan., were partially burned. The loss is about $12,000, fully covered by insurance. Three years ago this firm lost its entire plant by fire.

Struck by a Foul Ball and Killed.

At Perry, N. Y., during a game of ball, Thomas Buell batted a foul ball which flew among the spectators and struck David Allen, aged 18, over the heart, killing him instantly.

Couldn't Stand the Tremens.

"Tip Brown, a noted Lyons, N. Y., character, was attacked by delirium tremens in Christopher Hopp's saloon and started to drown himself in the river. He was finally prevented from doing so and was locked up. Hopp was a periodical drunkard, and Brown's condition set him to thinking, so it appeared from his talk, as to how he was likely to wind up if he did not stop drinking. He brooded over the matter all night and in the morning cut his throat from ear to ear, expiring instantly.

ENGLISH CONGRATULATIONS.

Evidence of the Intense Self-Reliance of a Wonderful Country.

The London Post, referring to the dedication of the World's Fair buildings in Chicago, says: "Nothing but the intense self-reliance of a wonderful country could have started and completed a spectacle so unique. Englishmen join in congratulating their kinsmen upon an event of peaceful and progressive import." The Chronicle says: "The cup of Chicago's happiness must be full. The ceremony has been superlative in every respect. Although we may wince a little at the drum roll of superlatives, English congratulations must not be lacking." The Telegraph and the News agree that the directors of the fair could not have chosen a better man than Chauncey M. Depew to deliver the Columbian oration. The Telegraph says: "Everybody here wishes the fair prodigious prosperity." The Times says: "Well may Americans look with pride on so unexampled a sight and listen with gratified self-esteem to the orator who helps them to understand its full value and their own. It is a splendid spectacle. We fully recognize the qualities and efforts which produced it, and we offer our hearty congratulations."

AVAILABLE STOCKS OF WHEAT.

Reports Received of the Amount on Hand.

The available stocks of wheat in the United States and Canada east of the Rocky Mountains at last report were, as reported to Bradstreet's, 70,555,570 bushels. On the same date the total available stocks west of the Rockies were 9,482,522 bushels. Exports of wheat (and of flour as wheat) from New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Newport News, New Orleans, Galveston, San Francisco, Portland (Oregon), Portland (Maine), Tacoma and Seattle, as reported by mail and wire to Bradstreet's, were, for the week, 3,270,275 bushels.

CRUEL MATRIMONIAL HOAX.

A Louisville Church Crowded Through Bogus Invitations to a Wedding.

There was such a jam at the regular prayer meeting of the Covenant Presbyterian Church, Louisville, Wednesday evening that the regular attendants were amazed. The strangers came on an invitation to witness the marriage of Miss Fanny O. Adams and William T. Huxley. Finally an announcement was made from the pulpit that the invitations were a hoax.

Scottish Rite Masons in Council.

The Supreme Council, Scottish Rite Masons, for the Southern and Western States, who held their biennial council at Washington, by a large majority decided to hold the next biennial session at St. Louis. Propositions looking to amalgamation of this Supreme Council and the Northern Supreme Council have been submitted, and while it is thought union will eventually take place it may be deferred for two years. A petition from the German so-called Cerneau Scottish Rite Masons praying for recognition was unanimously rejected.

Synod in Session.

The Presbyterian Synod convened at Albany, N. Y., Moderator Parsons presiding. The reports on the work of the past year were submitted from the different presbyteries as well as reports from the several committees. The Moderator then announced the members of the Judicial Committee which is to pass on the complaint of Dr. Briggs. The Judicial Committee met after the noon recess and took up the appeals of Dr. Briggs and Dr. McLeod. The latter's appeal was referred to a sub-committee of three.

Friends Appealed To for Funds.

Thursday's session of the conference of friends at Indianapolis was largely devoted to a discussion of the pastoral relation and to reports from the several committees. Among the declarations adopted was one which calls the attention of the church to the necessity of providing for the support of the ministry, and friends every where are exhorted to take the matter of pastoral relations into consideration, "so that the gospel may not be hindered nor the shepherding of the flock be impaired by the want of pecuniary means."

Disaster in a Mine.

The train used for hauling the loaded coal "jimmies" from the mines at Music, Ky., separated and came together a few minutes later. A young man named Hubbs was instantly killed, while another named Phillips, with four more whose names could not be learned, are thought to be fatally hurt. None of the crowd escaped uninjured, and several were badly used up from gas and smoke from the engine.

Chicago Man Accused of Fraud.

T. H. H. Pilkington, a young man from Chicago, is under arrest at Birmingham, Ala. He advertised for men who wanted good indoor positions. He opened a studio and when his victims appeared he put them to coloring pictures. He got a deposit of $10 from each in advance as a guarantee of good faith. His employes thought they were being duped and had Pilkington arrested.

Run Over by an Electric Car.

Joseph Thompson, one of the oldest citizens of Memphis, Tenn., was run over by an electric street car and fatally hurt. Mr. Thompson is 84 years old.

Praises of Columbus Sung on the Four Hundredth Anniversary of His Achievement—Grand Import of His Work to the Christian World.

The Vice-President's Speech.

Vice-President Morton accepted the Columbian Exposition buildings and dedicated the great undertaking in fitting, well-chosen words. He said:

Mr. President: Deep indeed, must be the sorrow which prohibits the President of the United States from being the central figure in these ceremonials. Realizing from these sumptuous surroundings, the extent of design, the adequacy of execution and the vastness of results, we may well imagine how ardently he has aspired to be officially and personally connected with this great work, so linked to the past and to the present of America. With what eloquent words he would have spoken of the heroic achievements and radiant future of his beloved country. While profoundly anguished in his most tender earthly affection, he would not have us delay or falter in these dedicatory services and we can only offer to support his courage by a profound and universal sympathy.

The attention of our whole country and of all peoples elsewhere concerned in industrial progress is to-day fixed upon the city of Chicago. This is due not only to the Columbian Exposition which marks an epoch, but to the marvelous growth and energy of the second commercial city of the Union. I am not here to recount the wonderful story of this city's rise and advancement. These are known of all men. I am here in behalf of the Government of the United States, in behalf of all the people, to bid all hail to Chicago, all hail to the Columbian Exposition.

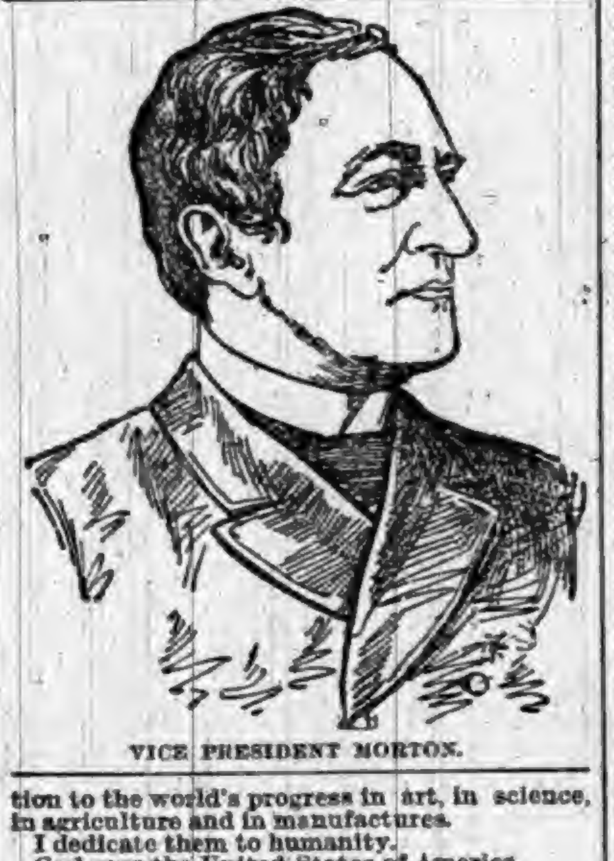
What a spectacle have we here! Look upon these magnificent erections and consider their beauty and rapidity of realization. They seem to be evoked at a wizard's touch of Aladdin's lamp. They are worthy shrines to record the achievements of the two Americas. Columbus is not now in chains, nor are Columbian ideas in fetters.

We may not anticipate the character and value of our national exhibit. Rather may we anticipate that a conservative award will be made by the world's criticism to young nation eagerly listening to the beckoning future. We can easily predict those who will come from every region of our country to make the exhibit. They will be the descendants of the sturdy and venerable immigrants; of many of the men of his time who made their mark in history.

We are near the beginning of another century, and if no serious change occurs in our present growth in the year 1935, in the lifetime of many now in manhood, the English-speaking republicans of America will number more than 180,000,000.

The transcendent feature in the character of Columbus was his faith. That sustained him in days of trial and darkness, and finally gave him the great discovery. Like him, let us have faith in our future.

Mr. President, in the name of the Government of the United States, I hereby dedicate these buildings and their appurtenances, intended by the Congress of the United States for the use of the World's Columbian Exposition to the world's progress in art, in science, in agriculture and in manufactures.



VICE PRESIDENT MORTON.

I dedicate them to humanity.

God save the United States of America.

Henry Watterson's Oration.

Among the wonders of creative and constructive genius in course of preparation for this festival of the nations, whose formal and official inauguration has brought us together, will presently be witnessed upon the margin of the interocean which gives to this noble and beautiful city the character and rank of a maritime metropolis, a spectatorium wherein the Columbian epic will be told with realistic effects surpassing the most splendid and impressive achievements of the modern stage. It traces the strange adventures of the Genoese seer from the royal camp of Santa Fe to the very moment that beholds us here, citizens, freemen, equal shareholders in the miracle of American civilization and development. Is there one among us who does not thank his Maker that he has lived to join in this universal celebration, the jubilee of mankind?

We look before and after and we see through the half-drawn folds of time as through the solemn archways of some grand cathedral the long procession pass, as silent and as real as a dream; the caravels, tossing upon Atlantic billows, have their sails refilled from the east and bear away to the west; the land is reached, and fulfilled is the vision whose actualities are to be gathered by other hands than his who planned the voyage and steered the bark of discovery.

We look again and we see in the far northeast the old-world struggle between the French and English transferred to the new, ending in the tragedy upon the heights above Quebec; we see the sturdy puritans in bell-crowned hats and sable garments assail in unequal battle the savage and the elements, overcoming both to rise against a mightier foe; we see the gay but dauntless cavaliers to the southward join hands with the roundheads in holy rebellion. And, lo! down from the green-walled hills of New England, out of the swamps of the Carolinas, come faintly to the ear, like far-away forest leaves stirred to music by autumn winds, the drum-taps of the revolution; the tramp of the minute men, Israel Putnam riding before; the hoof-beats of Sumter's horse galloping to the front; the thunder of Stark's guns in spirit-battle; the gleam of Marion's watch-fires in ghostly bivouac; and there, there in serried, saint-like ranks on Fame's eternal camping-ground, stand

> "The old continentals,
> In their ragged regimentals,
> Yielding not," as, amid the singing of angels in heaven, the scene is shut out from our mortal vision by proud and happy tears.

We see the rise of the young republic; and the gentlemen in the knee-breeches and powdered wigs who signed the declaration and the gentlemen in knee-breeches and powdered wigs who made the Constitution. We see the little nation menaced from without. We see the riflemen in hunting-shirt and buckskin swarm from the cabin in the wilderness to the rescue of country and home; and our hearts swell to a second and final decree of independence won by the prowess and valor of American arms upon the land and sea.

And then, and then—since there is no life of nations or of men without its shadow and its sorrow—there comes a day when the spirits of the fathers no longer walk upon the battlements of freedom; and all is dark; and all seems lost, save liberty and honor, and, praise God, our blessed Union. With these surviving who shall marvel at what we see to-day; this land filled with the treasures of the earth; this city snatched from the ashes to rise in splendor and renown passing the mind to preconceive!

Truly, out of trial comes the strength of man; out of disaster comes the glory of the state!

We are met this day to honor the memory of Christopher Columbus, to celebrate the 400th annual return of the year of his transcendent achievement, and, with fitting rites, to dedicate to America and the universe a concrete exposition of the world's progress between 1492 and 1892.

No twenty centuries can be compared with those four centuries either in importance or in interest, as no previous ceremonial can be compared with this in its wide significance and reach; because, since the advent of the Son of God, no event has had so great an influence upon human affairs as the discovery of the western hemisphere.

Our republic represents the letter and spirit of the sublime declaration. The fetters that bound her to the earth are burst asunder. The rags that degraded her beauty are cast aside. Like the enchanted princess in the legend, clad in spotless raiment and wearing a crown of living light, she steps in the perfection of her maturity upon the scene of this the latest and proudest of her victories, to bid a welcome to the world. From wheresoever he cometh we welcome him with all our hearts. All nations and creeds be welcome here. The American, loving no country except his own but loving all mankind as his brother, bids you enter and fear not; bids you partake with us of these fruits of 400 years of American civilization and development and behold these trophies of 100 years of American independence and freedom!

At this moment in every part of the American Union the children are taking up the wondrous tale of the discovery. See—for better than these we have nothing to exhibit. They, indeed, are our crown jewels—the truest though the inevitable offsprings of our civilization and development; the representatives of a manhood vitalized and invigorated by toil and care, of womanhood elevated and inspired by liberty and education. God bless the children and their mothers! God bless our country's flag! And God be with us now and ever. God in the roof-tree's shade and God on the highway, God in the winds and waves, and God in all our hearts!

> "Our young barbarians all at play."

Chauncey Depew's Address.

This day belongs not to America, but to the world. The results of the event it commemorates are the heritage of the people of every race and clime. We celebrate the emancipation of man. The preparation was the work of almost countless centuries, the realization was the revelation of one. The cross on Calvary was hope; the cross raised on San Salvador was opportunity. But for the first, Columbus would never have sailed; but for the second, there would have been no place for the planting, the nurture and the expansion of civil and religious liberty. Ancient history is a dreary record of unstable civilizations. Each reached its zenith of material splendor and perished. The Assyrian, Persian, Egyptian, Grecian and Roman Empires were proofs of the possibilities and limitations of man for conquest and intellectual development. Their destruction involved a sum of misery and relapse which made their creation rather a curse than a blessing. Force was the factor in the government of the world when Christ was born, and force was the sole source and existence of authority both by Church and State when Columbus sailed from Palos. The Wise Men traveled from the East toward the West under the guidance of the Star of Bethlehem. The spirit of the equality of all men before God and the law moved westward from Calvary, with its revolutionary influence upon old institutions, to the Atlantic Ocean. Columbus carried it westward across the seas. The emigrants from England, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales, from Germany and Holland, from Sweden and Denmark, from France and Italy, have, under its guidance and inspiration, moved west and again west, building States and founding cities until the Pacific limited their march. The exhibition of arts and sciences, of industries and inventions, of education and civilization, which the republic of the United States will here present, and to which, through its Chief Magistrate, it invites all nations, condenses and displays the flower and fruitage of this transcendent miracle.

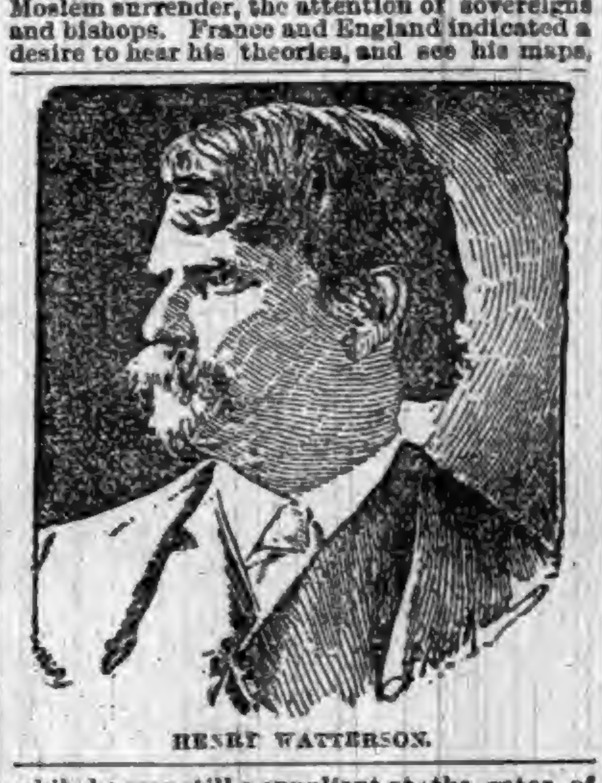
Fifty years before Columbus sailed from Palos, Guttenburg and Faust had forged the hammer which was to break the bonds of superstition and open the prison doors of the mind. They had invented the printing press and movable types. The prior adoption of a cheap process for the manufacture of paper at once utilized the press. Its first service, like all its succeeding efforts, was for the people. The universities and schoolmen, the privileged and the learned few of that age, were longing for the revelation and preservation of the classic treasurers of antiquity, hidden and yet insecure in monastic cells and libraries. But the first-born of the marvellous creation of these primitive printers of Mayence was the printed Bible. The priceless contributions of Greece and Rome to the intellectual training and development of the modern world came afterwards, through the same wondrous machine. The force, however, which made possible America, and its reflex influence upon Europe, was the open Bible by the family fireside. And yet neither the enlightenment of the new learning, nor the dynamic power of the spiritual awakening, could break through the crust of caste which had been forming for centuries. Church and State had so firmly and dexterously interwoven the bars of privilege and authority, that liberty was impossible from within. Its piercing light and fervent heat must penetrate from without.

God always has in training some commanding genius for the control of great crises in the affairs of nations and peoples. The number of these leaders are less than the centuries, but their lives are the history of human progress. Though Cæsar and Charlemagne, and Hildebrand, and Luther, and William the Conqueror, and Oliver Cromwell, and all the epoch makers prepared Europe for the event, and contributed to the result, the lights which illumine our firmament to-day are Columbus the discoverer, Washington the founder, and Lincoln the savior.

Neither realism nor romance furnishes a more striking and picturesque figure than that of Christopher Columbus. The mystery about his origin heightens the charm of his story. That he came from among the toilers of his time is in harmony with the struggles of our period. Forty-four authentic portraits of him have descended to us, and no two of them are the counterfeits of the same person. Each represents a character as distinct as its canvas. Strength and weakness, intellectuality and stupidity, high moral purpose and brutal ferocity, purity and licentiousness, the dreamer and the miser, the pirate and the puritan, are the types from which we may select our hero. We dismiss the painter, and piercing with the clarified vision of the dawn of the twentieth century, the veil of four hundred years, we construct our Columbus.

The perils of the sea in his youth upon the rich argosies of Genoa, or in the service of the licensed rovers who made them their prey, had developed a skillful navigator and intrepid mariner. They had given him a glimpse of the possibilities of the unknown, beyond the highways of travel, which roused an unquenchable thirst for adventure and research. The study of the narratives of previous explorers, and diligent questionings of the daring spirits who had ventured far toward the fabled West, gradually evolved a theory, which became in his mind so fixed a fact that he could inspire others with his own passionate beliefs. The words, "that is a lie," written by him on the margin of nearly every page of a volume of the travels of Marco Polo, which is still to be found in a Genoese library, illustrates the skepticism of his beginning, and the first vision of the New World the fulfillment of his faith.

To secure the means to test the truth of his speculations, this poor and unknown dreamer, must win the support of kings and overcome the hostility of the church. He never doubted his ability to do both, though he knew of no man living who was so great in power, or lineage, or learning that he could accomplish either. Unaided and alone he succeeded in arousing the jealousies of sovereigns, and dividing the councils of the ecclesiastics. "I will command your fleet and discover for you new realms, but only on condition that you confer on me hereditary nobility, the Admiralty of the Ocean, and the Vice Royalty and one-tenth the revenues of the New World," were his haughty terms to King John of Portugal. After ten years of disappointment and poverty, subsisting most of the time upon the charity of the enlightened monk of the Convent of Ribida, who was his unfaltering friend, he stood before the throne of Ferdinand and Isabella, and rising to imperial dignity in his rags, embodied the same royal conditions in his petition. The capture of Granada, the expulsion of Islam from Europe, and the triumph of the Cross, aroused the admiration and devotion of Christendom. But this proud beggar, holding in his grasp the potential promise and dominion of Eldorada and Cathay, divided with the Moslem surrender, the attention of sovereigns and bishops. France and England indicated a desire to hear his theories, and see his maps, while he was still a suppliant at the gates of the camp of Castile and Aragon, the sport of its courtiers, and the scoff of its confessors. His unshakeable faith, that Christopher Columbus was commissioned from Heaven, both by his name and by divine command to carry "Christ across the sea" to new continents and pagan people, lifted him so far above the discouragements of an empty purse and a contemptuous court that he was proof against the rebuffs of fortune or of friends. To conquer the prejudices of the clergy, to win the approval and financial support of the state, to venture upon that unknown ocean which, according to the belief of the age, was peopled with demons and savage beasts of frightful shape, and from which there was no possibility of return, required the zeal of Peter the Hermit, the chivalric courage of the Cid, and the imagination of Dante. Columbus belonged to that high order of cranks who confidently walk where "angels fear to tread," and often become the benefactors of their country or their kind.



HENRY WATTERSON.

It was a happy omen of the position which women was to hold in America, that the only person who comprehended the majestic scope of his plans, and the invincible qualities of his genius, was the able and gracious Queen of Castile. Isabella, alone of all the dignitaries of that age, shares with Columbus the honors of his great achievement. She arrayed her kingdom and her private fortune behind the enthusiasm of this mystic mariner, and posterity pays homage to her wisdom and faith.

The mighty soul of the great Admiral was undaunted by the ingratitude of princes and the hostility of the people, by imprisonment and neglect. He died as he was securing the means and preparing a campaign for the rescue of the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem from the infidel. He did not know what time has revealed, that while the mission of the crusades, of Godfrey of Bouillon and Richard of the Lion Heart was a bloody and fruitless romance, the discovery of America was the salvation of the world. The one was the symbol, the other the spirit; the one death, the other life. The tomb of the Savior was a narrow and empty vault, precious only for its memories of the supreme tragedy of the centuries, but the new continent was to be the home and temple of the living God.

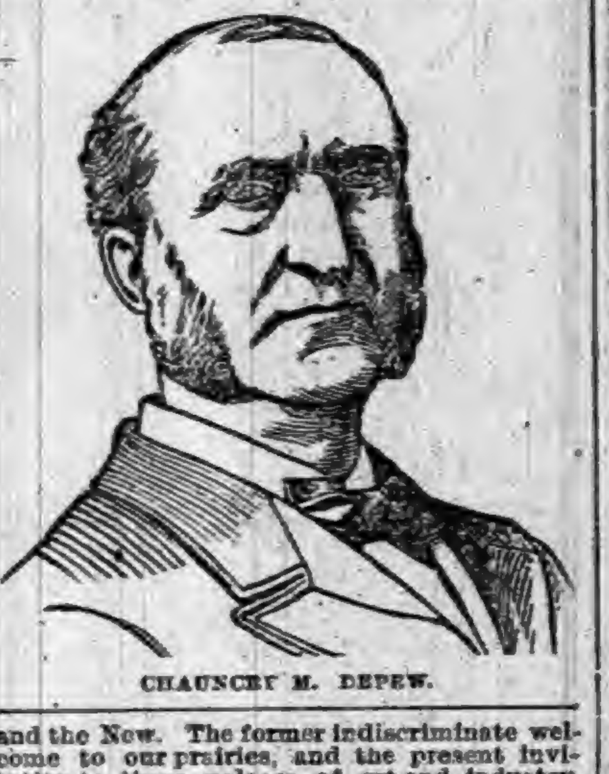
The rulers of the old world began with partitioning the new. The northern continent was divided between England, France and Spain, and the southern between Spain and Portugal. France, wanting the capacity for colonization, which still characterizes her, gave up her western possessions and left the English, who have the genius of universal empire, masters of North America. The development of the experiment in the English domain makes this day memorable. It is due to the wisdom and courage, the faith and virtue of the inhabitants of this territory that government of the people, for the people and by the people was inaugurated, and has become a triumphant success. The Puritan settled in New England and the Cavalier in the South. They represent the opposites of spiritual and temporal life and opinions. The processes of liberty liberalized the one and elevated the other. Washington and Adams were the new types. Their union in a common cause gave the world a republic both stable and free. It possessed conservatism without bigotry, and liberty without license. It founded institutions strong enough to resist revolution, and elastic enough for indefinite extension to meet the requirements in government of ever enlarging areas of population, and the needs of progress and growth.

The Mayflower, with the Pilgrims, and a Dutch ship laden with African slaves were on the ocean at the same time, the one sailing for Massachusetts and the other for Virginia. This company of saints, and first cargo of slaves, represented the forces which were to peril and rescue free government. The slaver was the product of commercial spirit of Great Britain and the greed of the times to stimulate production in the colonies. The men who wrote in the cabin of the Mayflower the first charter of freedom, a government of just and equal laws, were a little band of protestants against every form of injustice and tyranny. The leaven of their principles made possible the Declaration of Independence, liberated the slaves, and founded the free commonwealths which form the Republic of the United States.

The scope and limitations of this idea of freedom have neither been misinterpreted nor misunderstood. The laws of nature in their application to the rise and recognition of men according to their mental, moral, spiritual and physical endowments are left undisturbed.

The sum of human happiness has been infinitely increased by the millions from the old world who have improved their conditions in the new, and the returning tide of lesson and experience has incalculably enriched the Fatherlands. The divine right of kings has taken its place with the instruments of mediæval torture among the curiosities of the antiquary. Only the shadow of kingly authority stands between the Government of themselves, by themselves, and the people of Norway and Sweden. The union in one empire of states of Germany is the symbol of Teutonic power and the hope of German liberalism. The petty despotisms of Italy have been merged into a nationality which has centralized its authority in its ancient capitol on the hills of Rome. France was rudely roused from the sullen submission of centuries to intolerable tyranny by her soldiers returning from service in the American revolution. The wild orgies of the reign of terror were the revenges and excesses of a people who had discovered their power, but were not prepared for its beneficent use. She fled from herself into the arms of Napoleon. He, too, was a product of the American experiment. He played with kings as with toys, and educated France for liberty. In the processes of her evolution from darkness to light, she tried Bourbon, and Orleanist, and the third Napoleon, and cast them aside. Now in the fullness of time, and through the training in the school of hardest experience, the French people have reared and enjoy a permanent republic. England of the Mayflower and of James II., England of George III. and of Lord North, has enlarged suffrage and is to-day animated and governed by the democratic spirit. She has her throne, admirably occupied by one of the wisest of sovereigns and best of women, but it would not survive one dissolute and unworthy successor. She has her hereditary peers, but the House of Lords will be brushed aside the moment it resists the will of the people.

The time has arrived for both a closer union and greater distance between the Old World and the New.



CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW.

The former indiscriminate welcome to our prairies, and the present invitation to these palaces of art and industry, mark the passing period. Unwatched and unhealthy immigration can no longer be permitted to our shores. We must have a national quarantine against disease, pauperism and crime. We do not want candidates for our hospitals, our poor houses, or our jails. We cannot admit those who come to undermine our institutions and subvert our laws. But we will gladly throw wide our gates for, and receive with open arms, those who by intelligence and virtue, by thrift and loyalty, are worthy of receiving the equal advantages of the priceless gift of American citizenship. The spirit and object of this exhibition are peace and kinship.

Three millions of Germans, who are among the best citizens of the republic, send greeting, to the Fatherland their pride in its glorious history, its ripe literature, its traditions and associations. Irish, equal in number to those who still remain upon the Emerald Isle, who have illustrated their devotion to their adopted country on many a battle-field fighting for the Union and its perpetuity, have rather intensified than diminished their love for the land of the shamrock, and their sympathy with the aspirations of their brethren at home. The Italian, the Spaniard, and the Frenchman, the Norwegian, the Swede, and the Dane, the English, the Scotch, and the Welsh, are none the less loyal and devoted Americans because, in this congress of their kin, the tendrils of affection draw them closer to the hills and valleys, the legends and the loves associated with their youth.

Edmund Burke, speaking in the British Parliament with prophetic voice, said: "A great revolution has happened—a revolution made, not by chopping and changing of power in any of the existing States, but by the appearance of a new State, of a new species, in a new part of the globe. It has made as great a change in all the relations and balances and gravitations of power as the appearance of a new planet would in the system of the solar world." Thus was the humiliation of our successful revolt tempered to the motherland by pride in the state created by her children. If we claim heritage in Bacon, Shakespeare, and Milton, we also acknowledge that it was for liberties guaranteed Englishmen by sacred charters our fathers triumphantly fought. While wisely rejecting throne and caste and privilege and an Established Church in their new-born state, they adopted the substance of English liberty and the body of English law. Closer relations than with other lands, and a common language rendering easy interchanges of criticisms and epithet, sometimes irritate and offend, but the heart of republican America beats with responsive pulsations to the hopes and aspirations of the people of Great Britain.

The grandeur and beauty of this spectacle are the eloquent witnesses of peace and progress. The Parthenon and the cathedral exhausted the genius of the ancient and the skill of the mediæval architects in housing the statue or spirit of Deity. In their ruins or their antiquity they are mute protests against the merciless enmity of nations, which forced art to flee to the altar for protection. The United States welcomed the sister republics of the southern and northern continents, and the nations and people of Europe and Asia, of Africa and Australia, with the products of their lands, of their skill and of their industry to this city of yesterday, yet clothed with royal splendor as the Queen of the Great Lakes. The artists and architects of the country have been bidden to design and erect the buildings which shall fitly illustrate the height of our civilization and the breadth of our hospitality. The peace of the world permits and protects their efforts in utilizing their powers for man's temporal welfare. The result is this Park of Palaces. The originality and boldness of their conceptions, and the magnitude and harmony of their creations are the contributions of America to the oldest of the arts and the cordial bidding of America to the peoples of the earth to come and bring the fruitage of their age to the boundless opportunities of this unparalleled exhibition.

If interest in the affairs of this world are vouchsafed to those who have gone before, the spirit of Columbus hovers over us to-day. Only by celestial intelligence can it grasp the full significance of this spectacle and ceremonial.

From the first century to the fifteenth counts for little in the history of progress, but in the period between the fifteenth and twentieth is crowded the romance and reality of human development. Life has been prolonged, and its enjoyment intensified. The powers of the air and water, the resistless forces of the elements, which in the time of the discoverer were the visible terrors of the wrath of God, have been subdued to the service of man. Art and luxuries which could be possessed and enjoyed only by the rich and noble, the works of genius which were read and understood by the learned few, domestic comforts and surroundings beyond the reach of lord or bishop, now adorn and illumine the homes of our citizens. Serfs are sovereigns and the people are kings. The trophies and splendors of their reign are commonwealths, rich in every attribute of great States, and united in a republic whose power and prosperity, and liberty and enlightenment are the wonder and admiration of the world.

All hail, Columbus, discoverer, dreamer, hero, and apostle. We here, of every race and country, recognize the horizon which bounded his vision and the infinite scope of his genius. The voice of gratitude and praise for all the blessings which have been showered upon mankind by his adventure is limited to no language, but it is uttered in every tongue. Neither marble nor brass can fitly form his statue. Continents are his monuments, and unnumbered millions, past, present, and to come, who enjoy in their liberties and their happiness the fruits of this faith, will reverently guard and preserve, from century to century, his name and fame.

Plutocratic or Democratic?

The electoral contest of this year is between Plutocracy and Democracy. The Republican party, with its insistance upon a greater exercise of the Government's taxing power than any party ever before justified or attempted to defend, and with its demand for a Federal election law stronger in the assertion of Federal power than even the old Federalists dreamed of, has lost its character as an American political party. It has out-Federalized Federalism and out-Whigged Whiggery in its declaration that the property of the citizen and the rights of the States are alike subservient to the demands of the National Government. It has, accordingly, ceased to be truly representative of any large body of citizens having interests in common with those of their fellows, and has become the champion of classes vested with public privileges, whose interests lie in the direction of such a control of elections as will prevent any effective popular protest against their perpetuation. These classes are varied and distributed among a number of industries, but they are all protected under one general law and combined for the purpose of defeating any effort to repeal or amend it. They are all embraced in the term Plutocracy.

"These pretenses should no longer deceive."—Grover Cleveland, Sept. 26, 1892.
—Chicago Herald.

Against the plutocratic party thus for the first time created in American politics the Democratic party still occupies its old historic ground. It insists that the Government has no power to tax the citizen in excess of the needs of government economically administered. It protests against the principle asserted in the Republican national platform that the centralized government in Washington shall have control of the elections in the States. Its position is that the fiscal legislation of the last generation, of which the McKinley law is the present consummation, is destructive of the great and prosperous middle class upon which the preservation of free government must depend, and tends towards the creation of widely separated classes representing great wealth and great poverty. It meets the assaults of its opponents on every line of detail involved in the discussion of the tariff question, but points to the thousands of colossal fortunes created by Republican legislation and the present prevailing comparative depression and want of opportunity in the great middle classes of society as a broad generalization of argument overshadowing all questions of petty detail, and as an illustration of prevailing tendencies.

The Republican party as once organized and maintained for the assertion and defense of doctrines defining the ideas of great bodies of men without special interests to serve is not a party to this campaign. The Plutocratic party is masked behind the Republican name, but the disguise will be found a poor one if the results of the election of two years ago are not altogether misleading and deceptive. The Democratic party, at least, is fully aware of the tremendous importance of this struggle. The disappointments of great leaders or the ambitions of aspiring men have not been allowed to stand in the way of keen popular apprehension of what would be involved in the re-election of the man whose one term has carried his party away from Americanism to a Plutocracy asserting both the old feudal rights—to collect tithes and to govern in council. The unification of the party in New York and the defeat of the People's party in the South is proof of this.

There are abundant evidences that the situation is equally well understood in the Republican party. The men in middle life and middle rank in that party, who feel most heavily the hand of the tax-gatherer and most keenly the creation of a moneyed aristocracy which will overshadow themselves and their children, are not unmindful of either their political or domestic portents. There are cheering assurances that the first clearly defined conflict between plutocracy and Democracy in America will have a result worthy the history of our Anglo-Saxon race.—St. Louis Republic.

Cleveland or Harrison?

While one might hesitate to predict the result of the election in November, it can be said without hesitation that Cleveland or Harrison will be the next President of the United States.

There is a disposition in certain quarters, where the Farmers' Alliance is strong, to abandon the Democratic candidate and vote for Gen. Weaver. This is due largely to the prevailing discontent and to low prices for farm products. Notwithstanding the agitation for free trade, little relief has been obtained. In fact, the exactions of the robber barons have been increased.

Demagogues have used this dissatisfaction for their own purposes. What did the Democrats do, they say, when Mr. Cleveland was in office?

They cut down expenditures; they put through the House of Representatives a bill reducing taxes, and Mr. Cleveland vetoed the dependent pension bill.

It is to be remembered that the Democrats have not had since the war control of the law-making power of the Government. They had at one time the Senate and House; again, they had the President and the House, but did not have the Senate. They have not been able to pass a single bill since the war that was objectionable to the Republican party. All that they have been able to do has been in the House to check the extravagance of the Senate; in the executive department, to introduce economy and business methods.

The purposes of the Democratic party have been fully defined. They are written in the famous tariff message of President Cleveland; they are found in the message vetoing the dependent pension bill; they were foreshadowed in the Mills bill.

The Democratic party has moved forward step by step. Every bill for the reduction of taxes supported by the party has been a step in advance of all previous measures. The Democrats presented first the Morrison horizontal bill, which was defeated. Next they offered the second Morrison bill, a more thorough and logical measure, and that was defeated. Then they formulated the Mills bill, a still more advanced measure, justified by the conditions of the country, a bill which should, as a compromise measure, have been accepted by the Senate; it was rejected.

The next bill will be as far in advance of the Mills bill as the Mills bill was in advance of the Morrison horizontal bill.

These are the promises of the Democratic party, and the promises that they have made in every campaign have been fulfilled, as far as was in their power when in control of either house of Congress.

The recent Congress refused the expenditures demanded by the Republican officeholders and the Senate. They were not able to return to the Cleveland level simply because the Reed Congress had so enlarged the pension list, and had enacted bounty and subsidy laws to such an extent that it was not possible to force the Republicans economically to administer the government.

If the Democrats of the country will do their duty, if they will stand together, if they will refuse to divide their votes, they will not simply secure the election of Mr. Cleveland in November, but they will also obtain control of the United States Senate. If that be done, their professions may for the first time be put to the test.

The Republicans in the North well understand that a vote cast for any other candidate than Cleveland is a vote for Harrison. In a recent speech in Ohio Gov. Foraker said:

"There are a number of parties, and each has its candidate, but it may be assumed that, if they live, the next President of the United States will be either Harrison or Cleveland. If there were nothing more involved than a choice between these men, every Republican should stand by his own standard bearer. His record is much the better. Both he and Cleveland commenced political life before the war. They began, and have ever since continued, in opposition parties. They have all their lives represented and contended for conflicting and opposing ideas, principles and purposes."

Let our friends of the Farmers' Alliance, and men who are disposed to try a new deal by voting for Gen. Weaver, consider this declaration of Gov. Foraker's. It is as certain as anything in the future that the next President of the United States will be either Cleveland or Harrison. Failure to vote for Mr. Cleveland is at least a half vote for the election of Mr. Harrison.—Courier-Journal.

The Cost of Harrison.

The ordinary expenditures of the first three years of the Cleveland administration were $627,000,000. For the first three years of the Harrison administration the ordinary expenditures have been $901,000,000.

The three years of Harrison cost the people $274,000,000 more than the three years of Cleveland.

The average annual cost of the Cleveland administration was $209,000,000; of the Harrison administration over $300,000,000.

These figures are for ordinary expenditures exclusive of expenditures for sinking fund, for interest, for premiums and bond purchases and for the postal service.

Harrison costs the country as much for ordinary expenses in three years as Cleveland did in four.

The increase under Harrison is entirely due to the Republican policy of taxing earnings for the benefit of non-earners—a policy well illustrated in the case of the exorbitant direct bounty of over $10,000,000 a year paid to a few corporations in Louisiana and a few sap-boilers in Vermont. The Republican argument for giving these people public money is that they could not earn it; that they were the crippled veterans of the tariff system, and that having existed under it until they were utterly incapable of independent self-support they thereby became entitled to a pension direct from the Treasury. Every year, therefore, between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000 is taken direct from the pockets of people who have earned it and paid to these incapables on the ground of their incapacity.

There is no metaphor about this. The money is taken directly out of the treasury and put directly into their hands to do as they please with, and they are not required to render the least service to the Government in exchange for it.

The same policy of bleeding the earner for the nonearner is carried out in every direction—through direct subsidies to steamship corporations and in a general policy of extravagance intended to prevent the lessening of indirect subsidies accruing under the high tariff taxes. The Republican party cannot be economical in administration. Its theories involve the extravagant expenditure of other people's earnings, and it grows more extravagant as it grows more radical in the enforcement of its theories.

Worried by Ballot Reform.

Very many of the States of the Union have passed ballot-reform laws based upon the Australian system. The main benefits of the method are the freedom of the elector from extraneous interested control, the absolute secrecy of the ballot, and the perfect individuality assured each elector as alone in a private compartment he indicates upon an official ballot his desire as an elector.

Wherever Republicans have given their assent to this method of election they seem greatly to regret it. The Republican candidate for the Vice Presidency said in his journal only a few weeks ago words in derogation of the Australian system, which, applied to Maine, he regarded as harmful to the Republican cause. Wherever the Australian ballot idea is used there, it is found, are increased Democratic majorities. It is within the observation of all men who have been through many elections that employers have exercised coercion upon voters, their employes. The time has been when workingmen have been marched to the polls in squads, furnished at the booth with the tickets selected by their employers, and watched that they placed in the hands of the booth officer the ballot that was given them by the agent of their employer. All this has been done away with wherever the Australian idea has been adopted.

In Pennsylvania, where protected mill owners have been in the habit of voting their men according to the wishes of the employers, strong effort is now made to undo the legislation for the reformed method of voting. All sorts of representations are made that it is impossible to comply with the law, that paper and presses cannot be had in order to prepare the necessary official ballots, and some persons have gone so far in the Republican interests as to ask of the Executive that a special session of the Legislature shall be held even at this date with the idea of repealing that law. The men who made this demand upon Governor Pattison did not know with whom they were dealing. He advised them promptly as follows:

"There is no occasion for an extra session of the legislature. The Baker ballot law passed by a large majority in both branches of the legislature. It was enacted in obedience to a very decided public sentiment. The press, almost without exception, approved of it. If as earnest efforts were made to enforce it as there is a disposition to find fault with it there would be no trouble in its execution. Ballot reform in Pennsylvania has come to stay. Amendments may be found necessary in the future, but they will be in the line of present legislation."

The pending is the first presidential election where the balloting will have been very general under the Australian plan. Republicans foresee in such purity of election as the system grows the loss of their ascendency. They cannot follow the elector into the booth. He is there alone, unwatched, and can vote as his manhood and not as his employer dictates.—Chicago Times.

Benefits of the Unvoted Vote.

Mr. Whitelaw Reid is now publishing editorials on "The Dangers of Neglecting to Vote," from which an uninformed person might infer that an unvoted Republican vote is the greatest of all evils.

On the contrary, the one unvoted vote in every Republican ten is capable of the most beneficent results, for it is capable of defeating Harrison and Reid and the work of the office-holders' convention at Minneapolis.

No fair-minded man can deny that this will, probably, be the best thing that could happen to the Republican party. If Harrison and his radical faction get four years more in power they will wind the party up, and not leave enough of it to be worth administering, except through a return de bonis non. They are determined to keep it a civil-war party, and no civil-war party in this country can survive much longer. If the Republican party is to represent for the next five years what Harrison represents now, it will be obliterated as completely as the Whig party was when, in 1856, there was not enough of it left to be laughed at.

While we see no particular use of saving the Republican party from this complete extermination; while on the whole it would be much better for it to be exterminated, yet on the other hand we see still less use of such violent forcing of immediate settlement as is involved in Harrison's continued leadership of the party. Such majorities as the country gave against Harrison in 1890 are necessary as protests against Radicalism, but they are inconveniently large when considered in any other light than that of an expression of popular disapproval. An almost even balance between parties gives the best results for good government.

But many Republicans are so attached to their party as to be unable to reconcile themselves to the prospect of its extermination through a second term of Harrison, and these seem to be bent on saving it with their unvoted votes. To Mr. Reid now the unvoted Republican vote may seem a great evil, but in ten years or so, when he is more disinterested, he may be able to look back at the campaign of 1892 and think better of it.—St. Louis Republican.

The Issue Fixed.

Nothing that the Republican speakers say can change the main issue of the campaign.

That issue is the Republican record for the past four years.

No irrelevant clap-trap about State banks; no manipulation of the battered old "free-trade" bugaboo; no citation of English opinion, forged or otherwise; no rattling of the bogus American tin; no parade of cooked statistics can divert the people from the issue created by the candidacy of President Harrison for a second term and the appeal for a new Reed Congress.

The Republican record includes:
A squandered surplus of $100,000,000.
A worse than war tariff.
Increased taxes.
The multiplication of monopolies.
The menace of a force bill.
Inflation with 65-cent dollars.
State-stealing and seat-grabbing.
The protection of Republican rascals.
A carnival of spoils.
Renomination by office-holders.

As a fitting climax the record is crowned with a bold attempt to carry the election by bribery and fraud.

The importation of the professional election crook, David Martin, and the Hackett circular calling for the "secret and discreet" furnishing of names of Democrats "who can be induced to vote the Republican ticket this fall" can have no other meaning.

With the issue thus made up the result ought not to be doubtful if every Democrat and honest Independent voter does his duty.

Every incident of the Republican campaign renders it more imperative that the next President must be a Democrat.

DEATH COMES AT LAST.

END OF MRS. HARRISON'S STRUGGLE FOR LIFE.

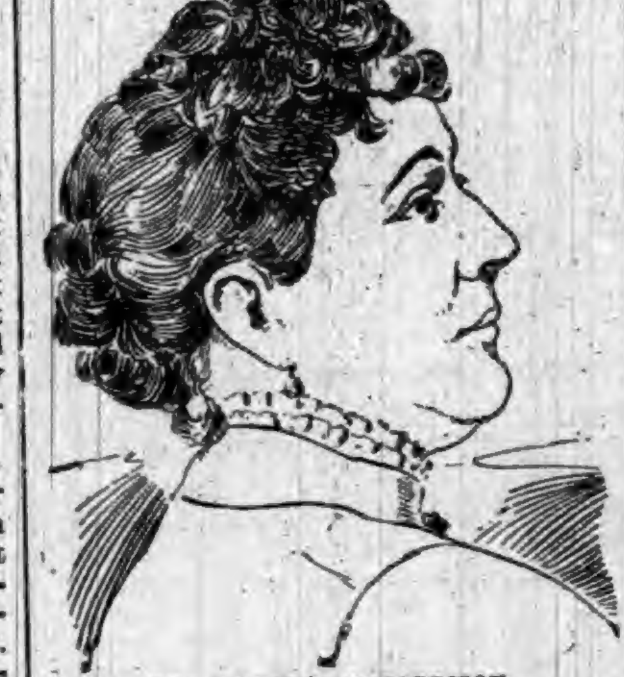
The Family at the Bedside When the Summons Came—Conscious to the Last, and Passed Peacefully Away—Her Home Life.

A Noble Woman Gone.

Mrs. Harrison is no more. At 1:40 a. m., Tuesday, came the end. For the second time in the history of the White House a President's wife has died within its walls. Mrs. Harrison met death with the patience and resignation of a devout Christian, and her last days were comparatively free from pain. It could hardly be said that the patient was unconscious during the evening hours, for she betrayed some signs of understanding the attempts made to relieve her last moments by partially opening her parched lips to receive the stimulating fluid applied to them from time to time. But not a drop could she swallow, and the power of speech had apparently left her frame forever. In addition the physician's experienced eye noted as the evening wore on an increase in the difficulty of breathing, which was regarded as an ominous sign. At last the end came, and surrounding the bedside of the loved one were all the members of the family in Washington. For a few moments the silent watchers were overwhelmed with grief. When they emerged from the room, the President retired to his own chamber, and was alone with his great bereavement.

Mrs. Harrison's Home Life.

Incidents innumerable are told of Mrs. Harrison's home life. Mrs. Harrison directed her own household after the most approved housewifely examples. Like the Empress of Germany, the granddaughter of Queen Victoria, she was reared and educated in the old-fashioned way.



MRS. PRESIDENT HARRISON.

The housekeeping in the White House was not a promotion to Mrs. Harrison in a practical sense, as she never before had a house with so few bed chambers in it as has the Executive Mansion. The Empress of Germany has the minutest details of her imperial housekeeping at her royal fingers' ends; so had Mrs. Harrison all the domestic affairs of the President's house within her knowing. She was the head of the housekeeping and she managed it with all the care and discretion that she ever exercised in her own house. Housemaids, housekeeper, and steward were all under Mrs. Harrison's supervising direction, whose first care was for the comfort of her husband.

Mrs. Harrison was a model hostess, with a long experience in entertaining, both in Indianapolis and in Washington, in both of which places her name is a synonym socially for all that is graceful and agreeable. When in Washington during the Senatorial terms of her husband she never assumed the cares of a house of her own, but her quiet receptions once or twice each week, held in her parlors, were frequented by the best people of the city.

Artistically she had what was almost a hobby for painting on china, in which she long indulged, and was very proficient. Delicate, fragile bits of china, plaques, and vases painted by her bear traces of an almost professional touch. This work, the result of an original taste, coupled with constant practice, is really charming.

In making her designs Mrs. Harrison was accustomed to gather buds and blossoms fresh from the flower beds, and make her studies directly from nature. Mrs. Harrison was also fond of artistic needlework and embroidery. As a needlewoman she marked with her monogram each piece of linen in the house at Indianapolis from bed-clothing to napkins.

Among the social graces for which Mrs. Harrison was known, and one fully tested in the White House, was her practice of seeing each visitor who called. She was never known to show irritation or annoyance, and it must be a flagrant case indeed when she refused to receive a caller.

In youth she was known as petite, and daguerreotypes show a slight, girlish figure, with a face so bewitching as to have almost the appearance of a fanciful ideal. In later years she grew stouter, but her features were still regular and retained much of the charm for which the owner was once noted, while there was always a mirthful turn to the corners of her mouth, which gave her face an inviting and pleasant expression. The passage of years destroyed forever the youthful outline of her figure and brought a little grey into the black hair, at one time very dark.

The greatest charm in Mrs. Harrison's disposition was her strong common sense, her evenness of temper, her willingness to oblige, and the kindly thought for everybody else which dominated every act. She cultivated the faculty of saying a happy thing of everybody, and repressed the strong inclination to say witty things which always came so easy to her, for fear she might unwittingly offend a sensitive person. Her high position did not change her in the slightest degree, unless it were to make her feel more than ever willing to give up her private inclinations to do that which was expected from her by the public.

The people who knew Mrs. Harrison when her husband was in the Senate could find no change in her when she came to the White House, save that the passage of years had silvered her soft brown hair. Mrs. Harrison was just the same—kind and thoughtful for everybody, great and small—and the friends of her early days in Washington were her friends to the last.

She was probably one of the most industrious mistresses the White House has ever had. Her own method of life was so simple that it gave her more time than ordinarily comes to persons in high places to devote to things she liked best. She was a constant reader of the best literature and devoted to her brush. She had been a diligent pupil for several years in the study of china painting, and her talent was often displayed in the gifts she made her friends at the holiday period.

In carrying out the hospitality of the White House she has never been excelled. She presided with easy dignity and grace upon all occasions, and omitted no detail that would add to the pleasure of those attending them. She carried out to the letter the written and unwritten laws of the house, and did as much more as it was possible to do within the limits of each season.

J. C. HENRY, Prop'r,

OUR CANDIDATES.

The Men We are Going to Elect November 8.

We always feel like saying, just before the people are called to vote for or against them, a few words about our local candidates, so the voters can become better acquainted with them.

M. F. FRANKS.

Our candidate for representative in the state legislature, is an intelligent and capable young farmer He has never sought an office, and did not seek this, but the people insisted on his acceptance. These conditions are conceded by all parties to be the best qualifications a man can have—the best reasons why he should be elected. Let the farmers and laboring men remember that a vote for Franks means an honest endeavor to sesuse honest laws, as well as a vote for Turpie, one of the very ablest men in the United States senate. While a vote for Camp means a vote for Millionaire Fairbanks, and Indiana the first time misrepresented in the United States senate by a man with more money than brains. And a vote for J. Y. W. McClellan means half a vote for Millioniare Fairbanks. Vote for Franks.

REUBEN SAWVEL.

The people all know our candidate for treasurer. He has served them faithfully for one term of two years, and no man can say anything against him. We have had many good treasurers, but none better. Encourage honest and faithful service, by re-electing him by an increased majority. And the people should remember that Mr. Sawvel has made no extra charges for extra work, and has kept the public money paid down close, so as not to lie dead on his hands or in banks. At the last settlement he paid out all but $85.

GEORGE C. RALSTON.

Candidate for sheriff, is a new man in politics, but an old resident in the county. No family is better known, or has a cleaner record. But he can ask for support on his own merits. He is a live, wideawake man, just such a man as is needed to fill this place. Active, intelligent and fearless, no man we know of combines so many elements that go to make a good sheriff. We are not afraid to have the people look him over and compare him with any man now seeking the place. Let him have a rousing majority.

SYLVESTER KUTZNER.

For assessor, here is a man who has had the experience of two seasons in this work, and whose ripe judgment and unswerving honesty and fidelity to duty, make him a most desirable man for the place. He, too, did not seek office, and in fact, did not want it, but the people called him, and would not be refused. There is no money in the office, but he should have the full vote, and more too. See that he is elected.

CAL E. VAN AUKEN

Much criticism has been bestowed on the surveyor's office, though much of it has been without cause One criticism is the tendency to give the place to men without experience. This cannot be urged against Mr. Van Auken. He has had abundant experience in all sorts of surveying, and as a civil engineer he ranks among the best. No man is too good an engineer when it comes to this difficult office, but we present to the people, a man who combines more of these needed qualities than often are found in a candidate for the place in any county. See that his vote is a safe one

LAFAYETTE D. MISER.

This gentleman has been coroner two years, and though the office is not a paying one, he has never failed to attend to its duties, even at the expense of his other work. for he is a carpenter and makes his living by the sweat of his brow. Many people now are demanding that workingmen should fill the offices. Here is now a chance to do this.

JOHN HOFFELDER.

He has served the people of this county one term, and with marked ability and the most unswerving honesty. If he has not pleased some, it is the fault only of his strict sense of duty. Such a man is too valuable to be laid aside. Our people begin, to realize the costly mistake they made in defeating an able, experienced and conscientious man like Mr. Patterson. We don't believe they will make another costly error. Hoffelder and Henderson, have stood shoulder to shoulder, to resist attacks on the treasury, and have saved the people tens of thousands of dollars, that but for them would have been voted away.

JAMES M HENDERSON,

For the southeast disrrict, is as good a man as lives within the limits of the county. He is serving his first term, and the good words we said for Mr. Hoffelder, apply fully to him. In fact, both should be treated in one article, for both have stood fearlessly together for the rights of people, and the saving of the people's money. The recent struggle in which they prevented the building of an expensive bridge where a cheaper one was fully as good—changing this one item of expense from $4,500 down to $1,100 is a case in point. But there are many others A new man makes double the mistakes of an experienced one. Stonebreaker, who is opposed to Hoffelder, knows nothing whatever of the duties of the office. Craun who is opposed to Henderson, is, if we take the word of those who know him, utterly incompetent. Let us make no more costly mistakes. Every voter owes it to DeKalb county and to himself to see that Hoffelder and Henderson are re-elected.

We shall speak of our own district ticket next week.

Money to Loan.

I am now prepared to loan money on the best terms to farmers who can give mortgage on land as security. Come and see me and be satisfied. Office over Farmers Bank. My regular office days are Saturdays.

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, post-office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY.......OCTOBER 27, 1892.

AARON WORTH, prohibition candidate for governor, will speak at the Opera House in Auburn, Nov. 2

WHEAT is less than 70 cents. Four years ago, it was over $1.00. Ask your farmer neighbor how he likes the McKinley bill.

CAPT. MYERS at Angola, on Saturday the 29th. Let our people go up and pay the Angola folks for the fine crowd they sent here last Thursday to hear Voorhees, over 100 of them.

GEN. SICKLES, whom republicans have been expecting to "flop" over to them, is still a democrat, and says he is for Cleveland. He has also been nominated for congress by the democrats in the tenth N. Y. district.

GEO. O. JONES, the leading New York people's party man declares for Harrison. It keeps getting plainer that the new party is a side show to help the republicans, just as it was used to elect McKinley in Ohio last year.

JUDGE JOHN P. REA, ex-grand commander of the G. A. R., for the whole United States, comes out for Cleveland and honest pensions. He say, "I have looked up those pension vetoes, and find every one based on sound reason, law and justice."

REID, candidate for vice-president, is shown by extracts from his own paper, the N. Y. Tribune, of various dates in 1890 to be opposed to the service pension bill, saying "call a halt," "Must not mortgage the earnings of sixty million to help half a million who don't need it etc,"

SENATOR TURPIE speaks at Butler Friday Nov. 4. There will be a big rally of all who oppose a tariff tax of 60 cents on a dollar. Mr. Turpie is one of the ablest men in the United States Senate, or in this country, and everyone should hear him. The meeting will be both afternoon and evening, as there will be other speakers.

REPUBLICAN papers have had sent them to publish a statement of appropriations made by the last legislature, and headed "A large Sum of Money." Now, as these items, and the total is as near as possible what is always appropriated for various state expenses, and as the republican members voted for it, almost as a unit, we cannot see what they have to complain of.

MRS. HARRISON, died at the White House, Tuesday morning at forty minutes after one o'clock. She had been gradually sinking, and for hours her death was looked for at any time. Mr Harrison and the other members of the family, had been constantly with her for twenty-four hours. They were married in 1853 and had always been a most affectionate couple. Mrs. Harrison was a woman of the noblest and most lovable qualities, and the whole nation will mourn for her, and give its best sympathies to her bereaved husband.

THE Waterloo Press is the last to claim that the "foreigner pays the tax." This would be surprising if it were not so silly, and silliness seems to suit a republican editor. Just imagine, the Englishman who sells us his pearl buttons, sending to us $3 in cash with each dollar's worth of goods. Read our article about "Tin," and see what Auburn people pay. Why did not the foreigner send over $3 with each box of that tin? Why did those DeKalb ladies, when at Detroit, go into Canada to buy dress patterns? Why did they not buy in Detroit, and have the foreigner send over the amount of duty?

Republicans and the Tax Law.

Every republican of prominence in the state favored the new tax law. They all voted for it in both houses of the legislature; their governor, Hovey, asked that the levy for state purposes, be raised from 12 to 25 cents; but a democratic legislature raised it only to 18 cents; all their speakers the few they had in 1890, clamored for the law; their newspapers all advocated a raise in the taxes, so we could reduce the state debt, and complained of democratic incompetence for failing to levy more taxes for that purpose. We quote once more, an article or two out of many that our home republican papers said that year, and we have the files here to show it. The Dispatch of Feb. 20, 1890, says among other things:

"The steady increase of the state debt during the past few years is due to the make-shift policy of the democrats, the principal feature of which has been a refusal to levy taxes adequate to the wants of the state. * * * Prior to 1877 the tax levy of the state was 15 cents on every $100 and that was none too much. It is less than the rate which prevails in most western states. * * * Yet in 1877 the democrats reduced the state levy from 15 to 12 cents, notwithstanding the obvious fact that the lower rate would not furnish adequate revenue for the increasing expenses of the state. * * * AN INCREASE OF THE TAX LEVY IS INDISPENSABLE, but it will not be done as long as the democrats control the legislature."

In the campaign of 1890 the COURIER quoted from the Columbus, Ind., "Republican" these words: "What this state wants is a republican legislature, and a slightly increased tax levy."

The Waterloo Press in commenting on this item from a republican paper said, in its issue of August 28, 1890, which now lies before us, these words;

"The republicans believe in paying debts and not increasing them. Now as the state debt is about $8,000,000, and the present levy will not keep up this interest and pay our running expenses, what are the chances of continuing the present rate of taxes?"

And in its issue of July 17, of the same year in speaking of the refusal of democrats to put the tax levy higher, it added:

"It is absolutely necessary that this policy be changed, and that immediately, if we would escape bankruptcy."

And now they are kicking because this very thing has been done,—by democrats.

We could quote much more like this if we had space. Now, they have turned squarely around, and go against the very things they advocated. They are now flooding the state with this stuff, and just before election, will have these false statements put into each voting precinct. Cut out this article and show them the truth.

They also continue to assert the falsehood we have often disproved, that the raise in taxes is lighter on railroads than on the people. The Dispatch's figures claim that the raise on the railroads in this county is about $6,000, while on all other property. it is $21,000. But that does not prove that the railroads have the smallest raise. The facts are, the people have more than that much the most property. If A has property assessed at $10,000 and B only $1,000, A pays ten times as much tax. Could we in this case say that A had too much to pay? And so on all through, and for the state increase. The people of the state have many times more property than the railroads, and must pay more increase of taxes. But we showed a week or two ago, by the Dispatch's own figures that the rate of increase in the railroad tax in DeKalb county was 18 per cent, but on other property, 15 per cent, They have never denied this, and cannot. This also holds good over the state. The truth is, a large part of the increase on the people comes by giving a proper assessment to valuable property in the towns, as we have shown, as to lots in Auburn, worth $3,000 to $4,000, that were assessed at $200 to $300 under the old law, now are very properly put ten times higher. If the republicans get the legislature, will they put this property back at the old figures? They will either do that, or leave it as it is. Will they reduce the railroad increase from 18 down to 15 per cent., the same as on the people? They will either do this or leave it as it is. Which do the voters prefer? If the tax law is really wrong, it can be changed. But we have shown beyond denial, that it favors the people, puts the railroads correspondingly higher, and puts valuable property up to nearer its proper level. Any change that disturbs this, works against the people just as the old law did.

THE HOOSIER TIDINGS, at Kendalville organ of the people's party, has suspended. The new party has dropped a good pile of money on their papers, and received no benefit.

REPUBLICAN bosses are again frying the fat out of the wealthy manufacturers to get campaign boodle. As in 1888 they are selling favorable laws for cash. How much longer will the people stand this.

These figures represent the number of bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, which were sold in the United States, from March '91 to March '92. Two million, two hundred and twenty-eight thousand, six hundred and seventy-two bottles sold in one year, and each and every bottle was sold on a positive guarantee that money would be refunded if satisfactory results did not follow its use. The secret of its success is plain. It never disappoints and can always be depended on as the very best remedy for coughs, cold, etc. Price 50c. and $1.00. At Robbins & McCord's drugstore. 6

In a little hamlet in Africa, 1,500 men were recently employed in destroying the crickets a passing army of locusts had left behind them.

Strength and Health.

If you are not feeling strong and healthy, try Electric Bitters. If "La-Grippe" has left you weak and weary, use Electric Bitters. This remedy acts directly on liver, stomach and kidneys, gently aiding those organs to perform their functions. If you are afflicted with sick headache, you will find speedy and permanent relief by taking Electric Bitters. One trial will convince you that this is the remedy you need. Large bottles only 50c., at Robbins & McCord's drug store. 6

In many places it is believed that the person who hears the whip-poor-will in the daytime will die before the end of year.

A Druggist Talks.

Will F. Crawford, druggist at Des Moines, Iowa, says it is remarkable the way Cubeb Cough Cure sells, that his customers speak of the highest terms of praise. One man in particular who has been troubled with Bronchitis for years, never found any relief until he uses the Cubeb Cough Cure. He says it stops it at once. He does not hesitate to recommend it for all throat and lung troubles.

Why cannot a woman become a successful lawyer? Because she's too fond of giving her opinions without pay.

Physicians Outdone.

My wife has been suffering with female trouble of the severest kind for over three years. I have paid twenty-five dollars during the last three months, and she had no relief. She had doctored continually with the best of physicians. I bought three bottles each of Dullam's Great German Female Uterine Tonic and Dullam's Great German blood, liver, stomach and kidney cure, and can say to day that she is entirely cured.

W. H. DROWLEY.

Sworn to before me on this 23d day of June, 1890, JOHN C. DULLAM.
Notary Public, Flint, Mich., Genesee Co. $1 a bottle. For sale by Casebeer & Matheny.

Waiter.—"Have a bit of spring chicken, sir?" Guest,—"Yes, please. And waiter, make it this spring, please."

A Severe Case.

Amos Clark, a prominent man of Clarinda, Iowa, says: Through the recommendation of J. P Burrows of our city, I gave your Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup a trial in a case of severe cough. After using it a short time my cough was cured, which fact gives me such great confidence in its merits that upon every occasion I recommend it to my neighbors.

Yours,
Amos Clark.

Mr. Picker caught him up and held him, and tried to stop the blood, while bullets were flying all about him. He sends a picture of the four robbers who were killed, taken as they lay in coffins, Bob and Grat. Dalton, Tom Evens and Texas Jack. Emmet Dalton also, who was seriously wounded, but is still alive. George says he don't want to go through such a fight again.

The funeral of Fred Davis, last Saturday, was one of the largest ever seen in Auburn. The orders to which he belonged turned out in full, especially the K. P. order, which numbered several hundred, including a large delegation from Butler, as well as Waterloo and Garrett. The uniformed K. of P's added greatly to the imposing procession. Then there were citizens of all classes in Auburn, and from Ft. Wayne, while Garrett turned out several hundred, for his friendly and social disposition had made him friends everywhere. The services were at 2 p. m. at the Presbyterian church, the sermon being by Mr. Healy, the pastor. The interment was in the Evergreen cemetery. Fred was about 33 years old, and bid fair for a long and happy life, and his sudden death has been a severe blow to his family as well as a sad one to the community.

J. R. Duncan is settled down as a citizen of Auburn. He and his good wife are "at home" in Mrs. Dills' new residence, on South Jackson street. Our people should make them right welcome, for they are desirable citizens. Their son George will also move here, both being leading men in the buggy box company.

The democratic meeting at Jackson Center Monday evening was a success. Quite a number from Auburn went with Mr. Barrett, and he made an able speech to those there assembled. The people's party, not knowing of our meeting, had appointed one there for the same evening, and several of them had gathered there. But on the arrival of the democratic speaker, nearly all went home.

The Auburn cadets came home all right from Chicago, where they had a good time and made a favorable impression, being complimented by the daily papers. They also managed to get samples of about all the medals on sale, and these made the boys look like veterans who had won all the medals ever given by grateful Uncle Sam. We did not get to see them, but have no doubt they did their part in the big march, as Auburn boys should.

Those who went to see and hear, the great dedication at Chicago last Friday found the crowd too big to estimate, too big to allow much hearing or seeing. It is estimated that half a million strangers were in the city. All these, and most of the citizens of Chicago saw the fireworks at one of the three parks in the evening. No one who heard it, will forget the grand chorus at the dedication, when 5,000 voices, with many bands and harps joined in singing the anthems, as well as "Star Spangled Banner," and "Hail Columbia." Possibly the world never listened to a grander chorus since "the morning stars sang together."

The Voorhees Meeting.

The meeting here last Thursday to hear Senator Voorhees, was the largest and best of the season. About 100 came down from Angola at 10 a. m., with bands and banners, proving that the democracy up there are wide awake in spite of the odds against them at home. They marched through our streets, their column increased by our own people. They had many mottoes, such as "Wheat under the McKinley bill, is 69 cents." (It was only 68, that day, the banner having been made the day before.) There was another that read, "This is not for YOU," a very clever pun on the name of the republican candidate for congress. Many fine pictures were also carried in the procession, and some enthusiastic Steuben ladies had bicycles, decorated with pictures of democratic candidates, and with small flags—not the little British flags that republicans distributed over the state and county, in 1888. The democratic houses of the town were decorated, with the COURIER office as usual leading. At noon Mr. Vorhees came up on the Jackson train and was met at the station by several hundred people, and escorted up town. At 2 p. m. the crowd gathered at the Opera House, filling every seat and the standing room. The speech was a masterly one, as his speeches always are, and proves that in spite of recent ill health he has lost but little of his power and eloquence. The success of this meeting contrasted well, with the gathering of 52 of the faithful republicans who listened to Owen's speech the day before.

Horse Killed by Cars.

Geo. Benninghoff had a narrow escape from death, at the Wabash crossing east of town last Thursday evening. He was driving a one horse rig going east, just after dark, and as he neared the crossing, he saw the east bound freight coming full speed, without whistling or ringing the bell. He tried to whip up the horse, but she seemed dazed, and stopped on the tracks in spite of all he could do. Seeing he would not get over, he jumped in time to save himself, but the horse and buggy were struck, demolishing the buggy, and cutting off the mare's leg. The train stopped and the conductor informed Mr. Benninghoff that the section men would kill the horse and bury her, and appraisers would be chosen to fix the damages. Mr. B came home with one of Baltz teams that came along just then, and later, took a B & O. train to St. Joe, so as to reach his home near there. A. J. Carmer, D. T. Smith and Samuel Miller were chosen appraisers and fixed the loss on the buggy at $20, and for the mare $65. This report is from Mr Benninghoff himself, and will set at rest several wild rumors that have been set afloat. It was lucky that Mr. B. himself escaped.

HOW TO VOTE.

It is easy to vote as the law now stands. But mistakes are also easy. At the Auburn May election nearly 50 votes were lost by errors; of these, 35 were caused by stamping the small square at the left of the first name on the ticket thinking that would be a straight vote. But it counted only for that one man. All the other candidates got no vote. To vote a straight democrat ticket stamp in the big square containing the rooster at the top of the ballot. If you want to vote a mixed ticket don't stamp in the big square, but stamp the little squares at the left of each name you wish to vote for on the two or more tickets. Fold each ballot separately, and so that the initials of the poll clerks will be outside, and all the printed names of the candidates are on the inside and not in sight. Blotters will probably be in every booth, and should be used to dry the ink mark made by the stamp, so it will not make a stain when folded. Stamp but once in any square, large or small, two stamps would spoil the ballot. If by any accident you mark a ballot wrong, or deface it, give it back and get a new one.

The entertainments given Friday afternoon and evening at the Opera House by the scholars at the high school, were very interesting and well patronized. Not only were the seats all filled but standing room also, and in the evening there was not even standing room. This speaks well for Waterloo.

Some of our people enjoy practical jokes on some other person, and will even sit up after most people are sleeping and put themselves to considerable trouble in order to practice this propensity on some unsuspecting individual considering themselves well paid if they have their laugh. An instance of this kind occurred a few nights ago, the unlucky object being a stranger, who recently came to reside amongst us.

Rev. Mr. Healy preached an interesting sermon Sunday afternoon on keeping the Sabbath. When he spoke of the Jewish Sabbath, and the Seventh Day Adventists, and Seventh Day Baptists, who observe the same day, more than one we knew of straightened up and opened their ears wider than usual, prepared to hear what he would say about it. As he continued to speak, it was soon shown the sermon was intended to prove that it is the duty of the people generally to insist in every way possible that Sunday is the Lord's day, and to bring a such pressure to bear on those having the World's Fair in charge as will compel its being closed on that day. There is on this subject as on most others, two sides, many persons thinking it well the fair should be opened on that day, and sermons preached by the best talent all over the world. Sacred music, Sunday schools held and exercises all the time suited to the day, arguing that vast numbers would come to the fair who otherwise would seek the saloons, theaters, beer gardens and similar places. The saloon keepers themselves are in favor of the World's Fair being closed on Sunday, since they believe that will cause their business to be largely increased over any other day of the week.

THE EXALTED OF EARTH WITNESS THE CEREMONIES.

Dignitaries of the Ruling Nations of the World Become the Guests of the Republic's Chief Citizens and Are Escorted to the Scene of the Day's Ceremonies with All the Pomp and Pride of Military Forms—Over One Hundred Thousand People Cheer the Eloquence of Depew and Watterson and Hear the Vast Chorus of Five Thousand Voices Attune the Melodies of the Dedicatory Ode—An Elaborate Display of Pyrotechnics.

CHICAGO special: The World's Columbian Exposition has been formally opened.

The series of celebrations consequent upon the dedicatory exercises was inaugurated in Chicago's streets Thursday morning, when the gorgeous civic pageant marched before delighted thousands. The command which put in motion the mighty column of nearly a hundred thousand opened an event that will go ringing down the ages as the most brilliant page in the history of a great and prosperous nation. No such multitude as surged through the streets has Chicago ever before seen. Political conventions with their crowds and clamor were left far behind, and the scene on the down-town thoroughfares as the great parade moved off will be long remembered alike by Chicagoans and by the visitors who thronged the city.

It was close to the noon hour when the vanguard of stalwart policemen spurred their restless horses and wheeled into line. General Miles and his brilliantly uniformed military aids, and the more brilliantly attired civilians of his staff, came into view, and presently the advance guard of that vast army of 100,000 men was in motion. Everywhere along the line of march the distinguished men as well as the organizations making the most striking displays were greeted with enthusiastic cheering. Though the sun had hid himself behind a bank of clouds, and the sky looked down with a lowering face upon the moving display of animation and colors, nothing could damp the ardor of the crowd, and nothing that was worthy escaped their notice. From the grand stand on the Adams street front of the Government Building, Vice President Levi P. Morton, the members of the Cabinet, the Supreme Court, and diplomates from all the nations of the earth witnessed the grand civic parade as it passed in review. In the streets there was a mob; it cannot be called by any other name.

This was essentially people's day in the series of ceremonies. Wednesday night's grand ball at the Auditorium was a notable event, but the participants were confined to the upper ten in official and social life, for Governors, legislators and diplomats; Thursday night's military ball was for the same classes. Friday's military parade was confined principally to the limits of the fair grounds, to which admission could be had only by card of invitation. But Thursday's show was wide open to whoever could get a point from which to see. The bootblack and roustabout, or the laborer, was as free as the millionaire or pet of society.

DEDICATORY EXERCISES.

Impressive Ceremonies in the Great Manufactures Building.

Friday was the great Columbian dedication day proper, and on this day the big programme for which the whole country has been preparing for months was given.

The day's exercises began with a salute of twenty-one guns on the Lake Front.

At 9:15 o'clock the dedicatory parade was started. Gen. Miles and his staff came down the boulevard at the head of a glittering company of United States troops. The even lines of yellow plumes rising and falling in unison, the steady trot of the horses, the quietness and precision of every movement, was a revelation to spectators unused to military pageants.

The staff of Gen. Miles was followed by the mounted band. Then came troop after troop of cavalry, presenting a solid line twelve deep, extending from curb to curb. Three troops of white cavalry, with tanned and bearded faces; a troop of Indian cavalry, copper-colored and expressionless, and a troop of colored cavalry, black and smiling—that is the way they came.

After the cavalry was another mounted band, and then appeared artillerymen, who rattled over the uneven cedar blocks about 12th street at a smart trot. The regular artillery were followed by a battery of the National Guard. The volunteer boys were not so smart as the regulars, but they looked very businesslike and full of powder.

The escort was not yet finished, for smoothly and silently came a troop mounted on wheels—the Toledo cadets. The people gave the sixty men a cheer as they passed, which seemed well deserved, for their soldierly appearance and the even manner in which they handled their iron steeds were very noticable.

The brilliant escort which had passed was none too brilliant for the array of power, wealth, and intellect which was now to follow, when the Governors of the country and the men who have directed the affairs of the Exposition rode and drove in public parade to the dedication of the World's Fair.

First in the line of carriages which followed the troops was the highest representative of the Government of the United States, Vice President Morton, and escort. In company with the Vice President were President Palmer of the National World's Fair Commission and ex-President Baker of the World's Fair.

Then followed the Governors of the different States and other notables, with their aids and attendants, the whole making a glittering and imposing spectacle that will be remembered as long as the dedication ceremonies shall hold a place in history. The parade marched down the gayly decorated boulevard to Washington Park, where the military review occurred.

Starting for the Buildings.

After this event was over the cavalry procession as an escort started from the Washington Park reviewing stand, marching up Palmer avenue and through Midway Plaisance to the entrance of the grounds. The route along the whole line was rich with decorations of every description, the colors of all nations being thrown to the breeze in great profusion, with the flags of America and Spain the most prominent.

At the junction of Cottage Grove avenue and the Plaisance a squad of police under Lieut. Powers was stationed; at the Woodlawn intersection was Lieut. Rehm with another squad of police, while between the forces of Powers and Rehm there was a space of about half a mile in which there were no police. Into this gap the crowd rushed without hinderance and soon became unmanageable. All was confusion and the crowd threatened to interfere considerably with the progress of the procession.

But everything was later put to rights by the appearance of the troops, which had been held in reserve at the grounds to welcome the parade. The coming of the troops soon restored order among the crowd. The people obeyed with great good humor when the soldiers, who had been formed in line down each side of the road, ordered them back. In a few minutes the whole stretch of road unprotected by the police was picketed by the troops. After the procession had passed the soldiers fell in behind and formed a rear-guard to the parade. When the military parade entered the grounds over the viaduct it made an almost entire circuit before dispersing at the end of the park. Then the dignitaries and invited guests began to enter the big Manufactures Building and the great procession was over.

Within the Manufactures Building.

The scene in the great hall, as viewed from the platform at 10 o'clock, was thrilling. It was a spectacle that in coming years will mark an epoch in the march of the nations of the earth. And when away on in the time that is to come American history shall be written, no man in the chill of calm thought will be able to paint with words the dedicatory scene. Does one who was not present gain any notion of the meaning of fifty acres of packed humanity? Does he get an impression of vastness when he knows that St. Peters at Rome might be put within the great structure and with room left? What does it mean to say that 100,000 persons may be comfortably seated and room left for 75,000 more?

The chief decorations in the great building were at the rear of the grand stand and arched over the broad, carpeted aisle through which the dignitaries sought their places on the platform. From the roof streamers of bunting of yellow and red and white drooped down from the iron girders to the sides of the great iron arches. There was a background of great flags with the stars and stripes drawn smoothly at points and tastefully draped in others, while in the center an eagle carved in stone formed the nucleus of a glorious standard of colors. On one side of this setting, hanging from away up on one of the iron arches, depended the banner of Spain. There was also displayed for the first time on a near-by arch the official banner of the World's Columbian Exposition.

Out upon the great, vast floor, under the arches and the depending flags, a forest of chairs had been placed, and when the crowd had come in and the people had gathered, a great, nervous, moving sea of humanity moaned with ebbing hum and buzz of talk and comment. The gallery up among the arches of iron and surrounding the entire building was filled and blackened with humanity.

Imagine 90,000 human faces in a bunch in the center of a great field about whom are standing nearly as many more persons. See the stand filled with the singers and distinguished guests and hear the preliminary blare of the brass instruments, which are being put through preliminary operation for the music which is to come. Diffuse over this entire scene the growing murmur, which at times mounts to a roar, and a faint idea of the scene may be pictured on the mental vision.

To one who has never seen the behemoth buildings in Jackson Park, it may be impossible to give an adequate idea of the colossal magnitude of the great spectacle. National conventions have been accepted as great assemblages, yet several national conventions could have been held in the lobbies without interference with the people in the main room.

This wonder of the engineering world does not seem a building. The dimensions are mountainous and not architectural. Standing against the rail of the inner balcony, sweeping the broad expanse of busy floor, the scene is a landscape and not an interior. The glint and sparkle of rich costumes and jeweled decorations are the sprinkled flowers nestling against the darker color of the uplift. When 100,000 people waved their handkerchiefs, the prospect was that of a thick cotton-field tossed by a high wind. In the exciting moments when enthusiasm took a violent turn, the demonstration was not that of individuals, but of the undulating whole. A man in the thick of this scene was as nothing, a black spot mixed and ground into the color of the picture.

When the multitude assembled the people came drifting in granular currents along the narrow avenues. Further along they closed upon each other in the steady push forward until it was difficult to tell one speck from another. Then the natural compression of a jostling crowd did the rest and they were molded into that mighty solid block, filling to the outer limits the floor of the largest building on earth.

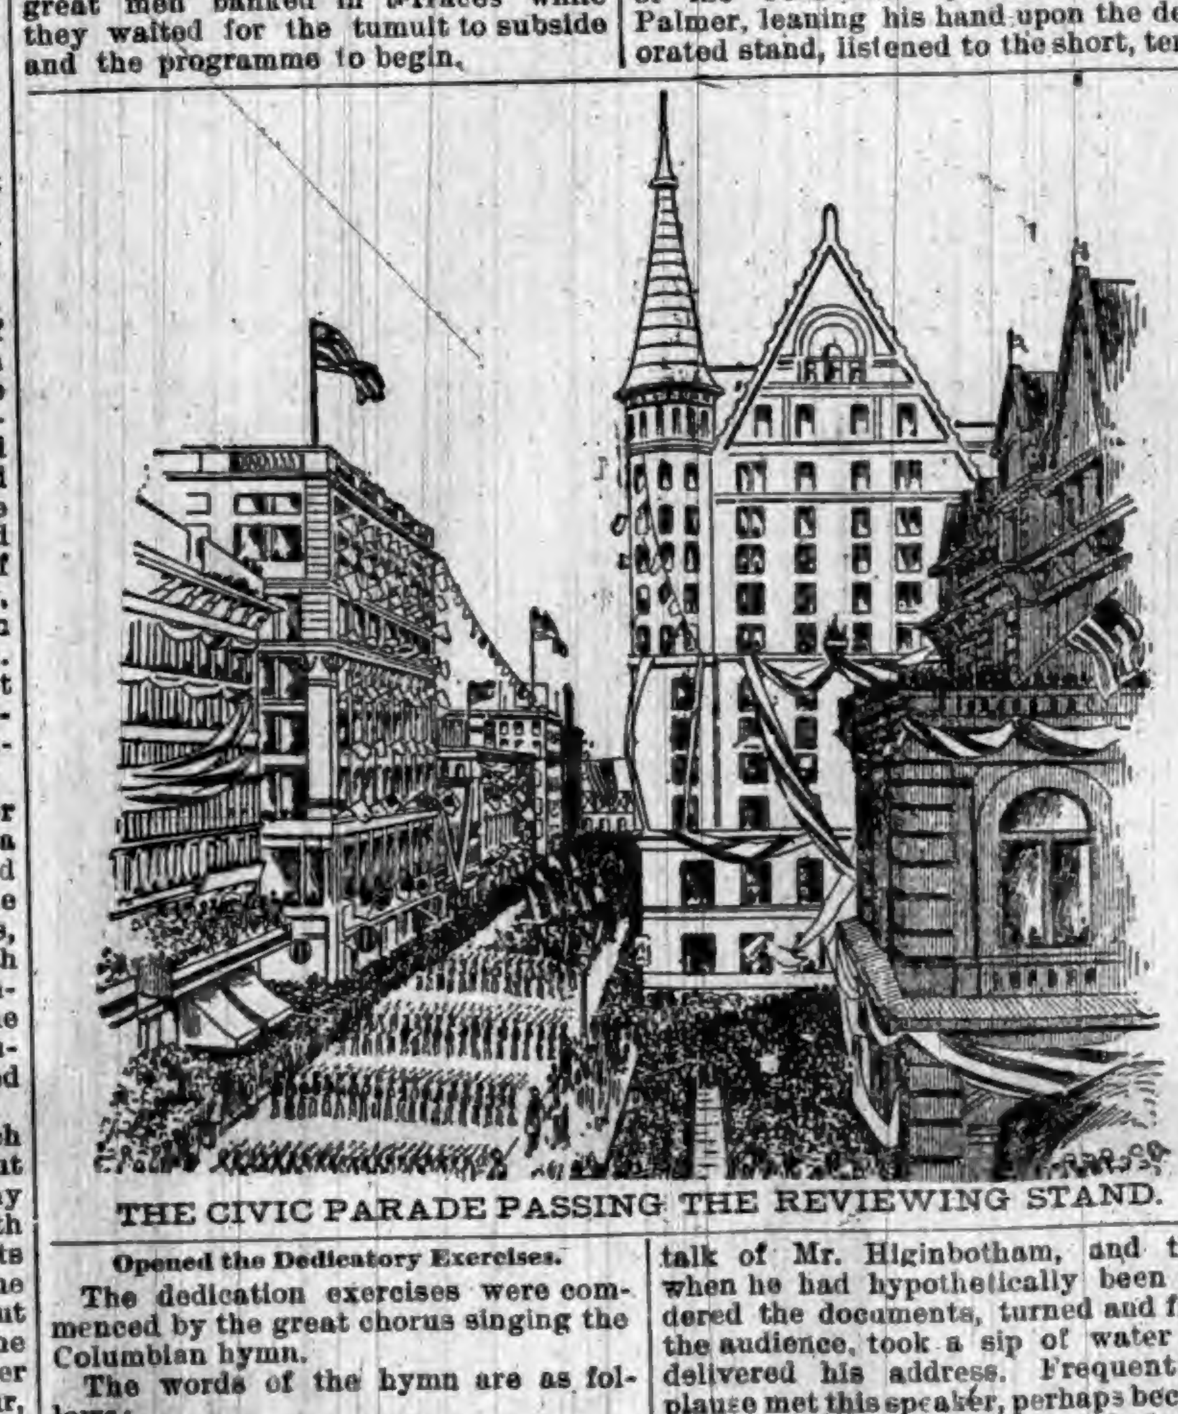
Arrival of the Pageant.

It was just 1:45 p. m. when the impatient crowd caught sight of a glittering uniform at the back of the broad stairway leading to the speakers' stand. Milward Adams, manager of the seating arrangements, followed the guard in uniform, who had cleared the way, and proceeded down the stairway before Director General Davis, master of ceremonies. Then came Vice President Morton, Chauncey M. Depew, President Higinbotham, Mayor Washburne, Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishop Ireland, Bishop Fowler, and Dr. McCook.

By the time the cheering and waving of handkerchiefs had ended the speakers' stand and seats behind were embanked with the most notable gathering of dignitaries and high officials ever seen in this country outside the national capital. Chief of these, of course, was Vice President Morton, who in his capacity as representative of the President and of the Government had the seat of honor, directly in the front of the center. Next to him on his right were Bishop Fowler and Dr. McCook, while Director General Davis, master of ceremonies, was on his left. In a semicircular row behind the Vice President were Mrs. Sarah Cowell LeMoyne, who was selected to read a portion of Miss Monroe's dedication ode; Gen. Goshorn, who was Director General of the Centennial Exposition; P. A. B. Widener, chairman of the Committee on Ceremonies of the National Commission; Mrs. Gillespie, who was President of the Woman's Board of the Centennial Exposition, and is the granddaughter of Benjamin Franklin; Mrs. Potter Palmer, President of the Board of Lady Managers, and Henry Watterson, the dedication orator.

Across the aisle in a corresponding semi-circle were Mayor Washburne, Miss Monroe, who wrote the ode of the day; Chauncey Depew and Cardinal Gibbons. Director of Works Burnham had a place next to Mrs. LeMoyne, but was too busy to maintain it for any length of time.

It was a pleasant sight watching the great men banked in terraces while they waited for the tumult to subside and the programme to begin.



THE CIVIC PARADE PASSING THE REVIEWING STAND.

Opened the Dedicatory Exercises.

The dedication exercises were commenced by the great chorus singing the Columbian hymn.

The words of the hymn are as follows:

All hail and welcome, nations of the earth!
  Columbia's greeting comes from every State;
Proclaim to all mankind the world's new birth
  Of freedom, age on age shall consecrate.

Let war and enmity for ever cease;
  Let glorious art and commerce banish wrong,
The universal brotherhood of peace
  Shall be Columbia's inspiring song.

Then came the invocation of Bishop Charles H. Fowler of California. It was the first test of a speaker's voice before the multitude, and demonstrated instantly the futility of any attempt to reach more than a small section of the great multitude. Ignorant of the religious nature of the address, the throng murmured and rustled until the swelling wave overwhelmed the speaker's voice and sent his words adrift on a sea of sounds.

The invocation over, Director General Davis adjusted his eye-glasses, tossed back the gray locks on his forehead and advanced to the stand, manuscript in hand. His trumpet-like voice, his well-known features and the commanding office he represented commanded the tumult about him and sent a ripple of silence far into the crowd. His address was a brief recital of national triumphs, closing with a concise statement of the purpose for which the exposition had been inaugurated. The simplicity of the words and the exalted thought they conveyed found a quick response in his hearers, bringing interruptions of applause and a volley of vocal approval at the close.

Mayor Washburne was then introduced to deliver an address of welcome and tender the freedom of the city. His tones, while lacking in resonance, were enunciated so clearly and with such suprising strength that his thought won the ear of the guests of the day to whom he addressed himself. Citizens of Chicago, too, responded enthusiastically when he declared the city's greatness and wealth of promise.

Following the Mayor came readings by Mrs. Sarah Cowell Le Moyne, of New York, from Miss Monroe's dedication ode. The reading comprised only a fragment of the poem, alternating with verses sung by the chorus from music composed by G. W. Chadwick, of Boston.

As Mrs. LeMoyne finished reading Director General Davis presented her with a wreath on behalf of the women of Chicago. This was a simple affair of laurel leaves bound with yellow and terra cotta ribbon. The cheers that followed this act brought Miss Harriet Monroe, the author, to her feet, and she also was presented with a like memento, which she acknowledged by a graceful bow and smile.

Director of Works Burnham formally presented the designers, painters, and sculptors of the Exposition with commemorative medals. Mr. Burnham's voice is not calculated to reach the galleries, and he made no attempt in that direction. As he took his seat he was met by the usual cheer, taken up in the galleries and echoed by the individuals hanging from the girders well up to the dome.

Mrs. Potter Palmer's address, "Work of the Board of Lady Managers" was enthusiastically received. She was introduced by Director General Davis and received with a standing salute, in which the dignitaries joined. The President of the Board of Lady Managers acknowledged this reception by a modest bow and proceeded at once with her report, looking down upon the waving of handkerchiefs and smiling, expectant faces.

H. N. Higinbotham, President of the Chicago Directory, made the presentation of the buildings of the Columbian Exposition to President T. W. Palmer of the Columbian Commission. Mr. Palmer, leaning his hand upon the decorated stand, listened to the short, terse talk of Mr. Higinbotham, and then, when he had hypothetically been tendered the documents, turned and faced the audience, took a sip of water and delivered his address. Frequent applause met this speaker, perhaps because his trained voice penetrated farther across the floor space. A short history of the work in bringing the sands and quagmires of Jackson Park to the solid and massive buildings and beautiful gardens was reviewed, and in it the story of how the commission had reached to the uttermost parts of the earth was told. The General was greatly applauded for his eloquence.

Dedicated the Grounds to Humanity.

When President Palmer turned to formally make the presentation, which he did to the President of the United States, Vice President Morton arose. At a signal from Col. Davis the audience stood as one, amid prolonged cheers. Vice President Morton, representing President Harrison, stood half facing the audience and speaker, and was asked to dedicate the ground to humanity.

Accepting the trust on behalf of the President of the United States, Vice President Morton read his speech with an evident appreciation of the greatness of the occasion, pausing in effective periods and emphasizing the national sanction of the Exposition. As he turned to take his chair at the conclusion, the Diplomatic Corps rose and stood until he was seated. That was the signal for more enthusiastic cheering, which continued until the majestic "Hallelujah Chorus" silenced it.

Watterson Delivers the Oration.

Then came the two greatest features of a great programme—the orations by Henry Watterson and Chauncey M. Depew. Mr. Watterson abandoned his manuscript when Director General Davis announced his name, and walking to the front of the stand took his place before a bewildering tumult of applause and waving hats and handkerchiefs from the throng that had risen to greet him. Without hesitation, except when interrupted by applause, the speaker plunged into his subject. His earnestness, the rich tones of his voice, the commanding personality of the man impressed even those who could not catch his words. Rapidly he reviewed the "Columbian epic," pursuing on to scan the progress of American civilization, closing with an invocation of the greatest solemnity. As he uttered the sentences "God bless the children and the mothers! God bless our country's flag!" a rift in the clouded sky sent a flash of sunlight through the curved roof that centered on the rugged figure of the orator, as though a benediction had been vouchsafed in answer to his plea. The crowd caught the suggestion and became as still as waiting petitioners before the heavenly throne—mute witnesses to the orator's power.

Chauncey M. Depew's Address.

When Mr. Watterson reached the climax of his peroration and stepped toward his seat, there was an instant's hush, followed by deafening cheers that broke out again when Chaucey Depew was announced. Mr. Depew's style was in striking contrast to the Kentucky editor's, but his achievement was parallel. Reading his speech, he was seemingly oblivious to the printed words. In moments of excitement he waved the manuscript in emphasis, never losing a word or abating for an instant his perfect command of the striking phrases. His voice, forced to the volume of a great organ, rolled out over the crowd and held it as with a chord of steel. Occasionally some absorbed listener, wrought by the stirring sentiment, spoke his approval and started ejaculations of assent, but the orator never wavered.

In places the theme changed from Homeric solemnity to a lighter vein, and moved the hearers to laughter, but it was only to relieve the tension for an instant—light touch in a picture of titanic lines.

When Mr. Depew had concluded, there was no question as to his triumph. He had reached the hearts of his listeners and they responded with reverberating acclaim, a tribute such as even so great an orator could but feel deeply.

By this time approaching night had turned the great hall into a cavern of eerie shadows. Arc lights suspended in clusters warned the tired people of the close of day. Some departed, filtering out in long pedestrian lines, while those who remained crowded closer to the front to hear the beautiful closing prayer by Cardinal Gibbons. Then came the chorus, "In Praise of God," the benediction by Rev. H. C. McCook of Philadelphia, and, at 6 o'clock the farewell words of Director General Davis, announcing the formal close of the exercises.

As the director general finished his speech a battery on the shore announced the final completion of Chicago's trust—the erection and dedication of the great buildings that are to hold the World's Columbian Exposition of 1890. The great Fair had been formally opened.

FIREWORKS DISPLAY.

Elaborate Programme in Washington, Lincoln, and Garfield Parks.

As became the dignity of the occasion, the fireworks display Friday night was a record breaker. It was probably the finest pyrotechnic display the world has ever witnessed.

Properly speaking there were three displays, the exhibition having been arranged in that manner to avoid the concentration of great masses of people at one point. At each place the fireworks were exactly alike. Twenty-five thousand dollars' worth of rockets and fire-pictures glowed and sizzled at Washington, Lincoln and Garfield parks. The programme in each park was the same and included about everything that could go up or go off, from the well-known sky-rockets—which on this occasion soared in flocks of 5,000—to huge bombs, weighing 110 pounds, which were thrown 800 feet into the air and then exploded gorgeously. There were set-pieces 40 feet high and 60 feet in length, which, when touched off showed such devices as the sailing of Columbus in fire. A huge fiery balloon was another design.

FIGURES WILL NOT LIE.

THE SAME CANNOT BE SAID OF PECK.

What a Diligent Investigation Among Workingmen Has Disclosed—MacVeagh's Farewell—Wages in Building Trades a Problem to Protectionists—A Weapon for Labor.

Peck's Report Was False.

The American Industries has analyzed Peck's report in the best possible way. It has interviewed the wage-earners and their employers themselves, and from them has discovered that the story of increased wages as a consequence of the McKinley act has not reached the workingman in the shape of dollars. The result of this examination not only shows that Peck's report distorts and misrepresents the facts but that wages were actually reduced between 1890 and 1891, as illustrated by the following specimen statements from three out of the list of industries investigated:

CARPETING.

Under this head Mr. Peck shows 1,431 individual increases and 77 individual decreases. He produces returns of wages in a dozen departments, while in E. S. Higgins & Co.'s factory, foot of West Forty-third street, New York City, the second largest in the country, employing 2,300 hands, there are about 240 divisions. The wages of this factory practically rule those of the entire country. There was no change in prices during the years 1890 and 1891, but we herewith append the list paid in this factory during 1888 and the present year:

BRUSSELS DEPARTMENT.

	—1888.	1892.—
	Average per day.
Loom weavers	$1.51	$1.85
Section hands	2.47	2.25
Pickers	1.24	1.10
Color hands	6.25	2.00
Winders	1.57	1.40
Cutters	1.25	1.12½
INGRAIN DEPARTMENT.
Weavers	$1.40	$1.30
Section hands	2.47	2.25
Pickers	1.16	1.05
Loom fixers	2.75	2.50
TAPESTRY DEPATMENT.
Weavers	$1.60	$1.28
Pickers	1.60	1.35
Section hands	2.47	2.25
Beam hands	2.25	2.00
Fixers	2.75	2.50

These were reduced twice since 1888, the last time about two months ago. Then follow eight more tables showing the same general decrease in other departments:

PIECE WORKERS.

Spinner (78 frames), average dead spinning	$1.62½	$1.00
Spinners, live spinning	1.59	1.00

The above firm caused its employes to parade in the Republican ranks during the Presidential campaign of 1888. Republican literature was circulated freely among the operatives and intimations made to the workers that if the Republican ticket was unsuccessful it was probable the factory would be closed or that wages would be reduced. The following week after the election in 1888 the firm posted a notice of reduction of 10 per cent. Those prices have continued until this year, when several departments were reduced as well as increasing the amount of work upon individuals for the same pay.

There is at present a similar rumor of a shut-down fearful of Democratic success or to intimidate the hands to vote the Republican ticket.

COTTON GOODS.

The Brighton Cotton Mills, foot of West Twenty-third street, employs about one hundred hands, and is the largest in this district. The scale of wages as given by the employes is:

	1890.	1891.
Weavers, two looms	$9 to $10 per week	Same
Spinners	20c. per 100 lbs. a'vg $6 per week	Same
Bleachers' foreman	$25 per week	Same
Assistant foreman	$13 per week	Same
Bleachers	$8 per week	Same
Winders	35c. per 100 lb. Two months ago reduced to 24c. per 100 lbs.	Same
Single loom weavers' average	$5.50 per week	Same

The employees declare there has been no change in the scale of wages for several years, with the exception of the winders, and they have been reduced.

SILK AND SILK GOODS.

Two hundred and sixty-two increases in wages and thirty-nine decreases are the figures given by Mr. Peck

J. N. Stearns & Co., No. 213 East Forty-second street, is the largest silk dress goods manufactory in the State, employing over 2,000 hands. When the McKinley bill was before Congress the firm circulated a petition among the employes for signature. It was presented to Congress praying for an increase of duty on all silk goods in the name of protection to American silk workers. Three months after the bill became law the wages of the weavers, twisters and spinners were reduced.

Weavers paid according to width of goods and number of ends in warp and number of picks to inch in all goods.

	1890.	1891.
Average per week	$7.00	$6.25

The employes state that this company is employing cheap foreign labor, such as Armenians and Polish Jews, in the weaving department, and so reducing wages. (Six hundred and eighty weavers in this department.)

	1890.	1891.
Weavers' average	$11.00	$9.00

In 1890 they had two girl helpers at $5.50 per week.

In 1891 they had only one helper at $4.50 per week.

	1890.	1891.
Beamers, average per week	$9.00	$6.75.

Now only work three-quarters time.

	1890.	1891.
Spinners, per week	$7.00	$6.00
Machinists, per day	2.50	2.50

The employes of the Liberty Silk Mills, 57th street, 10th and 11th avenues, give the following prices:

	1890.	1891.
Finishers, piecework, per yard	5c.	3c.
Loom fixers, per day	$2.50	$2.50
Foreman twister, per week	19.00	16.00
Twisters, per week	18.00	15.00
Weavers, plaid goods, per yard	14c.	12c.
Weavers, raw silk, per yard	6c.	5c.

Average per week now $8.

Warpers, on Oct. 3, 1831, were reduced 8 per cent, over 1890's wages on raw silk, and on other colors 5 per cent. Average per week, $11.

Labor's Best Weapon.

The more labor fights with its now useless weapon, the strike, the more powerless it becomes. Each unsuccessful strike but cripples labor, and as wealth amasses in the hands of the few, it leaves labor at its mercy.

There is surely something wrong in our industrial system that makes it possible for some men who, producing nothing, live a life of ease and comfort, surrounded by the wealth brought forth by the hand of labor, which has been transferred by the unjust laws of distribution into the lap of non-producers, leaving the producer in return for his labor, naught but a niggardly subsistence, dooming him to the life of severest servitude to sip the bitter gall of self-denial, poverty and want.

Since labor can no longer secure an advance in wages by strike or any other method that it tried, what remains? Politically labor is not weak. It represents in itself an everlasting majority of the voting stock in our industrial affairs. Then why in the name of all that is sensible does it not use this strength for its own good? The opportunity for labor is at hand and no senseless partisanship should stand in the way. In the present, and yet growing worse situation, it should make its political a bread-and-butter affair and take its political protection in its own hands.

The failure of strikes has heaped upon labor more misery, more injustice and more tyranny. Strength has been lost by labor and gained by monopoly. You can't meet them on this battlefield, but you can on the political arena. Our tariff laws, by shutting out competition for protected gentlemen in all things except on labor, have built up monopolies and strengthened the hands of the oppressors of labor. An increase in the price of living is equivalent to a reduction in wages. To work six days for the result of four days' labor is not your prosperity. Decide this question yourself. Is it more work or more results of work that best promote the comfort of your homes? If a reduction in the cost of living, secured by a reduction in the tariff duties, is equivalent to an advance in wages by strikes, why not secure this equivalent by striking with the ballot the death-blow to this so-called protective tariff? "Protection is a fraud." Knocking the interest of these protected millionaires out of the tariff it falls to pieces, and no longer controlled by such corrupting influences will unfurl the banner of freedom.—St. Louis Courier.

What About Tin Plates?

People generally wish to know the simple facts, so that they may form an intelligent opinion about the operation of the duty, which was increased by the McKinley bill of 1890 from one cent a pound to 2 2-10 cents a pound.

Question. What are tin-plates?

A. Light sheets of steel thinly coated with tin. About a fifth of them are coated with a mixture of tin and lead for roofing purposes, and are called ternes.

Q. What is our average yearly consumption of tin-plates?

A. According to Mr. Dalzell, Republican Congressman from Pennsylvania, 678,000,000 pounds. (Congressional Record, p. 5947.)

Q. How much did the tax on the American people amount to on that quantity at the old duty of one cent?

A. $6,780,000. (Figure it yourself.)

Q. How much would it amount to at the new duty of 2 2-10 cents?

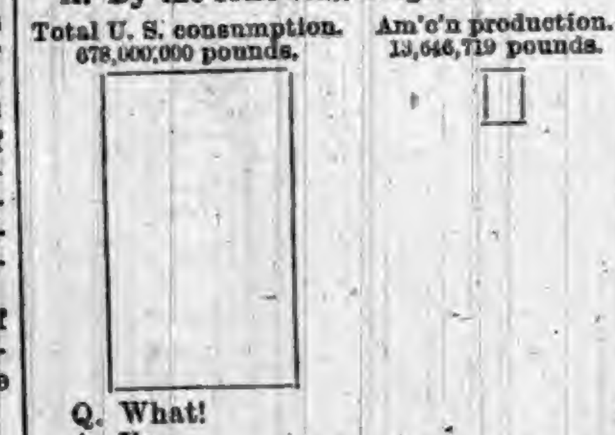
A. $14,916,000. (Figure it yourself.)

Q. How many pounds do American manufacturers claim, in their sworn returns, that they made in the year ending June 30, 1892?

A. 13,646,719 pounds, 2 per cent. of our consumption, two-thirds being ternes, and a large part imported steel sheets coated here. (Report of Ira Ayres, Special Agent Treasury Department, Aug. 15, 1892.)

Q. How can we show what proportion of our total consumption the American makers claim that they made during the year following the nine months that had been given them for preparation?

A. By the following diagram:



Total U. S. consumption. 678,000,000 pounds.
Am'c'n production. 13,646,719 pounds.

Q. What!

A. Yes.

Q. What is the greatest use for tin-plates?

A. For cans. Such tin-plates are generally known as "cokes." The tin coating weighs less than three pounds, out of a total of 108 pounds to the box.

Q. When did the McKinley bill take effect upon the duty?

A. July 1, 1891.

Q. When did the McKinley bill take effect upon the price?

A. About a year earlier, when it became evident that it would pass. Comparisons based on prices during the year previous to July 1, 1891, are, therefore, absolutely unreliable and misleading.

Q. What was the price of standard cokes in New York, May 20, 1890?

A. $4.45 a box. (American Metal Market, May 21.)

Q. What is the price of the same at present, August 20, 1892?

A. $5.37½ a box, a rise of 92½ cents. (American Metal Market, August 20.)

Q. What was the price in Liverpool in May, 1890, and what in August, 1892?

A. In May, 1890, 13s a box; in August, 1892, 12s a box, a fall of 1s, or about 24½ cents. (Market Reports.)

Q. How could that reduction be made?

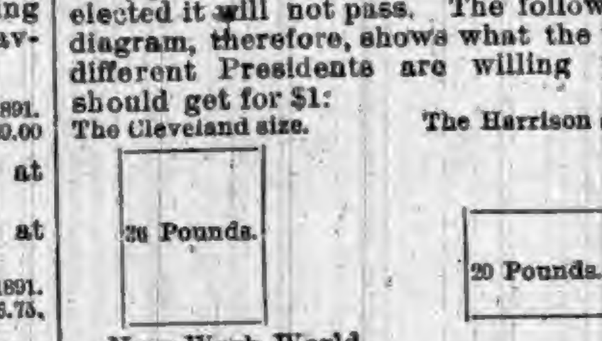
A. Because the steel of which they are made has declined about that much in price.

A. That is, the goods should be 24½ cents lower here, and they are 92½ cents higher. How much, then, has the McKinley bill increased the price?

A. 24½+92½=$1,17 a box.

Q. How much tin-plate will $1 buy?

A. That depends entirely upon which President is elected. If President Cleveland, then Congressman Bunting's bill restoring the old rate of 1 per cent. and removing it entirely in two years will pass. If President Harrison be elected it will not pass. The following diagram, therefore, shows what the two different Presidents are willing you should get for $1:



—New Work World.

MacVeagh's Good-by to the G. O. P.

Wayne MacVeagh was a good enough Republican to be Attorney General in President Garfield's Cabinet. He is too good a citizen to give further support to a party which no longer has any other mission than to perpetuate and exaggerate a policy which makes the government an instrument and agent of private greed.

Mr. MacVeagh makes it plain that he is in favor of the complete emancipation of the masses from slavery to the classes and the complete retirement of government from the office of overseer and driver of the masses for the classes when he says: "In deciding for what purposes the masses of the people may be properly taxed it must not be forgotten that taxes have a wonderful capacity for filtering through all intervening obstacles till they reach the bowed back of toil and resting there, and therefore the giving of bounties under any form of taxation is mainly the giving away of the wages of labor." Mr MacVeagh evidently holds in contempt the false pretense of his late party associates that the system of bountying by tariff is for the benefit of labor.

Regarding the false pretense that the farmer is benefited either directly or by the creation of a home market under the system of "protection," Mr. MacVeagh has this to say: "Of course the farmers, paying more for what they buy, and getting less for what they sell, grow poorer day by day; and excellent farms in some of the most fertile sections of this most highly protected State [Pennsylvania] will hardly bring the cost of the buildings upon them."

Mr. MacVeagh can hardly be in favor of leaving the faintest trace of a system which, as he shows, not only works such gross injustice but both "invites and requires the corrupt use of money both at the polls and in Congress," and which exerts a most malign influence over public morals and public policy in many ways. He cannot want to retain any part of the system of which he says "it is of its very essence that 'fat' should be 'fried' out of its beneficiaries." Mr. MacVeagh is a valuable recruit, because he is a recruit who is radically right.—Chicago Herald.

Centenary Glass Infant.

The average protection on glass is nearly 100 per cent. Hence, with the cheapest fuel in the world and the best facilities for manufacture, it would certainly seem reasonable to suppose that the glass infant, already well developed in Hamilton's time, should, after 100 years of constant care, nourished by the most liberal "protective" duties, be full grown, strong and independent. If there be any virtue in McKinleyism we should now be making all of our own glass at lower than European prices, and exporting it to all the world. Instead, what have we to show for the hundreds of millions of dollars that this infant has cost us? The sad spectacle of a centenarian infant still nursing at the bottle a sickly but quarrelsome child, always crying for more pap. One that is now costing us about $15,000,000 a year and is a bigger expense than ever, with no prospect that it will eventually be able to pay its own way, to say nothing of attempting to pay back any part of the expense of raising it. In spite of the fact that our glass costs us about double what it would cost in Europe, we still import $12,000,000 worth a year—one-third of our supply—and the quantity imported is increasing. The industry is bound hand and foot by numerous trusts and labor organizations which limit production, keep prices up to the tariff level, and prevent any but a select few from sharing the "protective" spoils of this industry. But even the glass-workers are beginning to realize that the infant is becoming a glutton and is taking more protection food than is good for it, as is evident from the following expert testimony on the evils of excessive "protection," from the National Glass Budget of Sept. 17, 1892, official organ of the National Skilled Plate Glass Workers' Union of America, and representative four other glass and labor organizations:

"When natural gas came as a pure windfall, did it do any permanent good? Did it, as it should have done, give us the greatest markets of the world, as it might easily have done, against Germany and Belgium with coal at $4 per ton and England at $3, while ocean freights were only $2 per ton? No: it did not even give to Mexico or Canada or the South American republics our natural markets. It was like a prize won in a lottery. It turned ten men into gamblers where it found one able to use it intelligently. As long as it lasted it stopped all furnace improvement, even made it retrograde. Glass factories now go about like traveling circuses. Glass manufacturers live in hotels with their grips already packed to move on. Glass blowers have become tramps, calling no city their freehold and no house their home, and boom towns are bonding their cornfields for the money that brings with it no good thing. Natural gas has, in a small way, done for the morals and character of the glass business what the protective tariff has done for the whole country. 'Wealth accumulates, and men decay.'

"The country, after twenty-five years of protection, finds itself less able to meet foreign competition than ever before. The glass manufacturers of England, Belgium, and Germany compelled to stand on their own merits only, have put so much knowledge and attention to improving their melting methods and cheapening their raw materials that they now make better glass at less cost than we do with our miscalled protective system.

"What was the use of spending money for careful scientific experiments when by going into politics we could get a revision of the tariff and so assure a greater profit? It is much easier to invest a few thousands in a campaign fund than to go into the pit of a glass producer and work at improvements in melting methods.

"Is it not a shame for us to allow that our window-glass is inferior to the imported because our highly protected manufacturers have not taken the trouble to build the best furnaces and our highly paid workmen have not taken the pains to do their work carefully? The hollow-ware branch is but little better.

"If some chemist should discover a chemical or electrical method of uniting sand and soda into glass by water power instead of coal, as it is not at all impossible, what would become of our American industry that hangs by the slender thread of cheap fuel?

"If this is the result of protection after twenty-five years of the Grand Old Party, what awaits us in the future when three or four more 'Republican' revisions of the tariff by its friends have added their quotas to the glorious record?

"The curse of the party is its hypocrisy and dishonesty. The plea of their writers and orators in Congress and before the people is their love for the laboringmen. They fulfill their promise by protecting the manufacturer. Their promise is to the hundred, but their deed is for the one. If they had really meant to protect the laborer they could have done it simply and directly by shutting out the importation of foreign laborers."

An honest workingman is then represented as saying to the glass manufacturer:

"You have the protection of the best coal in the world and the best raw material and 3,000 miles of water. We propose now that you try to swim alone, and instead of protection of wealthy manufacturer, we will organize the protection of the laborer; first, by giving him the most for his money that money will buy in any market of the world; second, by proper legislation regarding immigration that shall give us security against unjust charges; third, by protecting the American soil from the monopolist and the speculator; fourth, by protecting the value of every dollar of our hard-earned wages.

"As for the Grand Old Party, it is discredited and dishonored. It has written its epitaph. Let it go under."

A Question of Morals.

The struggle for unearned advantage at the doors of the Government tramples on the rights of those who patiently rely upon assurances of American equality. Every governmental concession to clamorous favorites invites corruption in political affairs by encouraging the expenditure of money to debauch suffrage in support of a policy directly favorable to private and selfish gain. This, in the end, must strangle patriotism and weaken popular confidence in the rectitude of republican institutions. Though the subject of tariff legislation involves a question of markets, it also involves a question of morals. We cannot with impunity permit injustice to taint the spirit of right and equality, which is the life of our Republic; and we shall fail to reach our national destiny if greed and selfishness lead the way.—Grover Cleveland.

THE New York Tribune says that "the letter of Mr. Wayne MacVeagh announcing his purpose to vote for Mr. Cleveland, and giving his reasons for so doing, discloses the depths of ignorance into which some educated men are drawn by the bad habit of reading only one side." Well! well! Said the child to his mother: "My teacher is the ignorantest person I ever did see."—Utica Observer.

Silent Music.

In the orchestra of a small theater in Munich were two musicians who each played a trombone. The audience had been often charmed with the perfect regularity of the movements of those musicians. Both of these accomplished tromboners—if we may use such a word—were in the habit of not only looking at, but of actually imbibing the wine when it was red. The first tromboner was of a particularly convivial nature. One evening, having been to a dinner party, he became very much intoxicated. He forgot entirely that a new opera was to be performed that evening, and that, of course, his services would be required. When he was reminded by a courier from the theater that he was to play on the trombone that night, at first he was in despair. He, however, was sober enough to engage the services of a substitute, but, as he could not find one who could play the instrument, he had to resort to strategy. He told the substitute not to try to blow at all. "All you have to do," said the intoxicated musician, "is to put the mouth-piece to your mouth, puff out your cheeks, and, keeping your eye on the second's trombone, push the slide out and in just as he does. Keep exact time with him in working the slide, and nobody will ever know that you are not making music with the instrument."

The substitute promised to do as he was told, and took his place in the orchestra by the side of the second tromboner. For a while, as long as the orchestra was in full blast, he got along very well. There were so many instruments in the band that nobody noticed the failure of the substitute to make any noise. He puffed out his cheeks and worked the slide of the instrument out and in in perfect time with the second tromboner.

In the second part, however, the music called for a trombone solo. The two tromboners were to execute a piece without other instrumental accompaniment. All eyes were fixed on the tromboners, who puffed out their cheeks, and worked the slides of of the instruments up and down most industriously, but in spite of their efforts a dead silence was the only result—a silence so oppressive that the audience could distinctly hear the aching of a soft corn on the musical director's left foot. Not a sound escaped from either instrument. The director danced about and waved his baton frantically at the two tromboners, but all to no purpose, for, although they puffed, and kept on shooting the slides out and in, not a sound escaped. The audience was astonished and the other musicians dismayed. Then the astonishing phenomenon was explained, and it was found that the second tromboner, unknown to the first one, had also got drunk, and had likewise hired a substitute who did not know how to play, and he instructed him just as No. 1 instructed his substitute, to puff out his cheeks and follow the motions of his partner.

Tasks That Must Be Done.

Nature has assigned important tasks to the liver and the bowels, and being mutually dependent upon each other for the regular and adequate discharge of these tasks, a cessation of work by one causes the other to lapse into inactivity. The tasks of secretion and evacuation must be performed, or the system is poisoned and disordered. Moreover, fatal inflammation of the bowels or abscess of the liver are apt to ensue if inaction of these organs is allowed to go unheeded. The dangerous tendency should be checked at the outset with Hotstetter's Stomach Bitters, an anti-bilious specific and laxative without a peer. Never does this medicine cause a qualm of the stomach or uneasiness of the bowels. It does its reformatory work pleasantly though with reasonable activity. It prevents malaria and rheumatic disease, kidney complaints, and relieves dyspepsia and nervousness.

Water.

An average of five feet of water is estimated to fall annually over the whole earth, and, assuming that condensation takes place at an average height of three thousand feet, scientists conclude that the force of evaporation to supply such rainfall must equal the lifting of three hundred and twenty-two million pounds of water three thousand feet in every minute, or about three hundred billion horse power constantly exerted. Of this prodigious amount of energy thus created a very small proportion is transferred to the waters that run back through rivers to the sea, and a still smaller fraction is utilized by man; the remainder is dissipated in space.

Mrs. William Murden, 197 Third St., Albany, N. Y., gives it the meed of praise, as follows: "I have used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and find it has no equal. No family should be without it."

THE MOST STUBBORN Skin and Scalp Diseases, the worst forms of Scrofula, all blood-taints and poisons of every name and nature, are utterly rooted out by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. For every disease caused by a torpid liver or impure blood, it is the only remedy so certain and effective that it can be guaranteed. If it fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

Eczema, Tetter, Salt-rheum, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Enlarged Glands, Tumors, and Swellings, and every kindred ailment, are completely and permanently cured by it.

Rotary Sash.

There has been invented a new form of domestic window sash, which is so fixed in its frame, that while capable of the usual vertical sliding movement, it can be turned round bodily, so that the outer glass can be readily cleaned. This can be done while the cleaner stands in safety within the apartment to which the sash is fitted. This safety window seems to meet a real want, and as it does not involve any considerable additional cost, it is likely to meet with extensive adoption.

Burns.

Common baking soda is the best of all remedies in case of scalds and burns. It may be used on the surface of the burned place, dry or wet. When applied promptly, the sense of relief is magical. It seems to withdraw the heat and with it the pain, and the healing process soon commences. It is the best application for eruptions caused by poisonous ivy and other poisonous plants, as also for bites and stings of insects.

Fine Playing Cards.

MERCURIAL

Mr. J. C. Jones, of Fulton, Ark., says of S.S.S. "About ten years ago I contracted a severe case of blood poison. Leading physicians prescribed medicine after medicine, which I took without any relief. I also tried mercurial and potash remedies, with unsuccessful results, but which brought on an attack of mercurial RHEUMATISM that made my life one of agony. After suffering four years I gave up all remedies and commenced using S. S. S. After taking several bottles, I was entirely cured and able to resume work.

Two Great Remedies.

The human citadel is open to attacks from two sources, and, aside from accidents, these two are the avenues from which all of the maladies that afflict the race spring. The first of these are what are known as the excretory organs. These are the lungs, the kidneys, and the skin. These suffer from congestion, which takes the form of colds. Starting from what is called a cold, the maladies that result are widespread, ranging from a cough to consumption. They attack all ages and all stations. No one is free from these troubles. There is, however, a remedy that is a safeguard. This is REID'S GERMAN COUGH AND KIDNEY CURE. It contains no poison, but it will heal any form of lung trouble, or any malady that arises from a cold. The other class of diseases arise from derangement of the digestive organs, and result in constipation. When the bowels do not act, the stomach soon refuses to digest the food, and we are troubled with indigestion, fever, and a long train of disorders that embrace a wide range of maladies. The Laxative Gum-Drops will correct any difficulty of this sort. They contain nothing deleterious, but are safe and pleasant. Get them of any dealer.

short time had enough money pledged to pay for the flags which had been ordered by B. A. Woodcox, the trustee. In the St Joe schools the amount of money ($9.50) necessary to purchase their flag was raised by the pupils without the aid of the citizens. In the forenoon in St. Joe the flag having been raised and saluted and the national hymn having been sung, the schools after the acknowledgment of God, were marched to the M E church where the program was rendered. At 12 p. m. the school delegations began to arrive upon the school grounds and in less than an hour the yard was filled with pupils and citizens from far and near. At 1:30 the Columbus tree was planted each teacher throwing in a shovel-full of mother earth. Three cheers were then given for the tree, for Columbus, for God and native land and one fellow who was bubbling over with patriotism gave a lusty shout for Cleveland. A line of march was then begun headed by the Concord and Coburntown bands and followed by the W. R. C. and G. A. R. and the Odd Fellows. Then came the schools under the directions of their teachers. The Spencerville school with their band, for which a place had been reserved at the head of the column, coming in a little late was compelled to bring up the rear following the St. Joe school. The line of march was half a mile long and continued through the business part of town to the grove. There were in town 600 pupils one-third of whom belonged to the St. Joe schools. The reserved seats were all filled by the pupils many of whom were compelled to stand, the great majority of people doing likewise. A program was then rendered the salient features of which were the address by Prof. McIntosh of Auburn in behalf of the schools, by Sol Barney in behalf of the Odd Fellows, and by Rev. Mr. Jones. It was estimated that there were in attendance at the afternoon exercises not less than fifteen hundred persons.

Mr. McIntosh's address is highly praised by all who heard it. As a former county superintendent, he could address the pupils, parents, school officers and all interested, from his former, extensive experience in the work.

B A. Woodcox is the trustee. The teachers are: No 1, Millie Sechler; No. 2 Fred Jenkins; No. 4, C H Brown; No 5, Emma Curie; No 6, Edgar Bates, principal; grammar, Frank Rhodes; intermediate, Georgia VanFleit; primary, Audrey Woodcox; No. 7, Charles Johnson; No. 8, Frank Hamilton; No. 9, O. W. Lake; No 10, A. C. Kœppe, principal; primary, Mrs. A C Kœppe; No. 11, Jennie Baltz.

NO. 9, FAIRFIELD.

At an early hour on the morning of Columbus Day, the pupils and teacher together with a goodly number of patrons and other visitors, met at the school house to celebrate the day. The first event of the day was the raising of "Old Glory" on the school grounds. The magnificent pole on which it was raised had been obtained by Messrs. Childs and Case. This was followed by the exercises of the day which were opened by a patriotic song after which Solomon Reincehl offered prayer. The national address The Meaning of the Centuries, was given by Willie Reincehl. The Ode Columbus' Banner was read by Reuben Childs. This was followed by a picnic dinner, after which the boys and girls indulged in various games, the older people in visiting etc. Those present report a very enjoyable time. It is encouraging to note the interest manifested by the people of the district in attending this celebration and also the liberality with which they responded to the call for money for the purchase of a flag. Our flag consecrated by the blood of heroes as it waves over the school house, will be emblematic of the protection which the stars and stripes ever affords that great American institution, the free school system.

NO. 3, GRANT TOWNSHIP.

With the aid of the patrons and neighbors, who furnished excellent singing, and martial and violin music, school No. 3 of Grant township celebrated Columbus Day with all the pomp and ceremony requisite for the occasion. The school and audience marched to the beat of drums, out of the school room around the flag pole. After the reading of the president's proclamation, the flag was hoisted by a G. A. R. man, amid martial music followed by other demonstrations after which all marched into the house where the rest of the program was rendered, which consisted of prayer, declaiming and reading, interspersed with singing and violin and drum music. All seemed to enjoy themselves greatly, especially the children for whom it was a memorable occasion.

Brooks Hine, Teacher.

AUBURN JUNCTION.

The parents and others, about 40 in all, met Friday with the scholars at the school house to celebrate the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America. The exercises were appropriate for the occasion. After the flag was raised a short speech was made by Jacob Link to the children entreating them to always defend the flag of their country. After the exercises, tables were spread in the yard and a bountiful dinner laid before all. The afternoon was spent in games and a social time. Two trees were planted in memory of this day.

Mattie Moody will give a Hallowe'en party next Monday evening, to her young friends. It is expected to be a very pleasant gathering.

Clerk Moody went to Indianapolis today to get the tickets for the state and national ballots. It will probably need two men to bring them home.

There is a big rally of the people's party to-day, but the papers have received no notice of it. They certainly know we publish all political notices free. But of course a secret organization can send word to the different lodges with little or no trouble, and so secretly, that no one will know when the meeting is to be but themselves.

BUTLER.

A large number of our citizens went to Chicago last week.

Large amount of potatoes and a few apples are coming in, marked at 60c. per bushel, each.

Mrs Stephen G. Reed died very suddenly last week, in Stafford Tp. Her remains were entered in Butler cemetery.

A married daughter of John Kanavels, of Michigan, died last week, while visitin with her parents in Butler, last week. We did not learn the particulars of her death.

Peter Helwig, daughter, Phedima, William Jennings and wife, of Troy, Sundayed with Isaac Helwig of Fairfield, the latter is in poor health, having had a stroke of paralysis.

Our schools made a most creditable display on Columbus day. They turned out five hundred strong, about every one carrying a flag or some civic device. The display was a grand one and one that the little folks will never forget.

The M. E. quarterly meeting was well attended last Sabbath, but presiding elder, Woolpert, though drawing full salary for his services, failed to to appear either morning or evening. The motto of "no preach no pay," would not be a one for this energetic society.

A couple of stirring republican speeches, by Judge Sayler and Farmer Jones broke the ice of the campaign, and on Saturday men actualy talked politics on the street corners, a thing that has not occured in our hearing at any time this fall. May be politicians may work us up yet before election day.

The New Great South American Kidney Cure.

The acknowledged superior cure and immediate relief for all derangements, painfulness and decay of the kidneys or bladder, Bright's disease, diabetes or any complaint that hurts or despoils either of these delicate organs. This new remedy has been thoroughly tested by learned physicians and found far superior to any medicine yet discovered for quickly relieving all weaknesses, aches, pains and distresses arising from disease of any part of the urinary passages. It is a great relief for the old, middle aged and children, male or female. It relieves at once retention and pain in passing water, and it is very effective in relieving prostatic troubles in the old, and for nightly incontinence of water in children, or others, caused by weakness of the bladder. It may be worth to many a hundred times its cost. This is a remedy of great value to ladies, because they are very liable to weakness and pain peculiar to their sex. Sold by Robbins & McCord, druggists, Auburn, Ind. tf

Garrett Steam Laundry.

Peter Young has the agency for the Model Steam Laundry at Garrett, an establishment that has a reputation equal to the best, and has been in operation for the past two years with marked success. Stricken Down with Heart Disease.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

GENTLEMEN: I feel it my duty, as well as a pleasure, to publish, unsolicited, to the world the benefit received from DR. MILES' RESTORATIVE REMEDIES. I was stricken down with Heart Disease and its complications, a rapid pulse varying from 90 to 140 beats per minute, a choking or burning sensation in the wind pipe, oppression in the chest, THOUSANDS much pain in the region of the heart and below lower rib, pain in the arms, shortness of breath, sleeplessness, weakness and general debility. The arteries in my neck would throb violently, the throbbing of my heart could be heard across a large room and would shake my whole body. I was so nervous that I could not hold my hand steady. I have been under the treatment of eminent physicians, and have taken gallons of Patent Medicine without the least benefit. A friend recommended your remedies. She was cured by Dr. Miles' remedies. I have taken three bottles of your New CURED Heart Cure and two bottles Nervine. My pulse is normal, I have no more violent throbbing of the heart, I AM A WELL MAN. I sincerely recommend every one with symptoms of Heart Disease to take Dr. Miles' Restorative Remedies and be cured.

WATERLOO.

Mrs. B. B. Long has been sick for a week with a severe cold.

The L. M. C. met with Mrs. J. U. Winslow Tuesday evening, and officers were elected.

Mrs. Hall of Elkhart, with her children are visiting her father C. M. Phillips and family.

Senage Long was the recipient a few days ago of a fine, gold headed cane, from his sons in California.

The radical branch of the U. B. church are preparing to erect a church building on the corner of Wayne and Maple sts.

Mrs. W. H. Husselman and daughter, of Barnes, Kansas, are here visiting her brothers, S. and J. Rickel and other friends.

Rev. W. R. Suman, wife and three children from Ft. Wayne, are settled in their new home in the M. E. parsonage. Rev. W. R. Suman has already made many friends here.

Tuesday morning in all directions could be seen the work of those of both sexes, who consider it rich enjoyment to do all the mischief they can think of during "hallow een."

Louis A. Henning and Mrs. Jennie Nieswander were married at the home of the bride, Oct. 25th. The ceremony was performed by Rev. S. P. Klotz. All the parties belong here.

The alarm of fire Wednesday morning of last week was caused by fire having caught from the chimney into the roof of the residence of C. C. Boyer. The firemen were quickly on the spot, hard at work, and the fire was speedily extinguished, not however without a loss, of about $800. Mr. Boyer was insured for that amount.

Some of the timid ones were so much alarmed by the high wind Friday night, as to be unable to sleep; it shook the blinds, rattled the windows, broke and scattered the branches from trees, blew down boards, and made a general hubbub, yet did no damage, so far as known Saturday morning many people were heard tightening the stops to the windows.

The impersonation last week at the opera house was worthy to have drawn a crowded house, and there was nothing to regret on the part of those present. Those who desire to patronize everything of real merit or interest, have been so often disappointed, as to become shy of visiting places of amusement, or instructing unless certain of what is before them, and thus sometimes miss a real treat.

Nellie Carpenter who has been sick for several weeks, died Sunday, Oct. 30th about 12 m. The funeral services were held at the house Tuesday afternoon. The sorrowing parents and brother have the sympathy of the community. Nellie had made many friends here, who loved and respected her for her goodness, and her presence will be greatly missed by more than the "loved ones at home."

For President.
GROVER CLEVELAND,
OF NEW YORK.
For Vice President.
ADLAI E. STEVENSON,
OF ILLINOIS.

MRS. LEASE has nearly expired.

THERE are very few people in the People's party.

THE Hon. Tom Reed ought to advertise for his voice.

TOM REED has been lecturing on the "Progress of Humanity."

IT is evident that Blaine sick is stronger than Harrison well.

MR. BLAINE'S speech was simply an advertisement of his silence.

WEAVER is still traveling around with his mind in a parenthesis.

MRS. LEASE ought to go home and help Mr. Lease to nurse the baby.

POSSIBLY Mr. Lease's function is to throw unpleasant eggs at his wife.

GEN. WHITELAW REID does not appear to have his headquarters in the saddle.

THE potato rot has appeared in the West, and under the McKinley regime, too.

IT is a very hard-hearted Republican kicker that can withstand the gold of Ophir.

THERE was a distinct "Fellow-citizen, let us pair" flavor to Mr. Blaine's Ophir Farm speech.

MR. BLAINE asks the Irishmen of this country to vote for a tariff scheme that forbids admission to Irish products.

THE campaign in Illinois goes marching on with "wildcat currency" trying to get ahead of polecat administration in the Republican procession.

GOV. MCKINLEY is to be called back from his task of saving Pennsylvania and put to work at once in Ohio. Buckeye Republicans are really getting uneasy.

SENATOR QUAY is to assist Tom Carter in the closing weeks of the campaign. The Senator will find the Australian law in a large majority of the States where he played a game of tenpins four years ago.

ONE reason why Whitelaw Reid was put on the ticket with Harrison was that it was believed his candidacy would be a personal appeal to Blaine. The personal appeal has been made, and the country has the result.

THERE is no prospect of Republican success in West Virginia. That party is conducting a quiet campaign there because it cannot conduct any other. It is in no condition, in West Virginia or elsewhere, to arouse enthusiasm.

THE McKinley law is the best tariff act ever passed. It has calmly but firmly thrust Eliot of Harvard, Edward Atkinson, Wayne MacVeagh, Judge Gresham, Richard H. Dana, Dr. Everett, and a million or so other voters into the Democratic party.

THE Census Bureau has all the statistics of protected manufacture ready, but will not give them out till after the election. It does not want agricultural voters in the West to know about the fat dividends of protected manufacturers before the election.

THE Michigan Democrats may be deprived of their Constitutional right to select Presidential electors by Congressional districts. Constitutional rights are as numerous now as ever they were, but Republican partisan judges are more numerous than ever they were.

GEN. DAN SICKLES has publicly denounced as false the alleged interview with him, in which he was represented as saying he would not support Cleveland. This statement is made in order to set the General aright, and not because we think it is of any burning importance.

ACCORDING to Republican orators and journals, American protection ruins the industries of foreign countries, while fair trade encourages them, and these same Republicans are asking the Irishmen of America to vote for a system that will ruin Ireland, rather than one which would benefit her.

IN 1888 Gen. Sickles supported Mr. Cleveland. In 1892 he sulks in his tent, though Mr. Cleveland's Presidential record has not been changed in four years.

COURIER-JOURNAL: Republicans should not count too much on the fact that they succeeded in pushing and pulling Mr. Blaine into the campaign the other day. The last time they succeeded in pushing and pulling Mr. Blaine into a campaign the result was that the candidate for whom he spoke was not only beaten, but was sent to the penitentiary. Ask Delamater, of Pennsylvania.

WE are told that the present administration has "remitted over one hundred millions of duties on a single article in admitting sugar free." Remitted it to whom? The author of the McKinley bill tells us that it is foreigners who pay our tariff duties, and, if this be true, then it is submitted that the administration might be engaged in better business than giving up $100,000,000 of our revenue to foreigners.

THE wheat crop of the country last year was 612,000,000 bushels, and wheat is down now at a farm price of 60 cents, which doesn't pay for the cost of raising it. Republican statisticians and economists say it is overproduction, which means that wheat raisers in the West and cotton raisers in the South must spend less time in working and more time in sucking their thumbs till things come around right.

THERE are indications that the word has been passed around to the Republican press to take a hopeful and optimistic view of the political prospect. This is to neutralize the gloom and forebodings that are settling down upon the Harrison campaign. There is reason to believe that Chairman Carter has discovered that New York is hopelessly Democratic, and the President does not need to be informed that Indiana is so.

EX-SENATOR EDMUNDS pronounces Mr. Cleveland "a strong, able man, honest and courageous." Very few Republicans are willing to speak truthfully of a Democratic candidate in campaign years. Even Mr. Depew won't proclaim Mr. Cleveland the "typical American" while the campaign is in progress. And, be it noted, Senator Edmunds himself put the Atlantic Ocean between himself and his party before giving expression to the above opinion.

IN his letter of acceptance, which not one man in a thousand has read, Whitelaw Reid said that the Democratic clamor against the force bill, "if it means anything, means a purpose to nullify the fourteenth and fifteenth articles of the Constitution of the United States." This means also that Mr. Reid approves of that bill and regards it as a very benevolent measure. Thus are both the Republican candidates committed to the Federal control of elections.

THE Supreme Court of the United States has decided that the Michigan plan of choosing Presidential electors by Congressional districts is constitutional and legal. No well-informed person has ever imagined that the decision of the court would be otherwise, and the only purpose of the Republicans in bringing the suit was to obstruct the election machinery and to arouse prejudice. The decision means that at least six or eight of the electoral votes of Michigan will be cast for Cleveland and Stevenson.

IN 1890, just before the Democratic tidal wave struck his bill, Mr. McKinley asserted in a public address that "this whole system of cheap things is a badge of poverty." Fearing that the people will this year take the same view of McKinleyism which they entertained two years ago Mr. McKinley is bobbing up in this State and that with the pretense that his bill was intended to make things cheap and has had that result! Has Mr. McKinley deceived himself or is he deliberately attempting to deceive others?

IT will be remembered that, in his letter of acceptance, Mr. Harrison went out of his way to paint a glowing eulogy of the wonderful pearl-button industry which the enormously increased McKinley duty on buttons had established in this country. Within a few days after the publication of the letter the Chicago pearl-button factory failed, and since then the irreverent have been popping up and flippantly wanting to know where is that American pearl-button industry, anyhow? They can have their answer whenever they wish it. That industry has been discovered. It is an established fact. It is in America—in the good State of Illinois, right in the walls of the Chester Penitentiary, and gives employment to sixty protected convicts. When the President of these United States settles down to writing state papers on pearl buttons he knows what he is talking about.

BEARING ON ELECTION.

FACTS THAT ENCOURAGE LOYAL DEMOCRATS.

Republicans Make No Progress in Their Efforts to Deceive the People—How Tariff Affects the Farmer—No Cloud on the Democratic Horizon.

Points to Success.

Popular elections in this country frequently surprise the shrewdest calculators and confound even those who have the gratification of victory. This was notably the case in 1890, when the overwhelming success of Democracy marked such a complete revolution as to astound even those who had contributed to its accomplishment. Now, with but little more than a week intervening before election, in the midst of a campaign notable for its quietness and the undisturbed condition of general business affairs, there is an eager curiosity to foreshadow the outcome of the struggle. The men who back their judgment with their money, eliminating all prejudice and sentiment from their calculations, show something of the tameness which characterizes the campaign, but are giving odds on the proposition that Cleveland will carry Indiana, carry New York, and be the next President of the United States. These men who live by their wits cannot be commended as infallible oracles, but their action is always regarded as highly indicative.

Every available bit of information goes to fortify them in the position taken. The issues presented this year are the same as two years ago, and there is no reason to expect the reversion of an opinion so emphatically expressed. Such change of front was not suggested in the election of Governor Flower in New York by 50,000 majority, in the greatly diminished Republican vote of Maine and Vermont in their September elections, in the unimpaired strength manifested by the Democracy of Georgia and Florida, in the open defection of some of the ablest and most distinguished Republicans of the land, in the re-election of a Democratic Governor in the former Republican stronghold of Iowa, in the crushing treatment of Blaine and his friends by the administration, or in the methods by which Harrison is utilizing the beneficiaries of federal patronage in violation of law and to the disgust of all honest citizens.

Every election held since 1888 has shown a shrinkage in Mr. Harrison's strength. Last year New York, Iowa and Massachusetts, three States that gave him their vote for President, elected Democratic Governors. In 1890, for the first time since the war, the Democrats of the North secured a majority representation in the National House of Representatives, and, counting the six new Republican States admitted during Harrison's administration, twenty-four have Democratic Governors and twenty have Republican Governors.

The desperate use of money for the purpose of fraud and treachery seems now the sole reliance of Republican managers, and in this scheme they repel the honest voters while angling for the susceptible floaters.—Detroit Free Press.

Mr. Reid's Letter.

Mr. Reid has formally accepted the Republican nomination for Vice President. The acceptance comes late, but from a Democratic point of view, considering Mr. Reid's unavailability as a candidate, it is better late than never. His letter to the Chairman of the Committee of Notification is a stereotyped declaration of plutocratic doctrine, of which the Republican party in this campaign is being made the expression and advocate. There is nothing new in it to consider. It favors the McKinley law as being an advance in tariff rates over the older schedules, and favors a still further advance if any protected manufacturer thinks he needs it. Mr. Reid is evidently in politics what the old-school doctor was in medicine. The basis of his doctrine is that it is impossible for him to be mistaken, and if, after the highest tariff ever known, wheat is low and agricultural products without a market, he prescribes more tariff as a remedy. This is so like the old-school doctor who, after bleeding a patient to unconsciousness, only said "bleed him again" when the result of his treatment was reported to him that the St. Louis Republic believes its comparison to be justified.

Let Harrison Have It.

Mr. Blaine's citation of the comparative agricultural and manufacturing production of Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, and Ohio is capable of varied uses by the opponents of the high protective tariff. Looked at from almost any point of view, it affords opportunity either to challenge or disprove its statements or to accept them as arguments against the perpetuation of the protective system. It is inconceivable how a man once so alert in the evil genius of making the worse appear the better cause could have fallen into statements which not only invite attack, but are capable of being turned against the party in whose interest they are apparently uttered.

The Republic has already taken occasion to refer to some of them, but there is yet another which must be considered. In asserting that the manufactured products of Illinois (which as the greatest agricultural State of those named affords the fairest field for discussion) exceed in value the value of its agricultural products Mr. Blaine asserts what is important, if true. If this is admitted as a fact there must be a reason for it. Mr. Blaine neglects to say what it is, but leaves us to infer that it is the result of Republican tariff legislation.

And this it certainly is. If in a State with the unrivaled soil and agricultural resources of Illinois, a State with a greater railroad mileage than any other, with two shores washed their entire length by navigable streams, and lake navigation affording easy access to market, the value of agricultural products is less than that of manufactured goods, there is but one conclusion. The difference in values is an artificial and not a natural one. It is the difference between the increased value of goods protected by Republican tariffs and goods which, although provided with exceptional facilities for reaching the Liverpool market, where prices are fixed, are left to compete in open market with all the world. In other words, although the agricultural products of Illinois greatly exceed in amount the amount of manufactured products in the State, the manufactured products exceed them in value because tariff laws, maintained to give manufacturers a monopoly of the home market, place an artificial value upon the product of the factories, while the product of the farm is depressed in value by the cost of transportation to a foreign market, and is further depressed by the operation of tariff laws which, by prohibiting trade with the foreign market, prevent exchange and increase the farm surplus of this country that has to be kept at home.

The more we contemplate it the more we are inclined to allow Mr. Harrison the full benefit of Mr. Blaine's Ophir speech.—St. Louis Republic.

Against a Stone Wall.

The Republicans make no progress in their effort to deceive the people with the charge that Mr. Cleveland's election would mean the adoption of a "wildcat" currency system.

If there is one public man in the country that is free from the suspicion of the least sympathy with a degraded currency, that man is Grover Cleveland. His opinions on that question are so well known and so positive that they have been considered his weak point by those who advocate an expansion of our circulation at the sacrifice of its soundness. That the Republicans have sought to make capital on the money question against the present Democratic candidate for the Presidency attests in a most significant manner the extremity of their desperation.

Such charges would have fallen flat even if Mr. Cleveland had treated them with silence, so well are his monetary views understood. However, he did not choose to leave room for doubt as to his attitude, even in the mind of the most ignorant, and accordingly thus expressed himself in his letter of acceptance:

"The people are entitled to sound and honest money, abundantly sufficient in volume to supply their business needs. But whatever may be the form of the people's currency, national and State, whether gold, silver or paper, it should be so regulated and guarded by government action or by wise and careful laws that no one can be deluded as to the certainty and stability of its value. Every dollar put into the hands of the people should be of the same intrinsic value or purchasing power. With this condition absolutely guaranteed, both gold and silver can be safely utilized upon equal terms in the adjustment of our currency.

"In dealing with this subject no selfish scheme should be allowed to intervene and no doubtful experiment should be attempted. The wants of our people, arising from the deficiency or imperfect distribution of money circulation, ought to be fully and honestly recognized and efficiently remedied. It should, however, be constantly remembered that the inconvenience or loss that might arise from such a situation can be much easier borne than the universal distress which must follow a discredited currency."

That could hardly be more explicit, and certainly leaves no ground for any charge of ambiguity or evasion. That party which asks voters to believe that a man holding these views would countenance a doubtful or debased currency, "National or State," discredits most foolishly and most unprofitably their intelligence.—Courier Journal.

The Loss to the Farmer.

The exports of farm products continue to fall off, notwithstanding the McKinley law, and it would be gratifying if the statesmen who have been "pointing out" to the farmer the value to him of reciprocity should undertake the explanation of the present condition of things.

The following table shows the exports of agricultural articles for September, 1891, compared with September, 1892:

Articles.	1892.	1891.
Corn, bu	1,830,333	2,338,916
Oats, bu	104,015	322,692
Oatmeal, lbs	277,644	1,355,727
Rye, bu	172,157	3,161,537
Wheat, bu	10,091,800	19,496,174

This falling off is very serious. It means, so far as the farmers are concerned, that Republican reciprocity is the merest sham. The decline has been so great that the total exports of some articles for three months ending Sept. 30 have been decreased as follows:

Articles.	1892.	1891.
Corn (bush.)	6,395,541	7,097,342
Oats (bush.)	431,877	528,915
Oatmeal (pounds)	961,841	2,640,557
Rye (bush.)	482,448	4,269,936
Wheat (bush.)	31,760,795	50,414,898

The value of the total exports of all breadstuffs was only half as great in September this year as in the same month last year, while for the three months ending Sept. 30th the values were more than $26,000,000 less in 1892 than in 1891.

Besides exporting less, the farmer receives less for what he sends abroad, as is shown by the following table of September prices:

Articles.	—Prices.— 1892.	1891.
Corn (bush.)	$0.55	$0.66
Oats (bush.)	0.40	0.43
Oatmeal (pound)	0.02	0.03
Rye (bush.)	0.70	0.94
Wheat (bush.)	0.80	1.05

This shows partly what the McKinley law is doing for the farmer. It also adds to his cost of living. If he likes it he will vote for Harrison; otherwise he will vote for Cleveland.

After Physicians Failed, Hood's Sarsaparilla Perfectly Cured.

Great mental agony is endured by parents who see their children suffering from diseases caused by impure blood, and for which there seems no cure. This is turned to joy when Hood's Sarsaparilla is resorted to, for it expels the foul humors from the blood, and restores the diseased skin to fresh, healthy brightness. Read the following from grateful parents:

"To C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"We think Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most valuable medicine on the market for blood and skin diseases. Our two children suffered terribly with the

SIX MILLIONS LOST.

MILWAUKEE'S TERRIBLE VISITATION.

Swept by Flames with the Wind Blowing a Sixty-Mile Gale—Entire Lower Portion of the East Side Is Gone.

Wild Night of Ruin.

The lower portion of the East Side of Milwaukee went up in a whirlwind of flame Friday night. The burned portion comprises the wholesale district, the Northwestern Railway yards, and gas works. It is also thickly inhabited by Italians, Poles, Germans and Irish, most of whom are poor and have lost everything. The loss will be between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000.

The fire started shortly before 6 o'clock in the wholesale liquor house of A. Blade & Son. The wind at the time was blowing fully sixty miles an hour. As the fire broke through the roof the hurricane caught up the brands, and, whirling them across the block, flung them full on the seven-story building of Bubb & Kipp on the corner of Broadway and Buffalo streets. Before the engines on a third alarm could arrive and come into action the Kipp building was a mass of flames.

This was the beginning of the end. The sparks were caught up by the gale and whirled hither and yon, while the firemen, fighting bravely in the molten shower, found their efforts powerless to stay the progress of the flames. A general alarm was turned in, bringing the entire fighting force of the city into action, but it was unable to stay the steady march of the flames which now were rioting blocks away.

From this on it was a steady conquering march. The big streams of water looked like squirtguns playing against the roaring sea of flame. From Bubb & Kipp's the fire had eaten backward to East Water street, but there it was held by hard fighting, with the fire companies enveloped in smoke and flames, undistinguishable except as the wind whirled the curtain apart at times for a second.

People Driven from Their Homes.

Balked here, the flames threw themselves with renewed vigor on the territory to the eastward and leeward. There no engines stayed their progress, and they rioted down across Broadway, stopped for a moment in the block between that street and Milwaukee street, then jumped over that and continued their unimpeded career toward the lake, a half mile away, carrying destruction, ruin, and despair to poor families who were in their path. These people hurriedly left their homes, carrying with them what they could, and where this was impossible by the sudden onset of the hurricane of fire fled swiftly, not stopping to look behind, only glad to escape with their lives. Mixed in with the small wooden buildings, which were the dwelling places of these unfortunates, were huge wholesale houses. The fire king made no invidious distinctions. The big trade warehouses went with the humbler home. The only difference was that he stayed longer with the former.

The territory burned out is in the shape of a slightly obtuse triangle with the apex at Blade & Co.'s, on the river, the upper side Detroit street, the lower Menominee street to Milwaukee and then to the Milwaukee River, and the base Lake Michigan. Roughly it is a space two-thirds of a mile long on the base line.

At 7:30 o'clock Friday night Fire Chief Swenie, of Chicago, received a message from Chief James Foley, of Milwaukee, asking for immediate assistance. Exactly at 9:30, less than two hours after the call for help was received, the train left the north end of the Northwestern yards, with G. M. Harshaw, a trusty driver, at the throttle. The train consisted only of four flat cars containing the fire apparatus and a caboose, and looked more like a circus train than anything else. The caboose was filled with firemen, reporters, and fire-insurance adjusters. It was run as a special, and was given a through right of way from Chicago to Milwaukee.

Assistance also came from Kenosha, Racine and other towns near by. In the meantime in Milwaukee the scenes of Chicago's big fire were repeated. Hundreds of poor householders carried in their arms, in carts or wagons whatever they had been able to seize and save before they were obliged to fly from their burning homes. They did not feel safe until they put the Milwaukee River between them and the destroying enemy. The few engines which could be brought into action were unable to prevent the wild riot. Every street looking south was a molten hell. The efforts of that portion of the department to the west and north of the fire had been directed toward holding it from any retrograde march, and in this the men were successful.

The flames showed considerable eccentricity in their ravages. They would jump across buildings for a block, leaving them untouched, only to return later and wipe them out in spite of the efforts of the firemen, who fought gallantly against the heavy odds.

Capt. Davis of the revenue cutter Johnson, which was lying in the harbor, tendered his crew to Chief Foley for use in fighting the fire. They were gratefully accepted, and relieved the firemen in places where they had become exhausted by their hard fight. The reserve force came just in time, and the Johnson's men fought gallantly and effectively.

The Fourth Regiment, under the command of Col. King, was called out to assist in guard duty, as the crowds in the vicinity of the burned district numbered thousands, and the police force was in need of assistance. A platoon of the Fourth which assembled at the armory earliest was sent to the House of Correction, near which institution a fire was reported raging, where there were no police for guard duty, all the men being busy at the other fire. Companies E and F were used for guard duty along Detroit street, where there were piles of household goods which had been hastily removed from the burning houses. Company A was on guard duty around the Northwestern yards, where thieves had taken advantage of the fire to attempt the looting of box cars.

Fully 10,000 people were made homeless, and leading insurance men say that about half the loss is covered by insurance. They estimate the total loss at $5,775,000.

A BATTLE royal occurred at Wallace's circus winter quarters, two miles east of Peru, in which five jumbo elephants were the participants. For some time an enmity has existed between Prince and Diamond, the two greatest beasts of the herd. The enmity culminated in a big scrimmage during the absence of keeper Sweeny. Diamond, with a weight of four tons, was the aggressor, but Prince was his match and succeeded in breaking his tusk and fairly crowding him through the heavy brick wall of the building, which fell upon them both. All the elephants broke loose from their chains, at once engaging in the melee, and for half an hour pandemonium prevailed. Quiet was finally restored, but not before they were badly hurt and the place presented the appearance of a slaughter-house. The noise and screams of the jungle giants could be heard for nearly a mile.

THE Edingburgh Daily Call changes hands, G. A. Quick retiring and Charles F. Pruitt taking the editorial chair and publisher's desk.

JOSEPH SHACKMAN, of the firm of Shackman & Nadel, clothing dealers, and a pioneer among the business men of Northern Indiana, died at Elkhart of gangrene, the result of cutting a toe while trimming a corn a few days ago. He was widely known among the clothing-dealers of the country.

THE barn of Thomas Williams, five miles north of Liberty, was destroyed by fire. Five horses, including a $500 thoroughbred mare, were burned, together with about $1,200 worth of grain and farm machinery. Loss partially covered by insurance.

DANIEL RHOADS, living near Anderson, was returning home, driving a spirited horse. When within sight of home the animal took fright at a bicycle, ridden by Walter Carpenter, a young school-teacher. Mr. Carpenter dismounted, but the horse lunged, and in turning into the barnyard upset the buggy. Mrs. Rhoads fell on her head. She was carried into her home in an unconscious condition, from which she never recovered.

THE INDUSTRIAL ADVANTAGES
—OF—
FORT WAYNE, IND.

As a place of residence Fort Wayne is unsurpassed by any city in Indiana. Its agreeable climate, the prevalence of thrift and comfort apparent even in the dwellings of the working people, and the numerous and costly residences of the wealthy, together with unsurpassed Religious Privileges and Educational Facilities, combine to make this city one to be desired.

It is surely a City of Homes, as the visitor will be convinced when he looks with infinite pleasure upon the houses of the mechanic, the clerk, the young business man, and the laborer, miles and miles of streets being lined with neat but inexpensive houses, often surrounded by a plat of ground and owned by its occupant. Land has never been held at fancy prices, but the reasonable terms upon which the working classes have been able to obtain the great boon of owning their own homes has naturally enhanced the welfare of the city, and, apart from stimulating habits of thrift, has created a class of citizens who are content, and, having a stake in the country, are not so prone to become mixed up in labor troubles. The Savings Banks and Building and Loan Associations have done much good in this direction and numerous capitalists also stand ready to build and sell houses, payments to be made in small monthly sums, and no mechanic need be without a home of his own in Fort Wayne. Hundreds have been, and are now being built in that way, and the suburbs of Fort Wayne are rapidly filling up with neat and tasteful residences for the masses.

The climatic and sanitary conditions of Fort Wayne are first-class. Statistics show it to be one of the most healthful cities in the State. It is subject to no prevailing diseases, and has a perfect sewerage system.

The water works are city property, and the water taken from a nest of about eighty wells many hundred feet deep, and filtered through the sand and gravel of the naturally porous soil, thus making it absolutely pure and cool. The works are equipped with the Holly system having a capacity of four times the actual needs of the city.

The Fire Department is conceded to be among the best managed and most complete in the country and never has the city suffered from any great loss by fire.

Of its educational institutions enough cannot be said. No expense is spared in perfecting and developing a complete system of public schools and besides several scholastic institutions of high rank have here found adequate support and management.

The right place for the business man or manufacturer is where they can get the many advantages required to run their business and successfully compete with others in the same line. These many advantages are to be found in Fort Wayne with her Natural Gas (at about one-half the cost of other fuel) the many trunk lines of railroad running through the city, every express company in existence represented by their agents, cheap rents, or if they wish to purchase, good value in real estate, and low taxes.

Besides the above concerns the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad employ 4,000; the Wabash Railroad, 1,000; the Grand Rapids and Indiana, 200; the Nickle Plate, Lake Shore and Michigan Southern, and Muncie Railroads, between two and three hundred, and the Fort Wayne Electric Street Car Company, a large number of men.

If you are looking for a location do not fail to visit this beautiful city.

HORACE FAIRBANKS, President of the St. Johnsbury and Lake Champlain railroad, Vermont, says: "I believe the business interests of the country, as well as the best interests of the railroad corporations, would be subserved by suspending the running of railroad trains on the Lord's day."

WIRE lath and glass shingles are now being manufactured, and by and by it will be so that a dutiful father will have to go clear up into the primeval lumber camps to pick up something with which to caress his erring boy.—Burlington Hawkeye.

A School on the Pacific Slope.

The school was in a rough boarded room which had been originally built for a store. The hats, bonnets, books and slates were piled on the shelves, and the thirty children sat on high benches, their feet swinging clear of the floor. There was not a robust or healthy-faced child in the room, and their thin, pale cheeks were a sad commentary on the condition of their lives. Later in the day, as I walked from home to home, and saw everywhere slow-trickling streams of filthy water, blue, iridescent and foul-ordored, I wondered not that the children were pale, but that they were alive. The history class was reciting a memorized list of "epochs" when I went in. They had them at their tongues' ends. I suggested to the teacher to ask them what the word "epoch" meant. Blank dismay spread over their faces. One girl alone made answer. She was an Indian, or perhaps half-breed, 14 years of age; the healthiest child and best scholar in the school, the teacher said. "The time between," was her prompt definition of the word epoch, given with a twinkle in her eye of evident amusement that the rest did not know what it meant. The first class in reading then read from the Fourth Independent Reader, in stentorian voices, Trowbridge's poem of "The Wonderful Sack." The effect of slight changes of a single letter here and there was most ludicrously illustrated by one sturdy little chap's delivery of the lines:

> His limbs were strong,
> His beard was long.

With loud and enthusiastic emphasis he read them:

> His lambs were strong,
> His bread was long.

Not a member of the class changed countenance or gave any sign of disagreeing with his interpretation of the text; and the teacher, being engaged in herculean efforts to keep the poor little primary bench still, failed to hear the lines.—"H. H." in Atlantic Monthly.

A Waspish Sting.

What some wag terms "the business end of a wasp" stings with scarcely more acuteness than the acid eructations of gas from the stomach to the gullet that are characterized as heartburn. Never was there a case of indigestion without this symptom. Both cause and effect are removable by the fine carminative tonic, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which confers regularity and vigor upon a disordered and enfeebled stomach with certainty and dispatch. Besides checking the pranks of a rebellious stomach, the Bitters wakes up a dormant liver, and causes the bowels to act like clockwork. An immense reputation has also been won by this professionally approved medicine as a means of eradicating and preventing malarial trouble, and counteracting a tendency to rheumatism and kidney complaints. Neuralgia and nervousness are also remedied by it.

Increasing the Potato Yield.

A remarkable series of experiments made by a French scientific agriculturist in the cultivation of potatoes has given astonishing results. In one instance he obtained a yield of no less than 42 tons of tubers per acre. He selected the best and soundest potatoes, plowed the land very deeply and manured it heavily. He also steeped the the potatoes for twenty-four hours in a solution made by dissolving six pounds of saltpetre and six pounds of sulphate of ammonia in twenty-five gallons of water; then he allowed them to drain and stand for twenty-four hours for their buds to swell before planting them.

A Chronic Invalid.

Justice Lamar of the Supreme Court is a chronic invalid. His malady does not seem to be gaining upon him but it is sufficient to keep him suffering all of the time. This is the fate of many of our public men. They lose their health in early life from neglect of the simple laws of health. They expose themselves, catch cold, lose their digestion and think that it will take care of itself. It is when the vital forces begin to fail that they wake up to a realizing sense of what they have lost and they pay for it by an old age of pain and care. They can save themselves much annoyance even when the disease has fastened upon them by taking the Laxative Gum Drop. This remedy is the best cathartic in the world, for it is as its name suggests, a gentle laxative not tearing the digestive organs and causing a disturbance with the whole system but quietly exciting the secretions until they remove all the morbid substances from the system. These gum drops come in two sizes, the small size costs ten cents, the large size twenty-five cents. Get them of any dealer.

"German Syrup"

I am a farmer at Edom, Texas. I have used German Syrup for six years successfully for Sore Throat, Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Pains in Chest and Lungs and Spitting-up of Blood. I have tried many kinds of Cough Syrups in my time, but let me say to anyone wanting such a medicine—German Syrup is the best. We are subject to so many sudden changes from cold to hot, damp weather here, but in families where German Syrup is used there is little trouble from colds. John F. Jones.

THE AUBURN COURIER

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, post office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY......NOVEMBER 3, 1892.

Senator Turpie

at Butler, to-morrow afternoon and evening,

November 4, 1892.

Also, our candidate for Lieutenant Governor,

Hon. Mortimer Nye.

There will be the biggest rally of the season. Let everybody come.

REPUBLICANS are trying to trade and get votes for Chase. Look out for this.

MCKINLEY took a third off the tax on sealskin sacks and taxed woolen shawls up to 112 per cent.

THE COURIER still claims a tariff for protection is a steal, and no matter how the election goes, we propose to fight all steals, right along.

WHEAT is only two-thirds as high as it was under Cleveland. It has fallen much more in price than other articles. A tariff cannot "protect" wheat.

POLL CLERKS must write their initials on the upper right hand corner of the ballots, now, not on the lower left hand, as they used to. Remember this change.

DEMOCRATIC farmer, get a neighbor to vote for better markets and higher prices, and against giving all your profits (if you have any,) to protected monopolists.

AFTER all the Dispatch's talk about increasing taxes on the farmers, it appears by the treasurer's books, that nearly all the increase is in the incorporated towns.

WORD comes to us from a republican source, that money is to be used to hire democrats to move before election, or to stay away on election day. Democrats should be on hand.

BLAINE said the McKinley bill would not make sale for a single bushel of wheat. He has proved a true prophet. Wheat is not half as high or as ready sale, as under low tariff before the war.

WHEAT sold last week in New York City at the lowest point it ever reached. What a comment is this on republican financial management. How the McKinley bill does help the farmer, dont it?

WANAMAKER'S "presence in the cabinet is an offense and a disgrace at which the whole country, irrespective of party, hangs the head in shame."—Indianapolis News, October 24, 1892, now supporting Harrison.

WANAMAKER is on the stump, at work to hold his position. It is necessary, for there may be a change in the make up of Harrison's cabinet. Carnegie and Frick have each made big contributions to the campaign fund.

FARM products are going lower and lower and the things they buy going higher. And yet many of them go right on voting the republican ticket, because their speakers and papers keep telling how prosperous the country is. The "protected" ones only are prosperous.

THE Butler Record, or any other monopoly paper, is invited to name a single state bank that ever issued "wild-cat money." No state bank bills ever were below par. They were on a basis as sound as the national banks. It was private banks and irresponsible parties that issued the poor money.

NEARLY every republican officeholder is out making speeches, members of the cabinet, foreign ministers, consuls and all. But their pay goes on, and the people foot the bills. If these officers are necessary the men should be at their post of duty. If not necessary, they should be abolished and the needless expense stopped.

WANAMAKER is not raising as much campaign money as in 1888. He has a cabinet office now, and like all the other office-holders, is spending the time the government pays him for making speeches. He might enlighten the people on the very interesting question, "The best way to secure a cabinet position under Harrison."

THE Waterloo Press asks why the democrats do not repeal the McKinley bill, while they have a majority in the House; Simply because the republicans have a majority in the senate which prevents its passage, and even if it should pass the senate, a republican president stands ready to veto it. We thought the Press knew more than it appears to know.

THE tariff on any article adds to the cost of producing it. For example: If we buy wool for 20, and then pay 10 cents more in tariff, we find each pound costs 30 cents. So the material we buy to make the cloth costs more. Republicans say, the more our materials cost, the cheaper the goods made thereof will be. Do they think people are fools? They must, for every speaker they have talks that way. Possibly the speakers are ignorant.

WITHOUT a tariff goods would be much cheaper than they are. A tariff for revenue is necessary to support expenses. A tariff for protection is a steal. Yet republicans contend that the steal is right. It would be just as proper for the government to legalize horse stealing, and just as good morals for republicans to endorse such a law. No government has the right to make a law that compels one citizen to pay a part of his earnings to another citizen without getting anything back. A gives up good money to B, and gets nothing, for the law compels him to do it.

GRESHAM has written a strong letter endorsing Cleveland, and a return to low tariff and honest government. Over 100 leading republicans have declared for Cleveland, besides thousands not so well known. A republican leaving his party now will be in good company. The list includes members of the cabinet of every republican president. Gresham was secretary of treasury under Arthur; McVeagh, attorney general under Garfield; Carl Shurz, interior under Hayes; Cox, same under Grant; Bristow, atty-gen. under Arthur; Hugh McCullough, sec. treas. under both Lincoln and Arthur; Key, post-master-general under Hayes; Williamson, once atty-gen. for Indiana; Judge Baldwin another ex-atty-gen. of this state; Gen. Rea, ex-grand commander of the G. A. R, and a long list of men who have held prominent positions in the republican party. They are tired of McKinley rule and protection to the wealthy, as well as the corrupt practices that have grown up in their old party.

DON'T BELIEVE THEM.

Republican speakers tell you the things you buy are cheaper because the McKinley law made them cheaper. It made only sugar cheaper, as on that it took off the tax. Other things are much higher in many cases, than ever before, and some that have gone lower, would have gone still lower without that tax.

When they tell you that Cleveland is the soldier's enemy, don't believe it, for he signed more pension bills than any other president, and under him, there were only about half as many refusals to grant pensions in the pension department, as under Harrison.

When they tell you that a democratic congress is unfriendly to soldiers, don't believe it, for every democratic congressman has voted for all these pension bills. No better friends to ex-soldiers have been found than Senator Voorhees, Congressmen Martin, Watson, Lowry and McClellan, all being Indianians. The records show for all these statements.

When they tell you a home market under a high tariff helps the farmer, don't believe it, for you know that wheat is about the lowest it ever got. It is certainly lower than it ever got since we had railroads,

When they tell you the democrats have not been the friends of the people, don't believe it, for they have made or tried to make all the laws favoring the common people that have been put on the statute books of the state. And as for the nation, the democrats have not had but one house of congress at a time since 1859. The republicans have had both houses and the president at the same time quite often, and it was at such times that they enacted laws for the rich to pay them for contributions to the campaign fund.

When they tell you the country never prospered so well as under republican high tariff, don't believe them, for it flourished far better under a low tariff. Before high tariff times we got twice as much for wheat and wool as we get now. Farms then were worth a third more than now, though now they have more improvements and better buildings. Our country prospers a little, and only that much because we can stand these republican burdens and still get along. We could get along better with no burdens.

When they tell you of "splendid republican financial management," don't believe them. Their management has cost the people a thousand millions drawn from the tax-payers and put into the pockets of the rich.

When they tell you that "protection helps the people," don't believe them. It takes from the people each year eight hundred millions for protection, of which the government gets not a cent, but the protected monopolies get all. Then there is the additional two hundred millions that is collected for revenue, which is all the people should be asked to stand. Every step they have taken with our money affairs, the changes in currency, etc, has cost the people useless millions. It is easy for them to talk of excellent management, but they never attempt proof.

When they tell you of Harrison's honorable record and clean administration, don't believe it. What other president ever promoted to a cabinet officer a man who was known only as the one who had raised a vast campaign corruption fund? What other president ever promoted to a place on the supreme bench a judge who, in a lower court, had made two opposite decisions in the same case to shield the man who had used the boodle that secured the election of the present administration.

Tell the Truth.

We are told that Wm. Wilson of Stafford is annoyed by reports that he bought a lot of encyclopedias at $50 each, for use in his township. The COURIER does not believe in taking any unfair or improper means of advantage during a campaign or at any other time. Mr. Wilson has had nothing whatever to do with the matter charged. He is a candidate on the people's ticket for commissioner, and is a worthy man, but he stands not the ghost of a show of being elected. So it will not pay to worry about these stories. Not a man on that ticket will be elected. The contest and only effect they can have will be to secure the election of the republican candidates. The republicans are using them for this purpose. The COURIER has warned them of this so often that we presume they know what is going on as well as we do, and are going on with their eyes open. If so, we shall not pity their remorse after election.

Mr. Dancer desires us to contradict a report going around now, that he has "sold out to the republicans." While we do not believe he would "sell out" for a cash consideration, and while we feel like relieving him of that charge, we must insist that his party is being used to help elect the republican ticket, and that if any republican is elected he will owe his success entirely to democratic votes given to the people's party candidates. We repeat what we have often said that no man on the new party ticket will be elected, and every democrat who votes that ticket not only wastes his vote, but helps to elect a republican. This statement may be distasteful to them, but it is true. Every democratic vote given to Wils. McClellan, is a vote to help defeat Turpie, for it helps to elect Camp for representative and Camp will vote for Millionaire Fairbanks. And so on of other officers. If anyone is ignorant of the effects of supporting the new party, he shall not blame the COURIER.

And while we are about it, we wish to protest against some false reports made against Mr. Ralston, candidate for sheriff on the democratic ticket. People's party folks and republicans, are both asserting that he is a drinking man, etc. This is false. We have known Mr. Ralston more than twenty years, and have never seen him in the least under the influence of liquor. For the last six years we have lived within two doors of him, and he must pass our house every time he goes home. The man who starts a campaign lie and the man who peddles it should be drummed out of the county.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

By virtue of an execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein William J. Nodine is plaintiff and Dora Shaw is execution defendant, requiring me to make the sum of Fifty Dollars and Eighty-five cents, with interest on said judgment and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o clock p. m., of said day, at the door of the Court House, of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, the following real estate, to wit:

Saturday, November 5. 1892,

The undivided One ninth of 25 acres off of the south end of the east half of the east half of the southwest quarter of section twelve (12), township thirty-four (34) north of range (13) east; also the undivided One-ninth of the undivided ½ of the northeast quarter of the northeast quarter of section (12), township thirty-four (34), north of range (13) east; also the undivided One ninth of the undivided ½ of the southwest quarter of the southeast quarter of section (12) township thirty-four [34] north, of range [13] east, all situated in DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs.

PHIL PLUM, Sheriff of DeKalb County.

Auburn, Indiana, Oct. 12th, 1892.

Mrs. W. M. Terry, who has been in the drug business at Elkton, Ky., for the past twelve years, says; "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy gives better satisfaction than any other cough medicine I have ever sold." There is good reason for reason for this. No other is so certain in a preventative and cure for croup; no other affords so much relief in cases of whooping cough. For sale by Robbins & McCord.

The best plaster.—Dampen a piece of flannel with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bind it over the seat of pain. It is better than any plaster. When the lungs are sore such an application on the chest and another on the back, between the shoulder blades, will often prevent pneumonia. There is nothing so good for a lame back or a pain in the side. A sore throat can nearly always be cured in one night by applying a flannel bandage dampened with Pain Balm. 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord.

Are your children subject to croup? If so, you should never be without a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough remedy. It is a certain cure for croup, and has never been known to fail. If given freely as soon as the croupy cough appears it will prevent the attack. It is the sole reliance with thousands of mothers who have croupy children, and never disappoints them. There is no danger in giving this Remedy in large and frequent doses, as it contains nothing injurious. 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord's.

Jerome Showalter's boy, Bert, had his leg broken at Holgate, Monday. He had gone down there with his father, who is painting with I. N. Fisher, and he and his brother were runing a hand car on a side track, when he was struck by the lever. Both bones were broken above the ankle. He was brought home the same day.

When the south bound freight on the Jackson Branch was switching, just after dark Tuesday evening, one of the cars was broken open, a box of Scotch caps opened, and several taken out. Some of them were found next morning by Frank Jones, lying on the track. The train went down to the Junction before it was discovered,

John Wanamaker is to speak in favor of high protective taxes here this week. As Mr. Wanamaker never took any part in politics till he helped raise the republican boodle of 1888, and he was at once made cabinet officer, here is a business hint for ambitious young politicians in charge of large Sunday school classes. It is such Sunday school teachers, and those who believe in them and condone their corrupt practices that bring religion into disrepute and make Ingersolism possible in an intelligent community.

The managers of the Reading Room at their last meeting decided that for lack of support it would be impossible to continue this enterprise in its present form—if at all. The burden has fallen very heavily on a few and the slowness of collections of amounts pledged has discouraged continuance. If some plan could be devised to continue this certainly very laudable enterprise it would be most certainly desirable, but it must be promptly advanced as the time is getting short when the decision will have to be made to continue or give it up. There are surely liberal hearted citizens in Auburn to see that our Reading Room does not go down, and if each would help a little and not leave it all to a few, it could easily be continued.

Through the courtesy of the great furniture firm of Alexander H. Revell & Co. of Chicago, quite a number of Auburn people, including the Courier folks, had a fine view of the great parade the 20th. The firm gave each of its salesman, the use of a large window, from which his invited friends could see the great pageant in comfort. J. D. Lahnum formerly of this place, has thanks for this favor to our household and the other Auburn guests. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Campbell, Mrs. Barns, and Mrs. Kelley and Miss Amy Plumb, of Easton, Maryland, besides several of Mr. Lahnum's Chicago friends. It was one of the best points in the city for the grand sight. After the parade, Mr. Revell served lunch free to all present on the second floor, about 700. It was a grand affair, and was greatly appreciated. It is plain that Mr. Revell is thoughtful of the wants of his friends and takes pride in making every thing pleasant for them regardless of expense. His great building was was tastefully decorated, and at a great expense. It would be a profitable visit to call at their extensive establishment and see one of the finest as well as the largest and most varied stocks of their line of goods in America.

The Lyon Comedy Company had a good house and a good performance Monday evening. Tuesday evening it rained so hard, that the performance was dropped. Last evening was the prohibition speech, and the hall was engaged for that, but to-night, and the rest of the week, they go on. The company is a good one, and gives good plays. We hope they will have good houses. This, Thursday evening, all ladies will be admitted free.

The many sesious accidents to boys, within a week or two, ought to warn them to keep out of mischief and out of danger, but we suppose it will not. We have a lot of boys, who are in a fair way to land in jail, or do worse. In some places, they have become a nuisance, by congregating to play, curse and fight. And they go further. They destroy any species of property they find handy, steal apples, ruin fences and do other things they should not. We don't see how their parents can be ignorant of what is going on.

Joe. Story, son of Geo. Story, met with a fearful accident last Friday afternoon Wm. Lahnum was moving a barn he had bought of T. P. Scott, along Jackson street, going north, when a number of boys followed along, watching the moving building, and playing. When near Mr. Kinmont's young Story stepped onto the big truck wheel under the moving building, and the motion threw him down in front, the wide wheel striking his foot, and crushing it. The cries of the boy called the attention of the men, who stopped the work, and put jack screws under the corner where he was, and took him out. He is lying in a critical condition, and will die.

Dr. Nusbaum's treatment for the cure of inebriates has again resulted in a grand success. Wm. Craig, a wealthy farmer of Steuben county, had become such a slave to the drinking habit, that he must have whisky with him all the time, even in the field. He had got very low, and now and then had tremens. Prosecutor Joseph Butler knew him and and pitying his condition, advised him to come to Auburn and take treatment of Dr. Nusbaum. This he did and after a thorough course, now goes home, a well man, and what is better, a sober man, with the desire for liquor all gone. It is a marked case and should be an encouragement to others to come and be cured of this terrible appetite.

Gall—In One Part.

"Gall is divided into three parts," said J. Cæsar, special correspondent for the Tribune at Rome, nearly 1,900 years ago. True he spelled it "Gaul," or some form thereof. But the thing of the greatest gall we have seen, is a late circular postal sent out by Gen. Jasper Packard, of the New Albany Tribune, He formerly lived at Laporte, but has been in some sort of federal office from congressman down, ever since he left a soft snap in the army in 1864. His circular begins to assuring democratic editors, to whom it is sent, that, "You repeatedly stated in 1890 that the McKinley law would raise prices all along the line." This is false. No one of us claimed that it would raise prices on anything except where it raised the rate of duty. And so far we have seen our predictions verified. And where the duty was lowered, as on sugar, we have seen prices decline.

Next, the general puts up a bluff. He will pay $25 if he cannot name five articles that have been lowered in price since the McKinley bill, as often as we can find five that have gone higher. Quite likely he could. He could find many that have gone lower, on which there is no tariff. Then he says he can take 10 bushels of wheat, corn, etc., and and buy with it as much goods as he could at any time since 1846. Quite likely he might, of some things at least. Now Dear General, we have a proposition to make. If you will find five articles on which a duty has been laid, that have decreased in price as much as they would have decreased, had there been no duty on them, we will find five articles that have not decreased in price as much as they would, had the tariff duty been removed. There, that is a fairer proposition than yours, for it is founded on facts, and yours is on theory, without facts.

Obituary.

Died Oct. 22, 1892, at his residence 5½ miles east of Auburn, George D. Mc Gown, aged 60 years, 2 months and 11 days. The deceased leaves a wife to mourn his loss With his death ends his family he being the last one to bear his name. He was born in Tyrone, Steuben county, N. Y, Aug. 11, 1832. In 1861 he moved to Wilmington township. In 1880 he moved his family to Springfield, O., and after residing there 8 years he returned to his old home in DeKalb County. The funeral was at Union Chapel, at 10:30 a. m., Oct. 25, Rev. J. J. Fred officiating. The interment was in the Evergreen cemetery in Auburn.

Report to the Courier.

Every precinct is requested to send election reports to this office. A blank will be furnished so as to make the work easy. But if by any chance there should be no blanks present, we hope a report will be made anyhow. The form sent from this office will be on card board, with the address on one side and blanks to fill out on the other. If you come, bring it in; if you don't come, you can send by someone, or if no one comes put on a one cent stamp and send by mail. Any expense will be made right by calling here. Send at earliest possible moment, so we can give at least a summary of the county vote next issue.

DeKalb County Teacher's Association.

The DeKalb County Teachers' Association will meet at Auburn Friday and Saturday Nov. 25 and 26. Program of exercises will be announced in a few days. Besides good home talent. Mrs. Sarah Tarpey Campbell will be with the association on Friday and give two talks on "Elements of Literature," illustrated in the Indiana series of primary readers. L. O. Dale of Wabash, Ind., one of the most eloquent superintendents in the state will be with the teachers Saturday and give two of his valuable talks. Rev. J. B. Watson, the "Canadian Orator" has been engaged for a lecture Friday evening.

Chas E. Kriebel, Pres.

Political Outlook.

According to latest reports there are a number of states in doubt, but the prospects are favorable to Cleveland. There are many possibilities to be considered of course, but he is likely to carry New York and Indiana both, and that would make his election almost a sure thing. He will get a few votes in Michigan, and may carry Illinois and Wisconsin. Altogether, it looks bright for him, as well as for our local ticket.

Card of Thanks.

I earnestly thank my kind neighbors for the assistance and sympathy given me during the last sickness of Mr. McGown.

WHO PAYS THE DUTY?

A Big Bull by Secretary of Agriculture Rusk.

The proposition that the foreigner pays the duty has received a deadly blow in the house of its friends. Uncle Jerry Rusk, the secretary of agriculture, who has always seemed impressed with the idea that it is his highest duty to instruct the farmers of the country in the beauties of protection, has committed himself to a most astounding "free trade heresy," admitting even that the tariff tax is added to the cost of goods and is thus paid by the consumer.

The following communication tells its own tale:

Weather Bureau, Washington, Feb. 8.

The Secretary of Agriculture:

Sir—I have the honor to return herewith house bill No. 3,947, appropriating $15,000 to establish signal display stations on Middle and Thunder Bay islands in Lake Huron, which you transmitted to me for suggestion. * * * This bill is of the same general character as senate bill No. 295, which I returned to you Dec. 26, 1891, and which appropriated $12,700 for this purpose. The estimate for this bill was originally made by this office, but since that time a change in the tariff laws has nearly doubled the cost to the government of telegraph cables. The government now cannot import free of duty as formerly. Instead of $1,500 a mile the estimates should be increased to—

7 miles cable, at $3,000 per mile	$21,000
22 miles land line, at $100 per mile	2,200
Total	$23,200

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Mark W. Harrington,
Chief of Weather Bureau.

Department of Agriculture, Feb. 11.

Respectfully referred to the committee on interstate and foreign commerce, house of representatives. I approve of the recommendation of Professor M. W. Harrington.

J. M. Rusk, Secretary.

But there is one feature of the case here which Uncle Jerry did not point out in his formal approval of the weather bureau's report. He did not remind the house committee that when Uncle Sam pays duties at the custom house on telegraph cables for the weather bureau he merely pays the money from one pocket into another. The custom house returns are increased and the weather bureau costs more; but it is all the same to Uncle Sam, as he has the money in his other pocket.

Could not Uncle Jerry have pointed out to the American farmer that the same does not hold true of him, that when he pays the tariff tax his dollars are transferred to Uncle Sam's pocket, or, what is still worse, to the pocket of some protected tariff baron, and that they return not again?

A Word to Farmers.

Republican protectionists, when unable to prove that their sort of protection increases wages, are fond of saying that at any rate it enables capitalists to go on manufacturing and thus affords employment to the men who eat the products of the farmer. In this way they figure out that Republican protection protects the farmer. The thing for the farmer they say is the home market, and this Republican protection affords him.

But the argument will not bear examination. Mr. C. Wood Davis, whose statistics are frequently quoted by The American Economist, organ of the Republican protectionists, finds that between 1850 and 1889 the population of the United States increased 175 per cent., while in the same period our production of cattle increased 185 per cent.; of cotton, 201 per cent.; of corn, 257 per cent.; of wheat, 389 per cent., and of oats, 411 per cent. Most of those years were years of high protection, yet what would have become of the farmer if he had been forced to depend for the sale of his products upon the home market? While population was not quite trebling, the production of cotton was rather more than trebled, that of corn was much more than trebled, that of wheat was vastly more than trebled and that of oats was more than quintupled. Republican protectionists say that protection makes more men use the farmer's products, but here we see that the farmer kept far ahead of the growth of population. Crops must have rotted on the ground had the farmer been forced to depend on the home market alone.

HISTORY OF A WEEK.

PEOPLE, PLACES AND THINGS OF THE WORLD.

The World's Fair May be Opened on Sundays—A Woman's Body Chopped to Pieces—A Shocking Accident—A Pennsylvania Mining Town Destroyed by Fire—Claim a County.

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

It May Be Opened on Sundays to the Public.

Chicago special: At their next meeting, Directors of the World's Fair will probably declare that the exposition must be kept open on Sundays, and formally inaugurate the campaign that is expected to end in the repeal by Congress of the Sunday clause put on the appropriation bill. As the case now stands, both national and local boards are on record as committed to Sunday closing. The Chicago Directors, months ago, accepted $2,500,000 appropriation with the closing clause attached and last week the national committee voted that the exposition should be locked on Sunday. In neither case, however, can it be said that the action taken was final or that it fairly represented the sentiment of each board. Of the forty-five men on the board, it is believed forty-three are strongly in favor of a seven day fair. To what extent the local board will figure in the campaign against Sunday closing has not been decided. It is likely, however, that an address will be issued and given the widest possible circulation. It will take the form of an appeal to laboring men and other organized bodies, asking that they should express their sentiments to Congress and the Senate.

CLAIM A COUNTY.

Heirs of Senor Corpus Christy are After an Immense Ttract of Land in Colorado.

A claim has just been filed in the United States court of private land claims at Santa Fe, N. M., which involves a tract of land thirty-three miles square in the Southwestern corner of Colorado, claiming that the grant was made to Senor Corpus Christy by the king of Spain, 214 years ago. The plaintiffs are Benjamin Hodges and several relatives, all of whom reside in the neigborhood of Rockford, Ohio. They are great-grandchildren of the ancient senor. The United States Government and all persons laying claim to any part or parcel of the land are the defendants. This claim embraces almost the whole of Montezuma County, an area of nearly 700,000 acres, considerably greater than the area of the State of Rhode Island. The county now has 1,520 inhabitants.

A Little Mining Town in Pennsylvania Devastated by Fire.

The house occupied by Andrew Sultz, at Nebuck Mountain, Pa., was discovered to be on fire. An alarm was promptly given, but the fire rapidly spread, the occupants being rescued with difficulty. A high wind was blowing and the drought-afflicted village was without water. So quickly did the flames spread that the fourteen houses composing the block were soon enveloped and in two hours the little town was razed to the ground. Nothing could be done by the people, and the sturdy miners sought only to save what household effects they could. The greater number lost their entire furniture and clothing, practically all they possessed. The houses were built and owned by the Mill Creek Company and cost $5,000; insured.

Telegraphers Win.

All the trouble between the telegraph operators and the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe road was settled at a conference held at Chicago, recently, by President Manvel and General Manager Robinson, representing the railroad, and Chief Ramsey, of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, and a committee of the order representing the operators. The operators gained their points. Hereafter the minimum rate of wages of the operators will be $55 a month, while that of the train dispatchers will be $120. Shorter hours will prevail and pay will be given for over time, etc.

A Shocking Accident.

James McMillan, a laborer at J. C. Peters' saw-mill, Fort Wayne, Ind., was caught in the bull wheel used for drawing in logs and had both legs broken below the knee and was otherwise injured. His injuries were of a shocking nature. His left leg was broken in two places and his knee dislocated; his right thigh was broken and badly crushed; the right calvicle was broken and the left side was crushed in, breaking several ribs and injuring the lungs. McMillan was a trusted employe and has a wife and three children. He cannot live.

Four Burned.

Des Moines special: By the burning of George Cage's residence near this city four of its inmates were burned to death and Mr. Cage inhaled the flames. He will die. The dead are: Mrs. John Cage and child and two children of George Cage, aged 2 and 5 years.

A Woman's Body Chopped to Pieces.

Paris special: Rag pickers in the Rue Bottzaris found in a bundle of rags the body of a woman cut in twelve pieces. The pieces had been soaked in carbolic acid and it was supposed at first that they were from a hospital or laboratory. This story was upset, however, by the evidences of the clumsy barbarity with which the body had been hacked apart. The police think that the woman was murdered.

Remarkable Case of Mistaken Identity.

Indianapolis special: A singular case of mistaken identity developed in the trial of William Lyons, a foreman in the Pennsylvania railway yards. He was charged with burglarizing the residence of Dr. W. H. Wishard, having been discovered at an early morning hour in their chamber by Miss Hattie and Elizabeth Wishard. The description given of the burglar answered to Lyons admirably. It was shown by the defense that on the night in question Lyons was excused from duty on account of illness, and Dr. Wishard was the attendant physician, and Wishard, upon consulting his books, found he had really visited the defendant as a patient. The alibi was complete in every detail and Lyons was discharged.

IN RUINS

Is the Beautiful Euclid Avenue Opera-House in Cleveland.

Fire broke out in the cupola of the Euclid Avenue Opera House at Cleveland, from a cause at present unknown, and that beautiful play house was soon in ruins. The Opera house fronts on Sheriff street, but its entrance is through the Heard Block from Euclid avenue.

In less than thirty minutes after the fire had started the structure was completely cleaned out, the roof had fallen, but the flames were confined within the four walls. There was a furious gale blowing and danger that the fire would spread to adjoining buildings along Sheriff street, but the department put forth every effort to prevent its spreading. Adjoining stores along Euclid avenue were filled with a suffocating smoke and their contents badly damaged. Three explosions occurred during the progress of the fire, but from what cause is not known. The Hanlon Superba Company, which was on the boards for a week, lost all its scenery and appurtenances, besides its costumes, which it values at a total of $25,000. Its plans for the season are seriously deranged.

It is supposed the fire was started from a cross of electric light wires in the cupola over the Sheriff Street entrance. Its spread was rapid, and within five minutes the entire interior was a mass of flames. The Heard Block, through which entrance was had from Euclid avenue, suffered but slightly.

SLAUGHTERED.

The Aztec Inhabitants of the Village of Temochio Put to Death.

Elpaso (Tex.) special: The village of Temochio, whose nearly pure Aztec inhabitants have been rebelling against the State and Federal Governments on account of excessive taxation, extortion by Government officials and Government interference in their religious belief, has been wiped out of existence by the Government troops. Temochio is in the mountains of Southwestern Chihuahua, Mexico. Two months ago Gen. Ranjel took the Eleventh Battalion to Temochio to enforce the tax payment and force the acceptance of Government officials to take charge. The alternative was that every Temochion should be killed. The first attack resulted in the repulse of the troops with twenty-two officers and fourteen men killed, and two officers and forty-five men taken prisoners. Then President Diaz determined to annihilate the village. Two weeks ago 1,200 troops were sent against thirty-eight Temochions and their families. The struggle was terrible. Three hundred and sixty-eight soldiers were killed and many wounded. Not a Temochion in the village was left. The village presented a terrible aspect.

FATAL STEAMBOAT EXPLOSION.

The Wakefield Blows Up on the Potomac River, Killing Four Men.

Washington special: The steam chimney of the steamboat Wakefield, belonging to the Potomac River Steamboat Company, blew off and killed three men, possibly four, and more or less seriously injuring three others. The boat was on her return trip to Washington when off Maryland point, about fifty miles down the river, the accident happened. Alexander Dollman and James Johnson, colored firemen, were instantly killed by flying fragments, and William Clark, a colored boot black, was blown off the boat by the shock and drowned. Another colored man is missing and it is feared that he met the fate of the boot black. E. L. Garmond, white, an assistant engineer, was badly bruised about the head and arms. William M. Motley and William Carney, colored deck hands, were badly scalded and otherwise injured. The Wakefield was only slightly damaged and immediately after the accident was towed about forty miles from Washington. The Wakefield was used principally as a freight boat, stopping at all the Potomac River landings for a distance of eighty-five miles down.

A FAMILY'S FATE.

Terrible Result of a Fire in the City of Cleveland.

Fire broke out in the two-story frame building at No. 1241 Central avenue Cleveland, Ohio, and before the Fire Department could do any work the entire Shannon famly, husband, wife and two children, were burned to death. The building is occupied as a dwelling, with saloon attachment in front. Nobody knows how the fire started, but it is supposed it started in the barroom, as the people were sleeping above it. The four bodies have been recovered and are at the morgue.

The family, it is said, used the large front room as a sleeping apartment. They were all probably overcome by the smoke before the situation was realized. The front half of the building was completely destroyed, and the four bodies were buried in the burned timbers. Shannon was 28 years old and his wife was 32. The eldest boy, James, Jr., was 6 years old, and John, the youngest, 4 years. The search for the bodies was begun by the firemen as soon as the debris could be sufficiently cooled, and all were recovered in a terribly disfigured condition.

HE POISONED HIS WIFE.

Watched Her Sufferings and then Killed Himself.

Daniel Sullivan of Roslyn, L. I., committed suicide by taking strychnine, after an unsuccessful but horrible attempt to poison his wife. After administering the poison, Sullivan watched his wife writhing in excruciating agony for hours, denying her even so little as a glass of water, cursing her when she pleaded for a doctor, and calling upon her to die, and die quickly. Their infant son, a nursing baby, was in the room at the time, unattended, and wailing for nourishment, which the inhuman father denied it. After indulging himself with such a scene for hours, and thinking his wife's end but a question of a few minutes, Sullivan swallowed a quantity of strychnine and died in fearful agony, calling for mercy, forgiveness and aid to the last. Mrs. Sullivan is still alive, but her condition is critical.

Judge Blodgett Resigns.

Judge Blodgett, who for twenty-two years has presided over the United States District Court, in Chicago, confirmed the statement that his resignation was in the hands of the President. His resignation was to take effect the first Monday in December, he said. One of the reasons for Judge Blodgett's retirement is the fact that his duties as counsel for the Behring Sea Commission will compel him to be absent from Chicago until a decision is reached by the arbitrators.

An Indian Uprising.

Globe (Ariz.) special: Some Chiricahuas are on the war-path. They fired upon hunter James Hall near McImilan. An Indian and a squaw were recently killed by the same band near Black Border. Indians chased John Kriser and other cowboys near Globe. A sheriff's posse and troops are now following the Indians near San Pedro.

Smothered to Death.

At the site of a new bridge which the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy is building across the Missouri River opposite Alton, Ill., three hands, while working in the air chamber of a steel caisson, seventy-five feet below the surface of the river, forgot how to work the valve doors and were smothered before relief could be furnished. All were unknown, and after the coroner's inquest were buried on the bank of the river.

Terrible Explosion at Lima, Ohio.

A terrible explosion occurred at the nitro-glycerine works of the High Explosive Company, three miles from Lima, Ohio. A. Shoup, a workman, was blown literally to atoms, parts of his body being picked up at various points. Benjamin Dowd and Tom McHugh, also workmen, were badly injured and may die. Heavy French plate glass in stores in Lima were broken by the shock, which was also distinctly felt at Ada, Ohio, fifteen miles distant.

Killed by a Cup of Coffee.

A peculiar accident that resulted in the death of a 3-year-old girl happened at Pittsburgh, Pa. Stella Tirevel was the little victim. Her mother was filling a cup of coffee over the child's head, as she sat in the chair at the table, when the handle of the coffee-pot broke and the contents were poured over the little one. She was scalded dreadfully, and despite the efforts of the physicians died a few hours after the accident.

Heavy Rains in England.

London special: According to reports from the midland counties rain has fallen continuously in different sections of that region for from twenty-four to fifty hours. Thousands of acres in West Norfolk are submerged and the potatoes and other crops are rotting in the fields. The thermometer has rizen 30 degrees in forty-eight hours.

Terrible Accident at Lima.

A horrible accident happened at the Western limestone quarries, Lima, Ohio. Joseph Koontz and Henry Bowers accidentally got on top of the kiln which gave way, precipitating the men on the red hot lime. It was impossible to get at them and they were roasted alive in the presence of hundreds of friends.

Sensational Arrest.

Warren P. Watrous, well known in Washington commercial circles as a real estate and note broker, has been arrested on a warrant charging him with forgery, and was released on bail. The complainant in the case is Charles L. Dubois, of the banking house of Dubois & Co. The amount involved is small.

Crespo's Government to Be Recognized.

The State Department is in receipt of a cable message from Minister Scruggs reporting that arrangements for the recognition of the new Government of Venezuela under Gen. Crespo by the United States were concluded Oct. 18, and that the formal ceremonies of recognition took place Sunday, the 23d.

Shot His Wife's Paramour.

Joseph Fournier, a prominent saloon keeper and politician of Toledo, fatally shot James Coggins, a gambler. Fournier's wife was arrested in a house of assignation with Coggins. The enraged husband threatened to take Coggins life, and the shooting was the result.

A Reward is Offered.

J. H. Eldridge, of West Salem, Ohio, has offered a reward of $500 for the arrest and conviction of the murderers of his nephew, F. G. Eldridge, whose dead body was found inside the breakwater last week, with two coupling links tied around the neck.

Instantly Killed.

Washington special: John Thrush, a brakeman on the Pennsylvania railroad, in an effort to avoid a north-bound train, stepped on the track just beyond the navy yard tunnel and was instantly killed by a southbound train, which he did not see.

Schooner Goes Down.

The schooner Ellen Hammond, laden with wheat, bound from Milwaukee to Manistee, Mich., was sunk by striking a pier while making port at the latter place. All on board escaped, except Capt. Michaelson, who was drowned.

Two Girls Burned to Death.

A fire in the Crocker block, 52 Water street, Cleveland, Ohio, destroyed the rag warehouse of Koblitz Bros. Thirty girls were at work sorting rags on the fourth floor. Two of them are missing. Loss $100,000.

Smothered to Death by Burglars.

Ernest Keenard, aged 65, was found sitting dead in an arm chair in his library at Melrose, a suburb of Chicago, recently. The house had been robbed and the old man smothered to death.

Horses Killed by a Train.

While Thomas McCafferty, of Palestine, Ohio, was drawing grain to market, a passenger train ran into his wagan, killing one of his horses and severely injuring Mr. McCafferty.

Tumbled Into Hot Water.

At Fostoria, O., Melville, the 5-year-old son of A. J. Zabst, fell into a bucket of hot water and was so badly scalded that death resulted soon afterward.

Car Famine.

There is a large and growing grain blockade and car famine at Chicago. It is said that there are now 10,000 loaded grain cars awaiting transportation.

THE TIN PLATE CIRCUS.

SOME ORIGINAL TRICKS OF CLOWN M'KINLEY.

Statistician Peele on the Question of Wages—Senator Dawes Is Rattled—Rebates Favor Foreigners—Our "Happy Farmers"—Crockery Duties and Prices.

Performed at Philadelphia.

We doubt if there ever has been in any previous campaign anything comparable to the silliness of the "American tin" performances which Mr. McKinley and his associates have been guilty of. When McKinley spoke in Philadelpdia Sept. 23, the following solemn buffoonery was gone through with in the Academy of Music, according to the Philadelphia Press:

"While he was telling of the new industries that had been built up in this country, a banner made of tin and bearing the inscription, 'American tin, 1892, made at Norristown,' was carried down the platform. The applause which greeted the appearance of the banner interrupted the Governor, and he turned and looked at the banner. 'Another trophy to a protective tariff' was his comment, and then cheers were given for American tin."

Col. McClure exposed the humbug of this performance completely a few nights later, but the manager of the "American Tin Works at Norristown" has since added the final touch. He says the works have been shut down, and their sixty workmen thrown out of employment because of the delay in the arrival of material from Wales. There are, he says, 250 tons of plates on the way, all of which have been rolled in Wales, and that when the plates arrive, they will be dipped at the works in tin. As for the sources of his tin supply, he says: "I purchase it from the importers in New York. It comes from various parts of the world, and I am frank in saying that although I have looked high and low for the American article, I have never seen it." He goes on to "give away" the entire business by adding:

"I am willing to tell the truth about this matter, and nothing but the truth, and therefore I mean exactly what I say—that the sheets, pig tin, and palm oil are imported. Therefore, if, at any time there should be a delay in the arrival of these materials, we would be compelled to shut down, as we have done this week. We have ten tin-men at work this week, and they are all men who were employed in the factory at Wales."

That is the plain truth about the tin banner which McKinley pointed to with pride as the symbol of a new American industry. It was made entirely of foreign material, by foreign workmen imported for the purpose, and there was nothing American about it save the glamour of humbug which McKinley threw over it. His antics with it were only a little more intense than were those of the Republican candidate for the Vice-Presidency and Warner Miller at the Cooper Institute meeting here last week when they passed around among the audience "samples" of American tin made in a similar manner. The distribution of small plates among the school children of this city is another variation of the entertainment. What is to be said of the intellectual and moral caliber of a great party whose leading minds conceive that the people can be induced by such exhibitions as these to bear patiently a tax of $25,000,000? The manager of the Norristown works says he has not been able to discover any American tin, and his testimony is confirmed by that of every other man who has tried to buy any. The entire product is absorbed in samples for mass meetings and Republican newspaper office windows, and much of this, like the Philadelphia banner, is made of foreign material. The Temescal tin mines, whose product was in so much dispute for a considerable period, have been shut down because of failure of the ore, and the Tribune of to-day has extracted from Congressman Bowers the valuable opinion that they are full of tin, but that they have been shut down by their English owners in order to "freeze out" some of the stockholders. Mr. Bowers is convinced of this because he visited the mines and was not allowed to look into them!—New York Evening Post.

Senator Dawes Rattled.

The Question Clubs of Massachusetts have been putting some queries to Senator Dawes in regard to the McKinley tax on wool, reminding him that he was in favor of free wool in 1860, and asking him if it was true, as reported in the Boston Journal, that he believed that "whenever raw material entering into manufacturing here cannot be produced here in sufficient quantities and at such cost as to make its use in manufacturing here profitable, it should be admitted free of duty." The Senator answered that he had been correctly quoted, and that "by that test the clause alluded to (the one increasing the duty on carpet wools from 25 to 32 per cent.) must, with me, stand or fall. But he does not think the McKinley bill can "be best judged by piecemeal, any more than a house can be best judged by testing here and there a brick in it." That is to say, the Senator would be in favor of knocking out the wool brick and many others, in accordance with the demands of his constituents, but thinks the riddled McKinley edifice would still be fair to look upon. At any rate, he is unusually bold and frank for a Republican in a Presidential year, though we fear it must be charged to the fact that he is not seeking re-election. It is impossible to conceive of the Hon. Henry C. Lodge at this interesting political juncture admitting, with Mr. Dawes, that the "McKinley law is not perfect."—New York Evening Post.

Jekyl-Hyde-Medill.

The following extract from an address delivered by Hon. Joseph Medill, editor of the Chicago Tribune, before the American Agricultural Association of the West, appeared in yesterday's Republic, but it is worth reproducing:

"I understate the truth when I say that the farmers of the West and the planters of the South are charged $500,900,000 a year on their goods, for the profit of protected Eastern manufacturers, more than is fair and necessary on the principle of live and let live."

This is Mr. Medill's real opinion, to which he gives utterance during three years and nine months out of every four years. During the remaining three months, just preceding a Presidential election, he advises the farmers of the West and the planters of the South to vote for a party that imposed and keeps up these unfair and unnecessary taxes.—St. Louis Republic.

No Secrecy Asked by Labor.

Labor Commissioner Peck, of New York, who ought to be designated rather Commissioner for Capital Peck, states in his reply to the court at Albany that every time he sent out circulars asking for information he "invariably gave pledges of secrecy."

It is a curious fact in the transactions carried on by Commissioner Peck that it was only protected monopolists who desired this pledge at his hands. Labor has asked no secrecy from Peck. If there be a workingman from end to end of this country whose wages have been increased by the McKinley bill he will excuse Peck from keeping the fact secret. If the McKinley bill had raised the wages of any rank, or any division of workingmen, they would be eager to proclaim the fact. Where are these men? Who are they? In what industry are they occupied? No workingman wants to rob a tariff law or any other law of the credit due it for raising his wages. Labor asks no secrecy about its fortune under the McKinley law.—Chicago Herald.

How Peck Is Supported.

In its attempt to bolster up the foolish and fraudulent figures put forth by Labor Commissioner Peck, the Johnstown Republican thus refers to the report of Commissioner Wadlin of Massachusetts:

"Labor Commissioner Horace G. Wadlin of Massachusetts has reported that wages have been increased in the Old Bay State, during the first year of the McKinley tariff."

We are greatly obliged to our contemporary for citing Commissioner Wadlin. Here is the testimoney submitted by that very accurate and upright official.

1. Average annual increase of wages for the six years previous to the enactment of the M'Kinley tariff	$12.16
Annual increase of wages for 1891 under the McKinley tariff....	3.97
Decrease under McKinley tariff..	$8.19
2. Average annual increase in total wages for six years previous to the enactment of the McKinley tariff....	$4,980,411
Annual increase in total wages for 1891 under the McKinley tariff....	3,335,945
Decrease under McKinley tariff..	$1,624,466
3. Average annual increase in materials used for six years previous to the enactment of the McKinley tariff....	$12,000,000
Annual increase in materials used for 1891 under McKinley tariff....	9,774,596
Decrease under McKinley tariff..	$2,225,404
4. Average annual increase in manufactured product for six years previous to the enactment of the McKinley tariff....	$23,700,000
Annual increase in manufactured product for 1891 under McKinley tariff....	8,078,053
Decrease under McKinley tariff..	$15,631,947

The Massachusetts report shows that the McKinley tariff has stunted the State's industrial growth, checking the increase for six years previous in the average wages, the total wages, the materials used, and the manufactured product. It has impaired the efficiency and reward of labor and deprived industry of the advance which six years had entitled it to expect. This is the result of McKinleyism in Massachusetts, dear Republican, and we have no doubt the result in the State of New York is substantially the same, the statements of the discredited and disgraced Peck to the contrary, notwithstanding.—Gloversville Standard.

Wages in Building Trades.

That statistical evader of justice, Mr. Peck, has produced some more figures in which the protectionists seem to find great comfort. They purport to show that wages in the building trades increased from 1890 to 1891. As a matter of fact, wages in the building trades have been going up for many years. No one, however, but a headlong, thoughtless, open-mouthed swallower of protection lies would ever suppose that carpenters, masons and people engaged in kindred pursuits owe their prosperity to the taxes which the Government levies on them.

There is no law on the statute book, and even Mr. McKinley would not undertake to invent one, that taxes houses imported from Europe, or roofs, or stairs or paved streets or ceilings. The art of driving a nail or of carrying a hod is not taxed. And, as we all know, there is no duty on carpenters or engineers or lathers or stonecutters.

The wages in building trades have had a tendency to advance for at least half a century, and the great reason for their going up is because the men are more their own masters than are the hands employed by a trust or a single protected capitalist.

The mind that supposes that a bricklayer or a stair-builder can be protected by a tariff which increases the cost of his living, itself needs a protection that it is far beyond the power of any statute to grant.

Perhaps such a mind may take its first step in intelligence by grappling with this problem. A correspondent of the World, who has the courage to sign his name, A. Marcroft, writes as follows:

"In this city carpenters are getting $3.50 a day of eight hours; in Brooklyn they get $3.25 per day of eight hours; in Jersey City $3 per day of nine hours; in Hoboken they get $2.75 per day of nine hours, and in Westchester County $2.50 per day of ten hours."

How can the tariff account for these differences? It is an easy problem if tackled cautiously, and if no protection professor is consulted.—N. Y. World.

Republican Romance Spoiled.

Lately the Republican papers outside of Indiana have been referring to an alleged report made by State Statistician Peele, showing an advance in wages since the enactment of the McKinley tariff. The Republican papers of this State are not referring to it, because no such report has ever been made. In order to disprove this Republican falsehood, Statistician Peele makes the following statement for publication:

"I have made no report since the report for 1890 was issued. The report for 1891 will not be made until the next Legislature convenes, next January, when it will be submitted to them printed. It will be a general report of statistics of Indiana, but there will be no comparison of wages in it, because I have nothing to compare it with. There is not a scrap of data in my office giving any information of the wages received by Indiana workmen prior to the passage of the McKinley tariff. How is it possible, then, for me or any one else to make any comparison with the wages received since the passage of the McKinley bill? You see, therefore, how false the statement circulated by Republicans is. It is a Republican trick.

"I do not believe there is a workman in Indiana whose wages have been increased on account of the McKinley tariff. But we all know here that the coal miners of Indiana receive less in wages now than before the election of Mr. Harrison. No one can deny that statement."

A few weeks ago the Indianapolis Sentinel advertised for the photograph of an Indiana workman whose wages had been increased on account of the McKinley tariff. It is said that it received but one, the photograph of a printer of a county paper who had made extra money setting up sheriff sales.

Mr. Peele was elected in 1890 on the Democratic ticket and is the Democratic nominee for the same office this year.—New York Times.

Columbian Parade a Failure.

A great oversight was made by the managers of the Columbian parade in New York. The banners and the floats were symbolical of music, art, printing, physical science, etc., but the greatest institution of modern times, the one thing that has made this the greatest of modern nations, was entirely forgotten in the make-up of the parade. No banner bore that most significant of all American words—"protection," the newly discovered method of increasing protection and enriching a nation by taxation. The biggest float of all should have been an American tin-plate mill in operation and showing the recently landed Welshmen in the act of dipping imported steel sheets into the imported tin and imported palm oil, with a special agent of the Treasury stamping "American" on each shining sheet. These should then have been made into suitable emblems of "protection" and distributed broadcast to the millions of spectators, including the thousands of school children of New York, who had not previously been supplied. The spectacle would have been inspiring, and would have made an indelible impression upon all present. It is to be hoped that this great idea will receive proper attention at Chicago next year.

Crockery Duties and Prices.

We hear a great deal lately about a "free breakfast table" given to us by Republican reciprocity. Of course, it is a fraud. Sugar still bears a duty of ½ cent a pound, every mill of which is collected by the sugar trust. Tea and coffee have been on the free list for years, and the only change that "reciprocity" can make is to put a duty on them as has already been done when they come from certain countries. But civilized man eats his breakfast from dishes. Did McKinley make these free? Let's see!

The following table gives the net wholesale price for the various articles making a set of crockery needed for the farmer's table, in England and the United States; also the difference between the English price and American price, and the amount of duty that must be paid when the goods are imported. The kind of ware for which the prices are given is what is known as white granite ware:

	Wholesale Price Eng.	U. S.	U. S. Prices, Higher	U. S. Duties.
1 dozen bakers....	$ 84	$1.40	$ 56	$ 46
1 dozen bowls....	47	74	27	26
2 covered butters..	28	47	19	16
1 dozen individual butters....	9	15	6	5
1 doz. handled coffee cups....	44	80	36	24
½ dozen covered dishes....	1.12	1.80	68	62
½ dozen ordinary dishes....	23	40	17	13
2 creams....	9	20	11	08
1 dozen flat plates..	35	60	25	19
1 dozen deep plates	35	64	29	19
1 doz. fruit saucers	14	23	09	08
2 sugars....	21	38	17	12
1 dozen handled tea cups....	37	67	30	26
1 tea pot....	12	23	11	7

A set of crockery as above, costing $5.10 in England, costs $8.71 in the United States, the United States price being $3.61 higher. The duties on the ware alone amount to $2.81. Duty at the rate of 55 per cent. is also levied on the packages in which the ware is packed, and the other expenses of purchase, which, added to $2.81, make the whole duty equal to the difference between the English and American price. The beneficiary is the crockery combine.

Rebates Favor Foreigners.

Many intelligent citizens find it hard to believe that our protected manufacturers sell their products cheaper to foreign than to our own consumers. There are many reasons, and one of them is that our manufacturers can afford to sell cheaper to foreigners. Our tariff makers intended that this should be done when they inserted the "rebate" clauses in their "protection" measures. These rebates favor foreigners by giving our manufacturers cheaper raw materials when they manufacture goods for export. If any one doubts this, let him read the following from the Sac (Iowa) Sun, copied in the American Economist of Oct. 14:

"The present protective tariff rebates the duty—pays it back—on all raw material imported and manufactured into articles which are then exported, 1 per cent. only being retained to pay expenses of collection. This is done to enable our manufacturers to secure raw materials (not produced in this country) which are to be manufactured for export as cheap as they can be had in foreign countries, and thereby to compete in other countries with foreign manufacturers, which they are doing very largely."

The McKinley tariff may be hard on foreigners, but it is much harder on Americans, who get no relief from its burdensome taxation and prices. "Protective" or "American" tariffs, as their friends like to call them, always discriminate against Americans and in favor of foreigners.

A Wolf in Sheep's Clothing.

With the duty higher and the price of wool lower than ever before, Bradstreet's of Oct. 1, says: "Manufacturers show a greater inclination to take wool, The market has weakened on several grades, and there is good reason to believe that it will go lower before advancing. Present conditions are difficult to explain on the basis of supplies."

And yet we have a party with gall enough to send the author of this calamity amongst the flocks of Vermont and Ohio to express sympathy by trying to bleat with the sheep. It is no wonder the sheep in Vermont took to the woods when they heard the wolf's voice. It is said that consternation is also seizing the herds in Ohio, and that when Gov. McKinley appears on the Republican side of the field all of the wise old rams, followed by the rest of the flock, make a break for the Democratic side of the field, where they huddle together bleating and trembling until the Republican wolf in sheep's clothing is safely out of sight. The Democrats are beginning to understand the meaning of the enthusiasm and noisy demonstrations that attend McKinley in these regions, and well they intend to take good care of the frightened lambs.

"Happy Farmers."

The American Economist of Oct. 14th quotes from the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle that "Ogden farmers are in good humor over the protection prices which are being paid for their produce—barley at 73c, with tendency upward; potatoes firm at 50c, and cabbage $3 per hundred."

The Ogden farmer must have a narrow mind and be of a happy disposition if he can extract sunshine from cabbage, potatoes and barley when his neighbor's protected wheat, corn, oats, rye, wool and horses are selling for unusually low prices, and when farm lands everywhere are declining in value. As long as prices of our leading farm products are determined in foreign market the farmer need not trouble himself about trying to change them by tariff legislation. But there is need of his troubling himself about the price of what he buys, which consists largely of things imported and the price of which can therefore be raised by legislation. This is the end of the tariff rope on which he should do his pulling unless he prefers, as he seems to do, to continue in the debtor class.

Low Wages in Protected Mills.

It is undisputed that wages are higher in unprotected than in protected industries. Carpenters, masons, engineers, and printers belong to the best-paid class of workers. This is not an accident, but is a logical outcome of a tariff that fosters combines. It is but natural that protected manufacturers organized to take advantage of a high tariff by advancing or sustaining prices, should use their consolidated power to dictate terms to their employes. Another reason for the lower wages and unusually harsh treatment of labor in the mills of protected monopolists is found in the fact, explained at length by Andrew Carnegie, that the officers of great corporations deal at long range with their employes, do not come into daily contact with them, and lack that sympathy which would often prevent strikes, lockouts and riots. Hence it is that workers in protected mines and mills constitute our worst-paid, most insecure, and therefore dangerous classes.

IF YOU CAN READ

and write, and are possessed of fair intelligence, you are fully qualified to make a grand success of what we offer you. We have lately published at great expense and labor a perfect wonder in the way of an Illustrated Gift Book, suitable to all classes, an ornament to any home, and at a price that brings it within the reach of all, even those of moderate means. Heretofore only those who indulged in luxuries have felt that they could afford a book of this class, as they are sold in book stores at $5.00 and upwards. The book which we offer is not in any way inferior to those above referred to, but is far superior to hundreds of books of this nature that are sold at prices exceeding ours by an enormous per cent. It is selling with a rush wherever shown. Agents have only to show the book and mention the price, and it sells on its merits without further talking. No better Christmas, New Year's or Birthday present can be selected. It will sell, not only for holiday trade, but at all seasons of the year, for the reason that all will want it in their homes, and will have it as soon as they know the low price at which our agents can furnish them. Reader if you need profitable employment, and a business in which you can and will take pride, as well as make money rapidly, do not fail to send for circulars containing private terms to agents, and full information, which will be sent FREE upon application. Old and new agents alike are making handsome salaries—yes, fortunes. Many of those who are making the best records are now at the agency business, having had no previous experience. Make a start—the field is entirely new. No such terms have been offered agents as we now offer on this wonderful book. Special qualifications not necessary, for it sells everywhere at sight. Perhaps you have at some time been unsuccessful at the agency business. If so, there is every reason why you should try this, the PRINCE of gift books, as failure is impossible if you make A START. Write us to-day, study our circulars and directions, then order an outfit and go to work with push and energy. You may make the greatest mistake of your life, if you allow this GOLDEN opportunity to pass unimproved.

I BIDE MY TIME.

I bide my time. Whenever shadows darken
Along my path I do but lift mine eyes,
And faith reveals fair shores beyond the skies;
And through earth's harsh, discordant sounds I hearken
And hear divinest music from afar,
Sweet sounds from lands where half my loved ones are.
I bide—I bide my time.

I bide my time. Whatever woes assail me,
I know the strife is only for a day;
A friend waits for me farther on the way,
A friend too faithful and too true to fail me,
Who will bid all life's jarring turmoil cease,
And lead me on to realms of perfect peace.
I bide—I bide my time.

I bide my time. This conflict of resistance,
This drop of rapture in a cup of pain,
This wear and tear of body and of brain,
But fits my spirit for the new existence
Which waits me in the happy by and by.
So, come what may, I'll lift my eyes and cry:
"I bide—I bide my time."

UNDER SUSPICION.

Something very unusual to quiet Talmley had happened, and Talmley was decidedly uncomfortable about it.

Of course everybody knew, as everybody knew everything in that delightful place, where each neighbor was a friend, each friend a brother: and what the village folk knew was this—the miller, old Harvey Jameson, had been robbed.

"A queer business," said the miller, shaking his dusty head solemnly, and telling the circumstance for the fiftieth time to his near neighbor, Farmer Greene, who had dropped in to sympathize with his old friend: "nobody knew I had the money but my daughter Jennie and young Levoe, and I can't suspect a single soul. I put the money in a tin box, and put that among a lot of other boxes in the cupboard, waitin' until I could go to the bank with it, an' lo and behold! when I went to get it out yesterday, there wasn't a single sign of box or money. I can't understand it."

"Neither can I, neighbor," said Greene, running a brawny hand over his shock of untidy hair; "neither can I. But I do think you've set too much store by that young man ye've took into your house, an' mebbe ye've mistook him. He's a deal too fine about his cloths an' his hands, an' his hair, to be any too honest; but," cautiously, as he saw the flush that stole over Jameson's face, "but mebbe I'm talkin' too fast; but it's mighty curious, and one don't know what to think."

"One might try to think nothin' that weren't charitable," said the miller, gravely, "an' I don't suspect the lad. It is more'n I'd like to lose, for it takes a time to earn it. But young Levoe didn't have nothin' to do with the stealin'—no more'n you or me—an' I'd rather people wouldn't kinder hint he had."

"Taint in nature not to think it seein' he's a stranger, an' nobody knows what or who he is; an' he has fine ways with him an' talks like a schoolmaster," said Greene, stubbornly. "I don't like to see you took in, neighbor, and I'm mighty much afraid you are by that millhand of yourn."

Then Greene held out his hand to the miller, who was deep in thought, and bade him good-day, and betook himself to his duties on the farm hard by the mill.

But the farmer had left a seed of doubt behind him; and when has such a seed not found soil to nurture it, until its fruit hung heavy on the giant tree which shadowed a friendship, or darkened for ever a soul immortal?

It was not without many a struggle against the suspicion that at last Harvey Jameson admitted it with a sigh.

Who had robbed him of his hard earnings, save some stranger? for his neighbors were his friends, and honest, as he knew.

In Talmley there was but one who had not been born there, and that one was Dick Levoe, the stranger who had crossed his threshold six months before to ask for employment.

Jameson wanted a hand in the mill and hired Dick, taking him as a boarder. The young man had "fine ways," as Greene said.

He was not especially handsome, but he was cheerful, courteous, and willing to work, and yet, for all that, showed unmistakable signs of having had no occasion to perform any labor at some time not far past. He was educated—even Jennie, who had spent a year at boarding school, could be instructed by him.

"I'll just keep my eyes open, an' not let on for awhile," thought the miller; "but as Greene said, who else could have stolen the money?"

He perceived no change in Dick, no confusion, no sign of guilt; but greatly to the good man's consternation,—he discovered something else. The young man was in love with pretty Jennie, and she was fully conscious of the fact.

There was a new difficulty, and one which the miller did not care to meet.

He was pondering on it one day, three weeks after the robbery, when Glavin of the Hollow called and paid him ten pounds which had been due some time.

"I hear your house isn't a very secure place for money," said Glavin, with a smile; "but I hope nobody will walk off with this while you're asleep."

"I'll take care of that," answered the miller, conscious that Dick could hear. "I don't calc'late on bein' robbed twice by the same person; an' I've got over thinkin' everybody I meet is honest. Good-day, sir. Much obliged."

Glavin departed, and the miller went into the house.

Jennie was singing softly as she sewed at a window; Mrs. Jameson was not in, having gone to visit a sick neighbor.

Without a word the old man passed into his chamber, and there secreted the ten pounds, frowning as he did so.

"I'll send that fellow packin' soon, whether I find him stealin' or not," he muttered. "It ain't none too comfortable a feelin' to know you've got to lock up every shilling you get, and not tell anybody where you put it."

He ate his supper that evening in silence; Jennie and Dick chattering incessantly, and Mrs. Jameson told about every ache and pain that racked the woman she had been to visit.

But the miller could only wonder whether or not that frank, manly face and those cherry tones of his employee belonged to a knave and a scoundrel.

"An' Jennie and him seemed to understand one another far too well," he soliloquized; "I used to like the lad, but now I'd as lief see my girl care for old blind Jack the fiddler as this fine gentleman. As Greene says, he's too fancy about himself to be honest. I've often heard the greater the rascal, the more genteel, an' I guess I'll load the rifle."

He did load his rifle, and placed it near his bed, telling his wife that he "warn't going to lose any more money, but the first one that came for dishonest purposes would lose his life."

Mrs. Jameson was very nervous concerning the proximity of the rifle; she begged her husband to put it farther away; declaring he might touch it in his sleep, "an' make the thing go off," and probably kill her.

"I never move in my sleep, so you needn't be scared," he told her. "If I touch the gun, you can be sure it will go off: but I'll not touch it in my sleep; I sleep like an honest man, I do."

So he went to bed, and thought more of his daughter than of the money under the carpet. However, he did think of his money sometimes, and, in fact, his thoughts ran from that to Jennie, as the thoughts of the money-lender ran from his ducats to his daughter.

At last he slept, but not any too soundly; dreams visited him, and unpleasant ones they were. Vision after vision came and faded, and his wife was alarmed beyond measure to see his unconscious hands go out again and again, perilously near sometimes, to the loaded rifle.

It was midnight before she slept at all, but then her sleep was profund. It was broken at last by the strangest and most thrilling of sounds, no less startling than a heavy fall, and a loud, harsh, reverberating report, as though a cannon had been fired at her ear.

No woman is ever too frightened to scream, and Mrs. Jameson's shrieks were loud and shrill as she cowered among the bedclothes; and a scrambling in the darkness and muttered words she could not understand did not tend to calm her.

There was a rush of feet in the hall without; a stout shoulder sent the door inward with a crash, and Dick Levoe, who had made this unceremonious entrance, stood there, with a light high above his head, his keen eyes scanning the apartment swiftly.

It took him a moment to comprehend, and then he laughed with immeasurable amusement.

The miller, clad but lightly, was sprawling on the floor, a dazed wonder in his face, the old rifle, which he had struck as he fell, lying harmless beside him, and now unloaded; a window was open, and through it came a fine sheet of rain; the old man was soaking wet, and raindrops glistened on his hair and scanty garments; his bare feet were muddy, and altogether he presented anything but an agreeable or presentable appearance.

"What has happened?" asked Dick, as soon as his mirth could be suppressed, as he aided the miller to his feet.

"I—I don't know," stammered Jameson.

His wife hearing voices, cautiously peeped out from under the coverlet.

"Robbers!" she cried shrilly. "They have been here again. Have they shot you, Harvey?"

"No, wife, I'm not shot," said Harvey; "an' I don't think there's been any robbers 'round. Fact is, I've been sleep-walking."

"What!"

"I've been walkin' in my sleep, sure as you live," groaned the miller. "I'm all wet, so I must have gone out of doors, an' the Lord only knows where I have been or what I've been doin'. I was dreamin' of that ten pounds—"

He broke off, and hurried to the spot in which he had hidden the money. It was not there.

"You're rather old for such capers, Harvey," his wife was saying.

But he didn't hear her. Very blankly he turned to Dick, who had now retreated to the threshold where Jennie was standing, white and startled, but ravishly pretty.

"Lad," the miller said, solemnly, "I believe I've robbed myself. I've heard of such things, an' now I believe I've just done that, an' I hain't got a notion where I put the money."

"Is it gone?"

"Yes."

"Then you had best put on dry clothes, sir, while I go out and try to follow the tracks you have probably left in the garden. Your feet are so muddy, I'm sure you must have been there. I'll report in a few moments."

A whispered sentence to Jennie at the door, and Dick was off to don his boots, and laugh at the remembrance of the miller's plight.

With a lantern he went out into the rain, and his gravity departed again as, under the window of the miller's chamber, he discovered deeply-indented footprints, which proved that Jameson had emerged like a schoolboy.

The big, bare feet left plain traces in the soft soil of the garden. Dick followed them on, across the road, and found that they ceased at one corner of the mill. A loose board had been freshly replaced. He drew it out, and there, in the aperture, found a small tin box.

Taking it out, he hurried back, to find Jameson, his wife, and Jennie up and dressed, waiting for him.

The miller took the box eagerly, and opened it with scarcely steady hands. There were the ten pounds, and under them the money of which he had thought Dick had robbed him.

"Lad," he said, turning to his employee, "I've been thinkin' ill of you for the last few days, an' I ask your pardon. If I can ever do you a good turn call on me."

"I take your word sir," said Dick, cheerfully, going straight to Jennie, and taking her hand. "I want your consent to my marrying Jennie some day, when I have proved myself able to take care of her. We love each other, and I hope, sir, you'll not forget what love was to yourself once."

"No, I don't, lad," said the miller, with a tender glance towards his wife. "But a mill-hand gets poor wages, an' you'll have to wait awhile."

"As for that," said Dick, "I think you'll have to look up another mill-hand, Mr. Jameson, for I have another offer, and intend taking it. I wasn't brought up to labor, and was at college when my father died, leaving me, instead of the thousands I expected, nothing but my empty, untrained hands. I left the college, and fate led me hither. If I have shown no talent as a miller, I have won the sweetest girl in the world to love me. Now, a friend of my father's offers me the post of bookkeeper in his bank, at a salary on which Jennie and I can live, I know. I didn't take your money, sir, and I'll forgive you for suspecting that I did if you'll give me Jennie."

"What do you say, daughter?" asked the old man, wistfully.

"I love him, father," she whispered.

"Then I'll only say, 'God bless you both!'" said the miller.

HE FEARED THE OPAL.

The Late Father Mollinger Believed the Gem Had a Baleful Power.

The belief that the opal sheds a baleful influence found a supporter even in the late Father Mollinger, of Pittsburgh, the venerable priest-physician of world-wide fame. Almost since the opal was known superstition has clung to it, and it has been so held by persons in every condition of life. The way it became known that the famous priest held this superstition was as follows: Last winter one of Alleghany's leading physicians lay sick for months. Dr. Cyrus King attended him. The two had been friends all their lives, and Dr. King watched almost night and day until he brought his friend back to health. On his recovery he presented Dr. King with a splendid opal set in pearls. The pin was a unique piece of jewelry and was very handsome.

Dr. King was also physician for Rev. Father Mollinger. One night, shortly before the great priest's death, the doctor was summoned to the pretty parsonage on Mount Troy. The aged priest was weak, and lay there apparently powerless. He asked the doctor to come again the next day, but Mr. King informed him he was to leave for New York that night. The venerable priest was lying with his eyes half closed. Just then an attendant turned up the light and Dr. King moved forward to say good-by. At that the priest caught sight of the ever-changing colors of the baleful stone.

"What, an opal!" he gasped, half-rising in his bed. "It is sure to bring harm to yourself and your friends. Why do you wear it?"

The doctor explained the story of the gem, but all the time the venerable father grew more excited. Finally he said: "If you wear that stone to New York you will never come back alive."

The doctor insisted on wearing it, however, and the priest took the gem and blessed it. Then, returning it, he said: "When you come back I will give you a pin worth wearing."

On his return the aged priest was as good as his word, and the doctor was presented with a magnificent diamond. Dr. King took the pin home, intending to remove the opal and put in the diamond, but he forgot, and when hurriedly summoned to the death bed of the great priest he still wore the opal. The father at once noticed it and remarked: "Its flashes seem to make me weaker. The stone bodes ill." Gradually he sank, and the doctor bent over him to catch the faint beating of his heart. The father's eyes opened and rested on the fitful colorings of the strange stone, and, watching it, his spirit went out.

A Salesman's Regret.

"I see that some distinguished anthropologist has figured out that Adam was 128 feet tall," said Dick Godwin, a cloth salesman, to a Globe-Democrat reporter. "I am sorry the old man is dead. I would like to sell him a car load of cloth for a pair of trousers. Eve, according to this believer in Edenic Brobdignaggians, was 118 feet from her dainty pink toes to the top fluff of her blonde bangs. And this pair of gigantic epicures divided an apple between them! It were equal to Mrs. Parvenue making two bites of a cherry. Eve's neck must have been at least six feet long, and her mouth an opening of a linear yard! She could carry a Saratoga trunk in each cheek with as much ease as her degenerate daughters transport a wad of spruce gum. Think of poor Adam trying to fill that mouth with caramels at $1 a pound. The precious pair must have stripped every fig tree in Paradise to make them aprons. But I am inclined to believe that the industrious theory builder is mistaken. Our first parents were far more likely to have been pigmies than giants. Instead of man degenerating physically he is steadily improving. Reverse the process of reasoning by which the conclusion is reached that Adam was 128 feet tall—apply the true theory of progression instead of the false one of retrogression—and we have for our primal progenitor a gentleman who might, without removing his tall hat, walk beneath the huge legs of the late Tom Thumb."

Rules for Old People.

Science has demonstrated, as the deduction from many hundred observations, that old people should avoid high altitudes and that abundant sunshine is their best medicine. As to a sea voyage, they gain or lose by it much like others. It is obvious that the falling vitality—that is, the impaired vigor of circulation, assimilation and exertion which characterize advanced years and the spinal maladies most frequent at that time of life, such as rheumatism, cardiac disease, gout and renal affections—serve to determine the climatological problem, and thus, in a word, moderate warmth, with fair equability, abundance of sunshine, with adequate shelter and level walks, evidently meet the most obvious indications called for by these affections. The unsuitability of the mountain climates to the aged is due primarily to the cold, which depresses those in whom the circulation is feeble.

ADLAI HAS ACCEPTED.

Declares He Is in Hearty Accord with the ex-President.

Adlai E. Stevenson, Democratic candidate for Vice President, has sent the following letter of acceptance to the President of the National Democratic Convention:

CHARLESTON, W. Va.

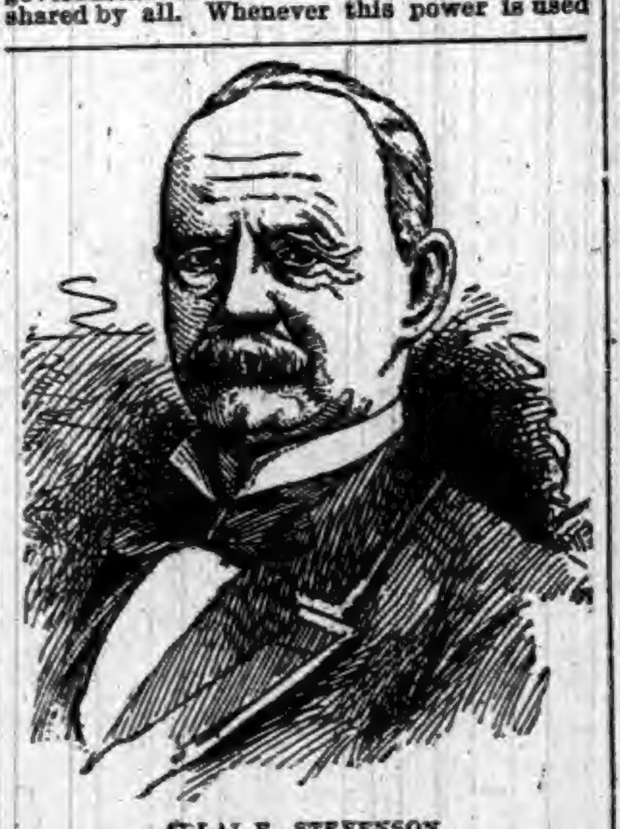
To the Hon. William L. Wilson, Chairman, etc.

When, in the presence of 20,000 of my countrymen, I accepted the honor conferred upon me by the convention over which you presided, I promised to indicate by letter, in a more formal manner, my acceptance of the nomination tendered me by the assembled representatives of the Democratic party of the United States.

Since that time I have been engaged continually in the discussion before the people of many States of the Union of the issues emphasized by the convention and represented by our candidate for President, Grover Cleveland. Opportunity has thus been denied me to write with the care I would like the more formal answer promised to your committee. The full discussion of public questions commonly expected from a candidate for Vice President has been rendered less imperative by the complete presentation of the Democratic creed by the gentleman with whom I have the honor to be associated as a candidate on the national ticket. His treatment of the issues now before the country for discussion and settlement was so complete that I can do little more than indorse his position and give it the emphasis of my unqualified approval.

Power of Taxation.

The greatest power conferred upon human government is that of taxation. All the great struggles of the past for a broader political liberty have looked toward the limitation of this power by right to tax, a right which should always be limited by the necessities of government and to benefits which may be shared by all. Whenever this power is used to draw tribute from the many for the benefit of the few, or when part of the people are oppressed in order that the remainder may prosper unduly, equality is lost sight of, injustice hardens into precedent, which is used to excuse new exactions and there arises artificial distinctions which the beneficiaries come to look upon in due time as vested rights, sacred to themselves.



ADLAI E. STEVENSON.

It is plain that our present inequitable system of tariff taxation has promoted the growth of such conditions in our land, favored though it has been by an industrious and enterprising people, a friendly climate, a productive soil and the highest development of political liberty. If the beneficiaries of this system shall be able to add a new tenure of power to those they have already enjoyed the development of these unfavorable conditions must continue until the power to tax will be lodged in those who are willing and able to pay for the perpetuation of privileges originally conferred by a confiding people for the preservation inviolate of their own government. There is no longer pretext or excuse for the maintenance of war tariff in times of peace, and more than a quarter of a century after armed conflict has ceased. The platform of the National Democratic Convention demands the reform of this system and the adoption in its place of one which will insure equality to all our people. I am in full and hearty accord with these purposes.

Concerning Currency.

The convention also declared its position on the currency question in no unmeaning words when it said in its platform, "We hold to the use of both gold and silver as the standard money of the country, and to the coinage of both gold and silver, without discriminating against either metal or charge for mintage, but the dollar unit of coinage of both metals must be of equal intrinsic and exchangeable value or be adjusted through international agreement or by such safeguards of legislation as shall insure the parity of the two metals and the equal power of every dollar at all times in the markets and in the payment of debt, and we demand that all paper currency shall be kept at par with and redeemable in such coin."

To this plain and unequivocal declaration in favor of sound, honest money I subscribe without reservation or qualification. A safe circulating medium is absolutely essential to the protection of the business interests of our country, while to the wage-earner or the farmer it is all-important that every dollar, whatever its form, that finds its way into his pocket shall be of equal, unquestioned and universally exchangeable value and of equal purchasing power.

The Lodge Bill

Another issue of great moment in the pending contest is the force bill, the magnitude of which cannot be overstated. It may mean the control of the election of representatives in congress by the bayonet. The republican party, by its acts in the LIst congress and by its platform in its late national convention, stands pledged to the passage of this bill. That it will pass it when it has the power no sane man can doubt. To all our people who desire the peace and prosperity of our common country this question is all-important.

Since my nomination I have been in eight of the Southern and Southwestern States of the Union, and have talked with men of all classes and conditions there. I found a general and growing apprehension of evils which, it is believed, would result from the passage of the Lodge bill or similar threatened legislation. I found the industries established by Northern capital during Mr. Cleveland's administration in a languishing condition, that the immigration of labor and the investment of capital invited to those States by their then peaceful condition had in a large measure ceased. The enactment of the force bill into a law, while it would threaten the liberties of the entire people, would undoubtedly retard the material growth of the States at which it is specially aimed, would incite in many communities race troubles and invite retaliatory legislation which would disturb property values and discontinue and destroy the security of Northern investments. And its reflex action upon the Northern States would result in a consequent loss of commercial and trade relations with the vast territory now becoming tributary to their wealth and prosperity.

I say nothing now of the inherent vice of the un-American and revolutionary spirit involved in the Lodge bill which was pronounced by a Republican Senator "the most infamous that ever crossed the threshold of the Senate." I appeal to the instinct of self-interest and to the sense of common justice in the American people. The era of good feeling and renewed commercial relations commencing with the administration of Mr. Cleveland in 1884 should not be interrupted by the inauguration of a policy which tends to destroy popular representation and the purity of local self-government, which furnishes an instrument to discredited federal power to perpetuate itself, which seeks to keep alive sectional jealousies and strife, which threatens important and material interests and which offers no excuse or palliation for its existence except the perpetuation in power of a political party which has lost public confidence.

I accept the nomination tendered me, and, should the action of the convention meet the approval of my countrymen, will, to the best of my ability, discharge with fidelity the duties of the important trust confided to me.

Very respectfully,

ADLAI E. STEVENSON.

MARYLAND ROASTER AND BAKER

IMPROVED
ROASTER & BAKER

FOR MEATS, FOWL, FISH, ETC., AND FOR BAKING BREAD, CAKES AND PUDDINGS.

BEST SIMPLEST AND CHEAPEST

THE STEAM produced by the process of cooking cannot escape, is absorbed by the article in the roaster, and acts as a basting. There is no evaporation, no drying up or burning, hence no shrinkage or loss of weight, and all the flavor and nutritious qualities of the food are retained. Tough meats are made tender, and any article roasted or baked will be sweeter, healthier and more digestible. Put the food in the roaster, place the roaster in a well heated oven; the roaster will do the cooking. It requires no attention. Can only be bought from dealers, the trade supplied by:

Other Candidates.

Claude Mathews, our candidate for Governor is a practical farmer. He lives on his farm and cultivates it. But he has a good education, and excellent judgment and executive ability. He will be an excellent chief magistrate. Chase, his competitor is a sort of small potatoes. He claims to have been a soldier. His record has been unearthed, and it shows he spent most of his time in hospitals as a hospital steward. At present, he is most noted for calling democrats "Imps of hell," last spring, as stated by a republican paper, and which he does not deny. He tries to excuse it, by saying he meant "copperheads" We don't see how that betters it. Now he wants these "imps of hell" to vote for him.

FOR CONGRESS,

For Congress, Wm. F. McNagny, a former farmer of Whitley county, now, one of the leading lawyers of the state, has made his own success by his own industry, pluck and talent. His opponent, Mr. You, is making a great fuss about being a "laboring man." He has been for a few years we are told, a railway engineer. But take the lives of the two men through, McNagny has done two days' work to his one. Mr. You has gone about the country, calling democrats all the name he could think of, for he had no other matter for a speech. McNagny has treated everyone with respect just as a gentleman always will. He has not even thrown up to Mr. You a word about the latter being a rebel soldier. Vote for McNagny.

PROSECUTOR.

Joseph Butler has served the people two years, and asks a re-election. He has done good work, has seen that justice has been done, but has oppressed no one. He has not taken pains to secure his fee by a compromise, that would let the offender escape being brought into court. His deputies, too have done equally well. His opponent, Mr. Gilbert, is we are told not a lawyer. Auburn citizens know him best by his big contract on the Waggoner ditch in which they claim he did them a great wrong They can get even by voting for Mr. Butler.

STATE SENATOR.

J. E. McDonald, of Ligonier is our candidate. He has filled many positions including that of laborer on the railroad. He is now editor of the Banner, is a bright young man, clear header, and will make a good Senator. Vote for "Honest Jim."

People's Party Talks.

The peoples party, are evidently wide-awake to the welfare of their friends, the republican bosses, who have been leading them about by the nose, and laughing when they get out of sight. The leaders of the movement, at least, both democrats and republicans know what is going on. It is too plain to be ignored. Only a few days ago, a daughter of a prominent republican who is himself manipulating the new party in the interest of the republicans, said to a friend while speaking of the people's party rally in Auburn. "Oh, they are all right. But none of the republicans are going to vote that ticket." She had heard her father say this of course, for he has said it to others. If we did not feel certain that Wils McClellan, Cal Grube, and the rest know what they are doing, we should have warned them oftener. Grube knows, of course, that he cannot be elected, and that every democrat vote he takes from Ralston helps to elect Knott. Wils McClellan knows, too, that he cannot be elected, and that every democrat vote he gets, helps to defeat Franks, and to elect Camp. This also means helping to defeat Senator Turpie and to elect Fairbanks, a millionaire contributor to the republican campaign fund In other words, McClellan indirectly contributes to the purchasing of a seat for Indiana in the United State senate. What shall be said of the honesty of a party that will do such things in the name of reform? What shall be said of the intelligence of a party that will permit itself to be led by the nose, and with their eyes open, into the trap that they cannot help but know is prepared for them. We would not again have given this much space to the subject, but we wish to make it certain, that when they gather up the fragments of their party following after the election, they cannot say they were not fairly warned: The COURIER has already showed them by figures, that they cannot elect a man on the ticket. They are at liberty to hold us responsible for this assertion and the democrats of this county will hold them responsible for the election of any republican, should one by any chance, be elected.

A Wonderful Statement.

Proprietors of Dullam's Great German Remedies. Gentlemen:—I have for the past two years been troubled with a serious and very severe liver and stomach difficulty. Have had advice and medicine from our very best physicians and only to be temporarily relieved. Some of my friends persuaded me to try your Great German remedy for the blood, stomach and kidneys and to my surprise after using three bottles I feel like a new man. If you desire you can use my name in print or by reference in any of the Grand Rapids, Mich., papers, or any other papers in the states, to convince the afflicted that it is the best blood, liver and kidney medicine on earth. I feel like a new man. Have lived here over 40 years. $1 a bottle.

The New Great South American Kidney Cure.

The acknowledged superior cure and immediate relief for all derangements, painfulness and decay of the kidneys or bladder, Bright's disease, diabetes or any complaint that hurts or despoils either of these delicate organs. This new remedy has been thoroughly tested by learned physicians and found far superior to any medicine yet discovered for quickly relieving all weaknesses, aches, pains and distresses arising from disease of any part of the urinary passages. It great relief for the old, middle aged and children, male or female. It relieves at once retention and pain in passing water, and it is very effective in relieving prostatic troubles in the old, and for nightly incontinence of water in children, or others, caused by weakness of the bladder. It may be worth to many a hundred times its cost. This is a remedy of great value to ladies, because they are very liable to weakness and pain peculiar to their sex. Sold by Robbins & McCord, druggists, Auburn, Ind. tf

A Remarkable Discovery.

A remarkable discovery is one of the chronic proclamations of advertisers. Cubeb Cough Cure is not such, it is an established remedy with known merit, made on scientific principles by experienced and able chemists. It affords instant relief, and is called the one minute remedy, for it stops coughing at once, does not cure but gives temporary relief to consumptives, and absolutely cures all other affections of the throat, lungs, etc. For croup, whooping cough and colds of children Cubeb Cough Cure is valuable. Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for November contains a notable article entitled "Cholera via the Transcaspian Railroad," written and illustrated by Valerian Gribrayedoff. It traces the progress of the deadly epidemic from its outbreak in the hotbeds of Central Asia, westward along the line of Annenkoff's great desert railroad to the Caspian Sea and European Russia, and thence throughout all Europe. This number of Frank Leslie's is unusually interesting and seasonable throughout, containing, amongst other illustrated articles: "In Literary Chicago," by Eve H. Brodlique, with portraits of Eugene Field, Joseph Slason, George P. Upton, Mary Hartwell Catherwood, and others; "Half a Century Since," a paper of New York reminiscences, by the late Charles Gayler; "Alsace Loraine," by George C. Hurlbut; "Personal Recollections of Sir Richard F. Burton," by A. L. Rawson; "Glorious Grouse Shooting," by Ellangawan, etc.

BATTLE OF THE BALLOT.

PARTIAL RETURNS FROM THE ELECTION.

New York, New Jersey and Connecticut of the Doubtful States Goes for Cleveland — Indiana and Iowa for Harrison—Illinois, California and Wisconsin in Doubt.

Returns from the election, received up to Wednesday morning, are as follows:

NEW YORK.

Cleveland has carried New York by about 30,000.

The result of the vote for Assemblymen is: Democrats, 72; Republicans, 56. This insures the election of a Democrat to the United States Senate to succeed Hiscock.

INDIANA.

The indications are that Indiana will go Republican. Heavy Republican gains over two years ago in Marion County, containing the city of Indianapolis, indicate now that, with forty out of 208 precincts in, the Democratic majority of 2,000 will be reduced to 600. No comparisons can be made on these precincts, for their geography was changed a few months ago. At the same time, eighty precincts outside Indianapolis show net gains of 1,104 for Harrison, an average of 11 to the precinct. If this keeps up it will wipe the Democratic majority of 19,579 in 1890 out and leave over 12,000 plurality for the Republicans.

ILLINOIS.

Indications are that Illinois has gone for Cleveland and Stevenson by from 5,000 to 10,000 plurality. The entire State Democratic ticket is elected. Harrison's vote so far is less than in 1888, when Harrison had a plurality of 22,000 in the whole state. Two hundred and twenty precincts in the State outside of Chicago, Harrison 41,259, Cleveland 35,839. In 1888, Harrison 38,748 and Cleveland 21,805. Cleveland's net gain is 1,533. Five hundred precincts of 693 precincts in Chicago, Cleveland 97,344, Harrison 72,190. This gives Cleveland a lead of 25,154 thus far in Cook County. Later returns may change this result.

WISCONSIN.

Milwaukee special: The campaign of 1892 closed with the largest vote ever polled with the city. A corresponding increase is reported throughout the State and 350,000 is the estimates of the total vote cast. The unusual number of split tickets with the Australian system in vogue, caused an unprecedented delay in receiving the returns and scarce half the returns have been received, but everything indicates a democratic majority in the State. Spooner, Republican candidate for Governor, is running away ahead of the ticket. Otjen, Republican candidate for Congress, is running well against Mitchell, and the election of Van Schaick, Republican candidate for Congressman at-large, is probably assured. All other Congressional Districts are still in doubt.

CONNECTICUT.

Complete returns from the State gathered by the Southern New England Telephone Company give Cleveland 5,330 plurality and Morris, Democratic candidate for Governor, 1,369.

CALIFORNIA.

The Chairman of the State Republican Committee concedes the city of San Francisco to the Democrats by 7,000 majority. The indications are that the State has gone Democratic.

NEW JERSEY.

The New Jersey returns are scattered and meagre. It is estimated that Cleveland has carried the State by 7,000 plurality. The result of the Gubernatorial contest is in doubt. H. C. Loudenslager, Republican candidate for Congress, defeated in the First District, and Gardner, Republican candidate, Second District, is elected. The complexion of the Legislature in doubt.

IOWA.

Chairman Blythe, of the Republican committee, claims the State by 20,000 and the election of Republican Congressmen in all but the Second District and possibly the First. Chairman Fullen, of the Democratic committee, practically concedes the State, but says the 200 precincts heard from are too few upon which to base an estimate.

KANSAS.

Returns from Kansas indicate that the Republicans have elected Congressmen in the First, Second, Fourth and Seventh districts and one at large. Democratic-populist fusion have elected Congressmen in Third, Fifth and Sixth districts. Harrison has carried the State.

THE SOUTH.

Indications point to the fact that the South remains solidly Democratic with the possible exception of West Virginia, which is in doubt.

The New York Tribune says: "The result of the election is in doubt. At midnight the returns of the States are insufficient to warrant an absolute conclusion though the probabilities at this hour are that Harrison and Reid have not obtained a majority of the electoral votes. New York State is Democratic not less than 10,000 and has elected a Democratic Assembly. New Jersey has probably gone for Cleveland by 5,000 to 8,000."

The New England States give their usual Republican majorities.

A Young Murderer.

Several boys were playing with a revolver at Carteret, N. J. Charles Jordott shot and killed one of his play fellows, John Andreas. There was no motive for the deed. The Andreas boy held his hat over his heart and asked Jordott if he could hit it. He fired, killing Andreas instantly.

Death of a Congressman.

Hon. A. M. Alexander died at his home at Paris, Mo. He was a member of the Forty-seventh congress.

How They Caught the Boodlers.

In the boodle trial at Toledo of Alderman W. J. Gill, ex-Postmaster Lorenz and ex-Assistant Postmaster Machen repeated how they had set the trap for the Councilmen to fall into, and Stenographer Bassett told how he had hidden under the false register and taken the evidence.

Congressman Morse's Property Attached.

There was filed in the Norfolk, Mass., registry an attachment on the property of Congressman Elijah A. Morse, of Canton, in the sum of $25,000 by Mrs. Helen M. Gougar, of Lafayette, Ind., the well-known prohibition speaker, pending an action of tort.

COULDN'T HIT THE CLOUD.

Rainmakers Keep Washington People Awake All Night, but Get No Rain.

The people of Washington have it in for the rainmakers. For the last two weeks they have been attempting to blow a hole in the sky to let the rain through, but without success. Though trying on weak nerves, no special complaint was made, but at sundown Wednesday the rainmakers spied a cloud coming up from the horizon, and they slayed for it. Darkness shut the cloud from view before it got within range, but the rainmakers had its course, and by gauging its speed estimated that it would get within range a little after midnight. It was an unseemly hour and everybody, from the President down, was sure to be aroused from slumber; but in the cause of science everything goes, and so, a little after the witching hour the first shot was fired. It split the night with a terrific roar and brought everybody in bed to a sitting posture. Hardly had the echoes died away before another night splitter was let loose. The windows in houses miles away rattled and teeth chattered like rain on the roof. The nervous were frightened, the sick made worse, while the strong simply swore at Dyrenforth and all of his ilk; but the rain-makers had evidently not hit the cloud, for no rain fell, and fearful lest the cloud should get away they kept up a cannonade all along the line until daylight came, when the cloud, untouched, was seen gayly sailing over the horizon. The result was a heavy dew, a city full of wrath and more protests in the afternoon papers than can be published in a fortnight. The President isn't saying anything, but it is understood that the next appropriation bill for rain-making will be vetoed with red ink.

GONE TO THE BOTTOM.

The Steamer W. H. Gilcher Given Up for Lost by Her Owners.

There is now little doubt that the steamer W. H. Gilcher has gone down with all all hands, and that the wreckage found floating near North Manitou Island in Lake Michigan is all that is left of the once magnificent vessel. J. C. Gilchrist, of Cleveland, one of the principal owners of the Gilcher, has given her up for lost. He said: "I am now convinced that the reason we have not heard from the Gilcher is because there is none of the crew alive to tell the tale. There were eighteen men aboard, with Captain L. O. Weeks, of Vermont, in command. His first mate was Captain Ed Porter, of Lorain. Sydney Jones, of Marine City, Mich., was chief engineer. Formerly nearly the entire crew were from Vermillion, but about a month ago Captain Weeks, while in Buffalo, discharged most of his old men and shipped new sailors, whose names have never been reported to the general office." The Gilcher was put into service a year ago last May. She was valued at $200,000 and was insured for $180,000. She had a cargo of 3,020 tons of coal and was bound from Buffalo to Milwaukee. She was last heard from when she passed Mackinaw. It is the general supposition that she must have struck upon the South Fox reef during the storm and had a hole knocked in her bottom. The builders of the Gilcher claim that the wreckage washed ashore does not tally with any part of the work on this boat. Her owners are convinced, however, that she has gone down with all on board. She was provided with a large metallic life-boat and enough small boats to carry about thirty men. As far as is known there were no passengers on the Gilcher when she left Buffalo.

CANADIAN CATTLE SHUT OUT.

Their Importation into Great Britain Forbidden by the Government.

The British Government has issued an order prohibiting the importation of live Canadian cattle. The slaughter at Edinburgh of 1,209 head of cattle, brought from Canada to Scotland on the steamships Huron and Monskeaton, and supposed to be infected with pleuro-pneumonia, has caused many protests from the farmers of Fifeshire, Forthshire, and Forfarshire. The Board of Agriculture undoubtedly proceeded without sufficient investigation, and thereby has caused severe losses among the men who accepted deliveries of the suspected cattle. The board was confident that the cattle which had died had pleuro-pneumonia, but the examination of the lungs of two of them by eminent veterinary surgeons shows that the disease was broncho-pneumonia. The farmers of the three counties in question will make a formal protest against the board's summary action.

Peter's Pence in Canada.

Archbishop Cleary, of Kingston, Ont., has issued a pastoral calling for Peter's pence or tribute to the Pope. The clergy of the archdiocese have contributed $1,440, the archbishop leading off with $40. In this diocese collections are being made every four years. The pastoral exhorts the faithful "to give at each quadrennial collection four times the amount they would think fit to give from year to year were annual collection demanded of them. This method seems to have given universal satisfaction and a comparison of the amount of Peter's pence contributed under this new system with that derived from the annual collections made heretofore shows the result to be largely in favor of our Holy Father's exchequer."

Canadian Banks Prosperous.

The Canadian banks during the past two months have been enjoying a degree of prosperity unknown for years. Not only has money been actively employed in the mercantile pursuits at home, but there has been an unprecedented demand from Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Western States, where excessive rates prevail. The Canadian banks at the close of September had on public discounts in Canada $188,157,135. In addition to this they employed on call loans in the United States $22,600,000, of which sum the Bank of Montreal had $13,184,262. The total call loans in Canada was $19,828,270.

Female Burglar Breaks Jail.

Mrs. Ella Pierce, awaiting trial in Wayne County, Ohio, under an indictment for burglary, escaped from the Wooster Jail by sawing off the bars of her cell window, climbing out on the roof of a porch and clearing the wall with a leap from a height of eighteen feet. She had been gone more than an hour before her escape was discovered.

Hunting for Pleuro-Pneumonia.

In order to ascertain whether or not pleuro-pneumonia has any existence in Canada the Dominion Government has dispatched veterinary inspectors to every district where cattle for the British market are collected. Complete reports have not yet been received, but interior reports fail to establish the slightest trace of the disease.

Killed in a Freight Wreck.

There was a big wreck on the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern, eight miles from Chillicothe, Ohio. The third car from the engine on a freight broke down, and twenty-one cars were piled on top of it. William Chambers, front brakeman, was buried under three cars and crushed to death.

Croton Oil in the Soup.

At a meeting of Dunkards in Phillipsburg, Ohio, 200 of those present were made seriously ill by eating soup into which croton oil had been maliciously poured.

Fatal Collision in New Orleans.

A train on the Northeastern Railroad collided with a stock car at New Orleans. Three men were injured, one probably fatally.

One Man Killed and Two Injured.

A most disastrous wreck occurred on the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railroad about 3 o'clock Sunday morning, near Maxie Station, in Indian Territory, resulting in the ditching of the engine and seventeen loaded cars. Six of the cars were filled with stock. Engineer Tom Stanton was killed and Fred Bly, the fireman, and Logan Dyers, the head brakeman, were dangerously injured. The accident was due to the engine striking a cow on a small bridge. The loss to the company will be very heavy.

THANKSGIVING.

President Harrison Proclaims Thursday, Nov. 24, as a Season of Rejoicing.

President Harrison has issued the annual Thanksgiving Day proclamation. It follows:

The gifts of God to our people during the last year have been so abundant and so special that the spirit of devout thanksgiving awaits not a call, but only the appointment of a day when it may have a common expression. He has stayed the pestilence at our doors; He has given us more love for the free civil institutions in the creation of which His directing providence was so conspicuous; He has awakened a deeper reverence for law; He has widened our philanthropy by a call to succor the distress in other lands; He has blessed our schools, and is bringing forward a patriotic and God-fearing generation to execute His great and benevolent designs for our country; He has given us great increase in material wealth, and a wide diffusion of contentment and comfort in the homes of our people; He has given His grace to the sorrowing.

Wherefore, I, Benjamin Harrison, President of the United States, do call upon all our people to observe, as we have been wont, Thursday, the 24th day of this month of November, as a day of thanksgiving to God for His mercies and of supplication for His continued care and grace.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this 4th day of November, 1892, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and seventeenth.

BENJAMIN HARRISON.

By the President,
JOHN W. FOSTER, Secretary of State.

BUSINESS ACTIVE.

Better than Ever Before in a Presidential Campaign.

R. G. Dun & Company's weekly review of trade says:

Even in the last week before a Presidential election business continued active; indeed the volume is far beyond any precedent for a similar period. The election has plainly diminished business in two ways; multitudes have been diverted from trade to political activity, and many more have chosen to postpone transactions until the political uncertainty has been removed. The fact that even under such circumstances trade has been of enormous volume shows how powerful is the impetus toward activity and expansion. The people are clearly buying more goods than ever before, and in some branches manufacturers are realizing a slight advance in prices. Money is closer at some Western points, but nowhere is stringency seen, and there is no apprehension as to the immediate future.

TO REPRESENT VENEZUELA.

Crespo Sends a New Consul to New York and a Minister to Washington.

Among the passengers of the steamship Venezuela, which arrived at New York from La Guayra, are the following representatives of General Crespo's Government in Venezuela to this country: Gustavo Michelena, Secretary of Legation, Washington; H. Rivero Saldivia, Consul at New York, and Rufeno Blanco Fombona, Consul at Philadelphia. Michelena is about 29 years old, was an aid-de-camp to General Crespo, and passed through all the recent campaigns with his chief. The new Minister to Washington is Dr. Francis Bustomente, who was exiled from his country by Dictator Palacio last May. Dr. Bustomente was one of the congress which refused to recognize Palacio when he usurped the presidency.

Found a Bomb on the Track.

Near Corfu, N. Y., Saturday night Track Walker John Stoddard discovered a dynamite bomb under one of the rails of the Lehigh Valley track. The next train was due at that point at 9:50. It was a through express and the express car is said to have contained $15,000, which the miscreants engaged in the dastardly attempt to wreck the train were thought to be after. To the bomb was attached a slow match, which was burning when Stoddard found it.

Must Be Published Week Days.

An opinion has just been given by the Supreme Court at Jefferson City, Mo., to the effect that official notices published in a Sunday paper are not legal. The decision grew out of a case in which a taxpayer of St. Louis refused to pay a benefit assessment for the opening of a street, the official notice of which was published the required four days, one of which, however, was a Sunday.

A Southern Editor Missing.

Claude Wilson, editor of the Advance, at Wilson, N. C., has disappeared most mysteriously from his home there, and so far all efforts to trace him have failed. Wilson was to have left Wilson on the 3:20 o'clock train last Monday morning for Greenville. He did not go to Greenville, and no trace whatever of his whereabouts has been obtained, though the telegraph wires have been diligently used. Foul play is suspected.

Behring Sea Arbitration Cases.

The counter cases in the Behring Sea arbitration are to be exchanged by the two governments February 1, 1893. The work on that to be presented by the United States is progressing satisfactorily, but is not yet complete.

Snow in Vermont.

Vermont has had its first snowstorm of the season. On the mountains the snow is from two to three inches deep.

AFTER THE BATTLE.

MILWAUKEE PLUCKILY BEGINS REBUILDING.

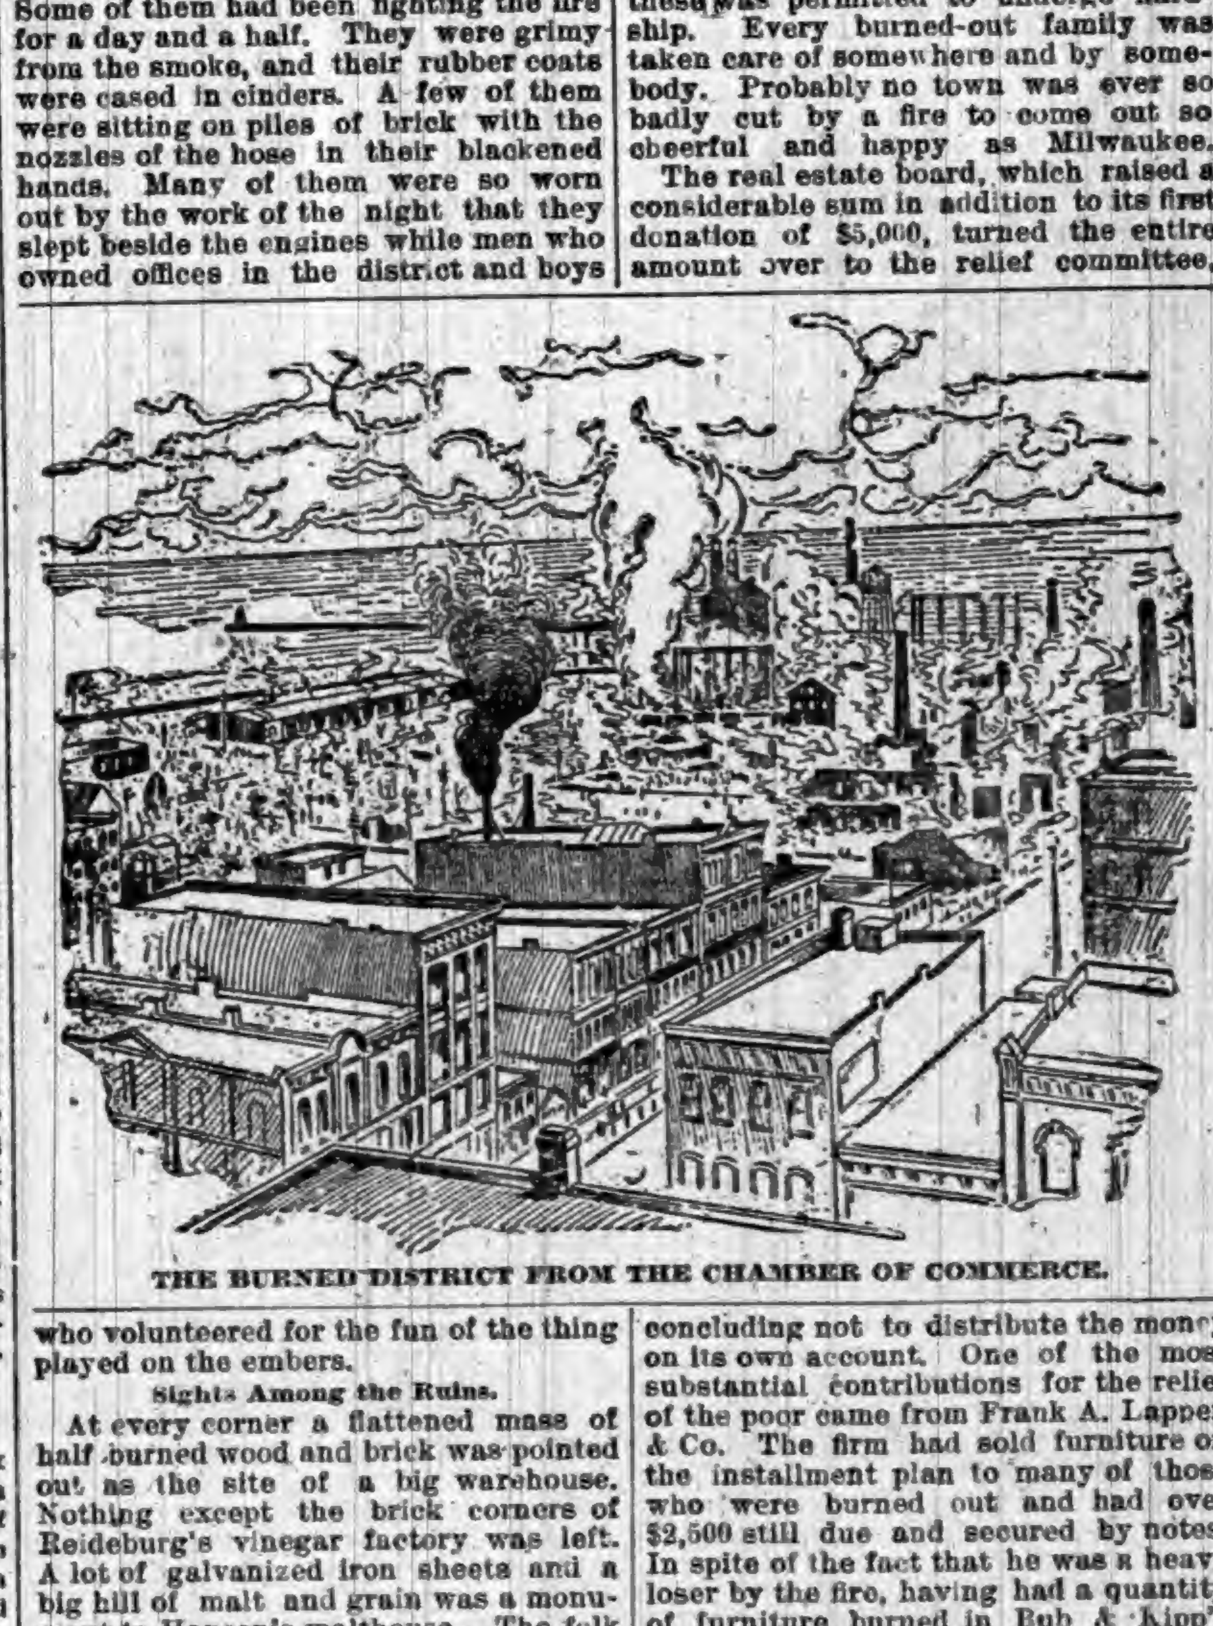
Devastation More Terrible than at First Reported—Acres of Smoldering Heaps Where Once Was Prosperous Activity—Relief of the Sufferers.

The Fire as It Was.

Milwaukee correspondence.

No one had a real notion of the havoc created by our terrific fire till the following Sunday morning. The wind had died down and the day broke under a clear sky. Miles away the billows of smoke could be seen rising above the city, and while they did not sweep the business streets, they gave to a distant view the appearance of a heavy fog, rolling under the wind and streaking out in long, thin banners from the heart of the city. Near the Northwestern depot the extensive destruction worked by the fire became seriously prominent. From the railway tracks as far as the eye could see through the smoke almost the entire warehouse part of the town was a mass of ashes and broken brick and stone, with here and there the skeleton of a wall or a chimney rising dimly out of it through the clouds. The lake was rolling viciously, and the line of scorched breakwater showed where the fire had bitten down to the edge of the water. For a while during the fire even the piling of this breakwater was aflame.

From the railroad tracks for blocks a prosperous part of the town lay smoking. At the limits of the fire-swept district thousands of people had gathered and were kept from crowding in by the policemen and four companies of militiamen armed with rifles. Inside this line the tired firemen were still working. Some of them had been fighting the fire for a day and a half. They were grimy from the smoke, and their rubber coats were cased in cinders. A few of them were sitting on piles of brick with the nozzles of the hose in their blackened hands. Many of them were so worn out by the work of the night that they slept beside the engines while men who owned offices in the district and boys who volunteered for the fun of the thing played on the embers.



THE BURNED DISTRICT FROM THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Sights Among the Ruins.

At every corner a flattened mass of half burned wood and brick was pointed out as the site of a big warehouse. Nothing except the brick corners of Reideburg's vinegar factory was left. A lot of galvanized iron sheets and a big hill of malt and grain was a monument to Hansen's malthouse. The folk who saw that building burn thought it was finer than fireworks. For a moment the windows flared like the isinglass front of a parlor stove. Then the fire died out there and a ring of green gaseous flame ran around the building. In another minute the elevator walls parted and the mass of flaming grain tumbled down in a tremendous cataract.

The Weisel & Vilter machine shop, where a falling wall killed two of the firemen, was only a lot of brick and plaster, and Bubb & Kip's factory, which gave the second start to the fire, had been absolutely shelled. At the gas works the ruins of one end of the holders was still blazing in spite of the flood of water poured in by the firemen, and the machinery was tangled and broken beyond repair. In nearly every mass of ruins men were groping for valuable papers and books and at every corner employes could be seen pouring water on a smoking safe.

On the skirts of the burned district the scenes are sometimes pathetic. Little unprotected piles of bed clothing, pictures, and small household belongings had been left by fleeing thousands. Once in a while a shivering boy was seen standing beside the wreckage of a home—a broken clock, battered image, a bag of tableware and some poor clothing. In the middle of Buffalo street a deserted truck stood loaded with one trunk and a little rocking chair decorated with a neat "tidy." These things were the wreckage of small homes burned out in the Third Ward, where hundreds of cottages of workingmen were swept away by the fire.

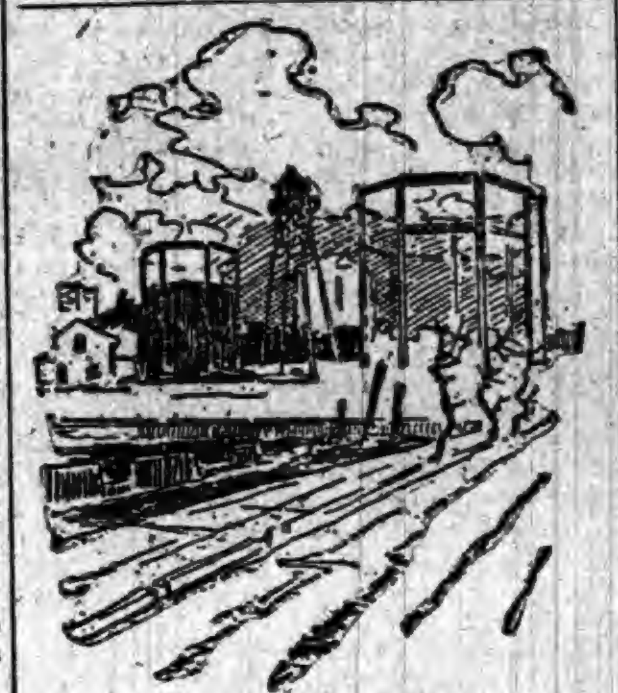
The Distressing Feature.

The burning of these poor houses was the distressing feature of the fire. Milwaukee can stand well enough the destruction of big warehouses, for there are many big warehouses there and many rich men able to put up buildings in the place of those ruined. The cottages destroyed belonged to the poor laboring men. Some of these men squatted along the lake shore years ago, and nearly all the houses represent hard saving and long work. They went like tallow before the fire and left no monumental ruins to mark their site. Family after family applied to the relief organizations or crowded into St. John's Cathedral and the Northwestern depot. Prompt relief was given to them as soon as the excitement of the night was settled, and there was as little suffering as ever followed a big fire. The hotels fed hundreds of hungry men. Pabst's Hotel loaded up the Chicago firemen with coffee and steaks, and with the other houses sent a patrol wagon load of food down to the smoke-stained men who were slugging the fire near the lake.

The people of Milwaukee had hardly turned out of bed to see the fog of the fire rising before men were hustling around to raise money for the unfortunate folks. Telegrams came in from roundabout towns, from Oshkosh and Madison and Janesville and Racine, all of which are tributary for Milwaukee's business. These little towns all offered to help as far as they could. A telegram came in from Mayor Washburne, of Chicago. The Mayor evidently thought Milwaukee had been shoveled clean off the earth, for he telegraphed in a good-hearted way about Chicago rising from its ashes and hoping Milwaukee would rise from Milwaukee ashes. These telegrams and letters were taken thankfully but Milwaukee went about helping its own people with its own hands.

Milwaukee Raises $31,000.

Hundreds of business men poured into the chamber of commerce building and almost before President Bacon could make a talk $31,231 had been subscribed. It was headed by a whaling big check for $6,000 sent in by the Democratic candidates for county offices, who are not rich men; Phil Armour gave $5,000 and said he would give a lot more for his old home; the Brewers' Association subscribed $5,000; Henry C. Payne, the Republican committeeman, handed in $1,000, and the same amount was contributed by Captain Fred Pabst, the Wisconsin Fire and Marine Insurance Bank, John L. Mitchell, Banker Ilsley, Cudahy Bros., August Uihlein, E. P. Bacon and Mr. Rosseanu. Long after the meeting money was rolling in and at 5 o'clock the fund was estimated at near $50,000. It continued to grow until the $100,000 mark was passed. That's not enough to build up one of the ruined warehouses, but it will make comfortable hundreds of homeless Third Ward people. None of these was permitted to undergo hardship. Every burned-out family was taken care of somewhere and by somebody. Probably no town was ever so badly cut by a fire to come out so cheerful and happy as Milwaukee.



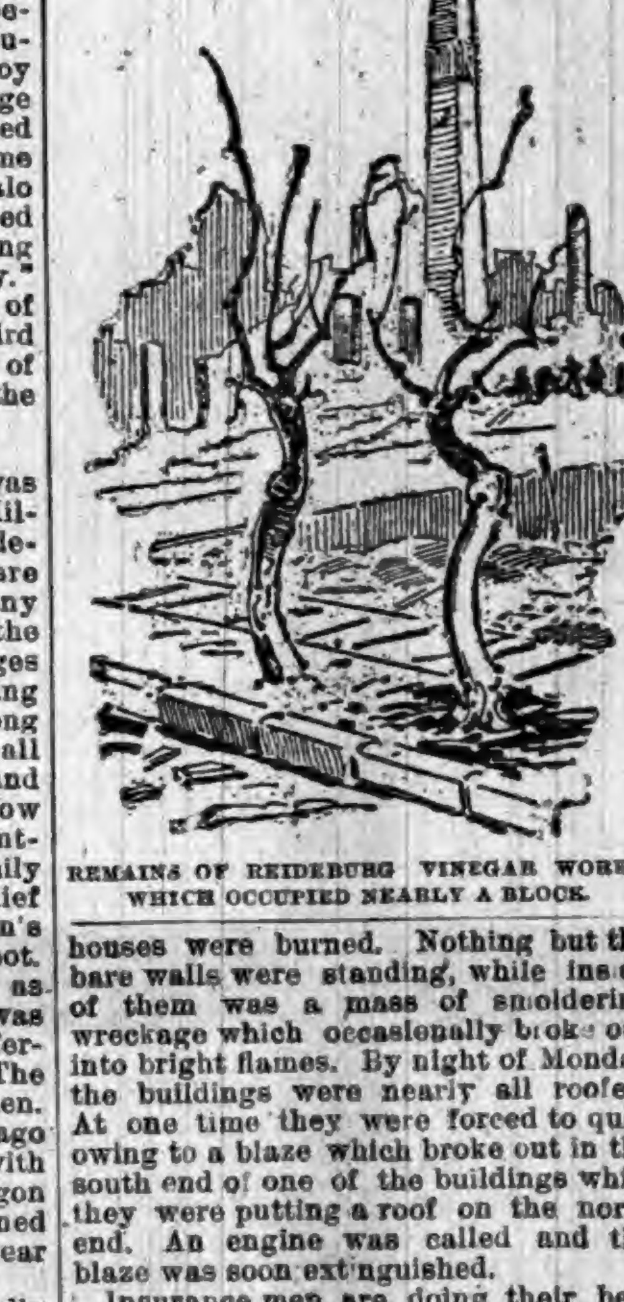
NEAR THE GASHOUSE.

The real estate board, which raised a considerable sum in addition to its first donation of $5,000, turned the entire amount over to the relief committee, concluding not to distribute the money on its own account. One of the most substantial contributions for the relief of the poor came from Frank A. Lappen & Co. The firm had sold furniture on the installment plan to many of those who were burned out and had over $2,500 still due and secured by notes. In spite of the fact that he was a heavy loser by the fire, having had a quantity of furniture burned in Bub & Kipp's factory, Mr. Lappen announced that he would give receipts in full to those of the sufferers who still owed him anything.

The work of searching for the safes of the various firms was commenced early. In nearly every case the papers, which alone would enable the losers to estimate correctly the amount of their loss, were in the burning buildings. To get at these a force of several hundred workmen armed with pickaxes and shovels was turned loose. Several safes were found, but it was impossible to open them, as the locks had become so warped and twisted that the bolts could not be turned.

Rebuilding the Freighthouses.

The enterprise shown by the big sufferers is exemplified by the work of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad. Both the outgoing and incoming freight houses were burned. Nothing but the bare walls were standing, while inside of them was a mass of smoldering wreckage which occasionally broke out into bright flames. By night of Monday the buildings were nearly all roofed. At one time they were forced to quit, owing to a blaze which broke out in the south end of one of the buildings while they were putting a roof on the north end. An engine was called and the blaze was soon extinguished.



REMAINS OF REIDEBURG VINEGAR WORKS, WHICH OCCUPIED NEARLY A BLOCK.

Insurance men are doing their best to settle the trouble for the poorer of the sufferers. They are anxious that all small losses be adjusted as soon as possible and accordingly a special committee will have such claims in charge.

One incident which has received no attention owing to the excitement caused by the big fire was the burning of seven cottages in the southwestern part of the city Friday evening. The people who were burned out lost everything they possessed, and they will be included in the list of those to be given relief.

A Shocking Domestic Double Tragedy.

A terrible murder and suicide was committed in LaPorte, recently, the suicide being Conrad Gaa, and the victim of his jealous rage his handsome young wife, Mary. The couple have been married several years, but, unhappily, and have separated four times. They recently made up, but Gaa grew jealous, claiming that his wife was untrue to him. The other night he enticed her to a lonely spot in Collins' Park, and stabbed and shot her to death, leaving her body there, where it was found next morning by a passer-by. After committing the deed Gaa returned to the home of his parents in town, and, going to his room, coolly sat down and wrote a letter telling what he had done, and requesting that his body be buried beside his wife. He then took a dose of Rough on Rats, and was found dead in his room, about the time his wife's remains were found in the park. Gaa's brother is serving a life sentence in the Michigan Penitentiary at Jackson for also murdering a wife. Mrs. Conrad Gaa leaves three children by a former husband, who sold her to Gaa for a five-dollar note, the sale at the time creating a sensation.

Minor State Items.

WILLIAM HIGGINS, a young man at Wabash, took morphine and died.

WHILE suffering from delirium tremens, Isaac Fannen, of Peru, shot himself.

OSCAR WATSON and Carl Dowden were jailed at Muncie for burglarizing a store room.

EX-SHERIFF of Howard County, Luther McReynolds, died at his home in Kokomo.

THAD L. KEENY, aged 24, and a well-known young man of Muncie, died of consumption.

ELMER STEVENSON, employed in an Anderson brick yard, had his left arm torn off by cog wheels.

JOSEPH LENNOX was injured by a gas-pipe cannon bursting at Muncie, and he will probably lose his leg.

WILLIAM MORRISON was assaulted with knives by Hampton brothers at Manson, and he will likely die.

THEODORE MORGAN, Kokomo young man who confessed to having fired five barns, has been declared insane.

THE Muncie Daily and Weekly Times have just let the contract for an elegant new building, to be their future home.

MISS ANNA STEVENSON, Crawfordsville young woman, attempted suicide with morphine, but a doctor saved her.

RICHMOND is very anxious to secure a first-class Opera House, and offers inducements to any enterprising theatrical manager.

JOHN COLLINS, foreman at Swift & Co.'s ice-house at Fish Lake, LaPorte county, fell from the top of one of the houses and was killed.

FRED SCHULTZ, a prominent farmer, living a short distance from Batesville, was kicked by a vicious horse and died shortly after receiving the injuries.

ANOTHER gushing gas well has just been completed near Muncie, to be used by the Nut and Bolt Works, a new department of the Indiana Iron Works.

AT the preliminary trial of Doss Moore, the ex-marshal of Mitchell, for the murder of Wm. H. Tow, some weeks ago, Moore was placed under $10,000 bond.

JACOB KRELL of Rockford, Ill., employed on the new court house at LaPorte, fell from the wall on a pile of rocks and was killed, his skull being crushed.

WILLIAM HUGHES, aged 80, was instantly killed at Rossville by a Monon train. The old gentleman was crossing a bridge when the train met him. He was well known throughout the county.

THE great continuous tank system at the Maring, Hart & Co. window-glass works at Muncie was started recently, and gave the best of satisfaction to all interested, the quality of glass being of the silver-clear kind.

CHARLIE HARRISON and Henry Parker fought over a plug of tobacco in Adamsboro, near Logansport. Harrison struck Parker in the head with a stone, and the latter will die. The two boys had been life-long friends. Harrison is in jail.

MRS. HANNAH ANDREWS, aged 73, was burned to death in her house at Napoleon. In her enfeebled condition the old lady got too near the fire when her clothing caught, and before the fire could be extinguished she was dead. The house also became ignited, but the fire was extinguished by neighbors before being seriously damaged.

A CUTTING affray that may result in murder occurred at Manson, Clinton County. The Hampton brothers assaulted William Morrison with a knife and razor and frightfully hacked him. The trouble grew out of information furnished the officer by Morrison, which resulted in three of the Hamptons' friends being sent to the penitentiary.

KOKOMO has just secured three additional manufacturing enterprises. The first is the Great Western Pottery Company, which will employ 600 men. The second is the Kokomo Corn Planter Company, to employ 300 men, and the third is the United States Projectile Company, furnishing employment to 150. This means an increase in population of at least 3,000 for Kokomo.

AT Brazil Mrs. Sarah Shepard, 104 years of age, and the oldest woman in Indiana, was fatally burned recently. Her step-sons left her alone in the house and when they returned found her lying on the floor fearfully burned. The old lady was unable to tell how the accident occurred, and died shortly after being found. It is supposed that a spark from a pipe she was smoking set fire to her clothing.

THE Monon railway, at Crawfordsville, has paid the full taxes assessed against its property. The county taxes amounted to $6,500, and city taxes to $758.

JOHN LACHNER, one of the best known citizens of Lawrenceburg, died under peculiar circumstances. He had been bitten by a cat while at work in a distillery. He feared hydrophobia and immersed his arm in a tub of spirits. He then drank a quart of whiskey. He became pale and trembled after this, and then drank another quart. Then, going home, he retired to his room and died in an hour without speaking a word.

PHILLIP HYATT, Columbus man, laid for hallowe'en mischief makers with a gun, as they had threatened to carry off his wagon. The gun went off accidentally, Hyatt's hand was badly damaged, and the wicked youngsters are smiling.

R. M. BALL, Muncie's well-known washing-machine manufacturer, has filed suits in the federal court, asking for $1,000,000 damages from W. N. Neff, the Cowen manufactur. A suit has also been filed in the Delaware County Court asking that Neff be restrained from further manufacturing his machine. It is alleged in the complaint that Neff's machine is an infringement on Ball's patent.

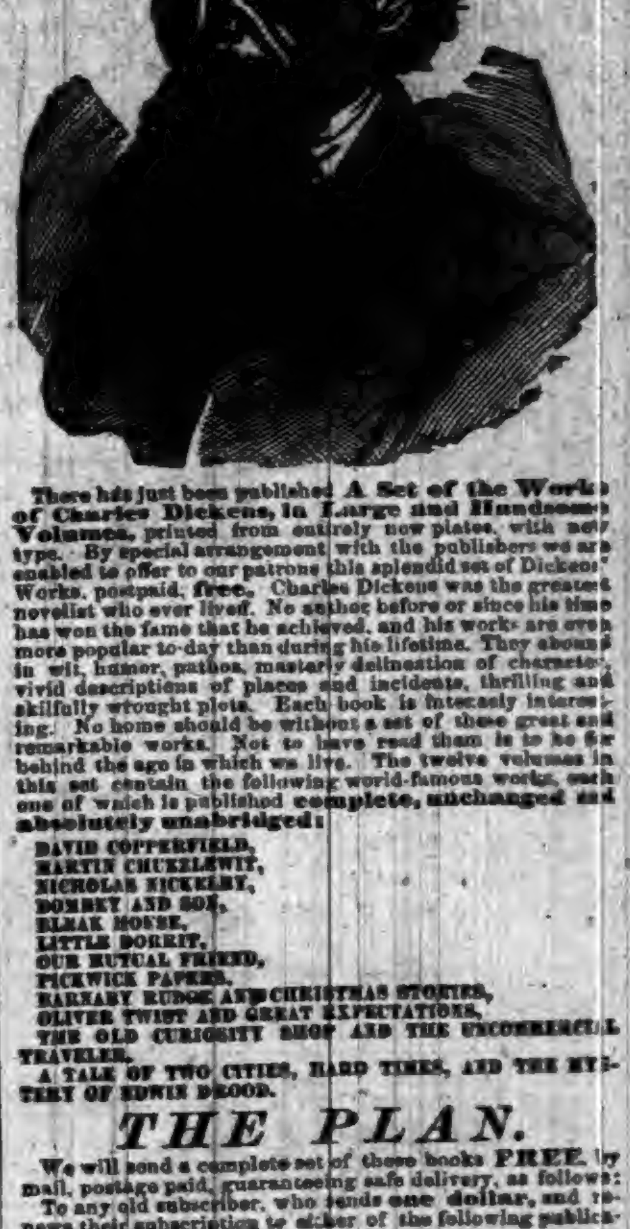
The Most Valuable and Remarkable Premium Ever Offered Free with any Periodical.
A MARVEL IN BOOK-MAKING.
A Set of the Works of Charles Dickens, IN 12 LARGE VOLUMES, FREE.



There has just been published A Set of the Works of Charles Dickens, in Large and Handsome Volumes, printed from entirely new plates, with new type. By special arrangement with the publishers we are enabled to offer to our patrons this splendid set of Dickens' Works, postpaid, free. Charles Dickens was the greatest novelist who ever lived. No author before or since his time has won the fame that he achieved, and his works are even more popular to-day than during his lifetime. They abound in wit, humor, pathos, masterly delineation of character, vivid descriptions of places and incidents, thrilling and skilfully wrought plots. Each book is intensely interesting. No home should be without a set of these great and remarkable works. Not to have read them is to be far behind the age in which we live. The twelve volumes in this set contain the following world-famous works, each one of which is published complete, unchanged and absolutely unabridged:

DAVID COPPERFIELD,
MARTIN CHUZZLEWIT,
NICHOLAS NICKLEBY,
DOMBEY AND SON,
BLEAK HOUSE,
LITTLE DORRIT,
OUR MUTUAL FRIEND,
PICKWICK PAPERS,
BARNABY RUDGE AND CHRISTMAS STORIES,

IF YOU CAN READ

and write, and are possessed of fair intelligence, you are fully qualified to make a grand success of what we offer you. We have lately published at great expense and labor a perfect wonder in the way of an illustrated Gift Book, suitable to all classes, an ornament to any home, and at a price that brings it within the reach of all, even those of moderate means. Heretofore only those who indulged in luxuries have felt that they could afford a book of this class, as they are sold in book stores at $5.00 and upwards. The book which we offer is not in any way inferior to those above referred to, but is far superior to hundreds of books of this nature that are sold at prices exceeding ours by an enormous per cent. It is selling with a rush wherever shown. Agents have only to show the book and mention the price, and it sells on its merits without further talking. No better Christmas, New Year's or Birthday present can be selected. It will sell, not only for holiday trade, but at all seasons of the year, for the reason that all will want it in their homes, and will have it as soon as they know the low price at which our agents can furnish them. Reader, if you need profitable employment, and a business in which you can and will take pride, as well as make money rapidly, do not fail to send for circulars containing private terms to agents, and full information which will be sent FREE upon application. Old and new agents alike are making handsome salaries—yes, fortunes. Many of those who are making the best records are new at the agency business, having had no previous experience. Make a start—the field is entirely new. No such terms have been offered agents as we now offer on this wonderful book. Special qualifications not necessary, for it sells everywhere at sight. Perhaps you have at some time been unsuccessful at the agency business. If so, there is every reason why you should try this, the PRINCE of gift books, as failure is impossible if you make A START. Write us to-day, study our circulars and directions, then order an outfit and go to work with push and energy. You may make the greatest mistake of your life, if you allow this GOLDEN opportunity to pass unimproved.

LOVE AND HUMAN NATURE.

Tale of a Short Courtship on the Mississippi River.

BY JOHN HABBERTON.

CHAPTER I.

Jack Brewster was a Yankee who thought he knew everything, yet he knew only two things well—honey and heredity. He got and sold more honey from a given number of swarms of bees than any other man in his native State, as many reports of county and State fairs still prove, and his honey was the sweetest and clearest that ever reached the markets of Boston and New York. He knew what to plant and when to plant it in order to have a great deal besides chance bloom for his bees to depend upon, so besides getting more honey than anyone else he never lost a swarm of bees by a strike against poor browsing ground and a consequent migration in search of better.

As for heredity, why, human nature was almost all he found worth studying after he left school. An early copy in his writing book at school had informed him that "The noblest study of mankind is man," and his father had informed him, as the result of personal experience, that whoever had made up that line had a very level head, so Jack had successively and successfully sized up every man in the village before he himself was old enough to follow a plow. As he gained years and knowledge, he was taught by reason and instinct that woman, being of the same species as man, was also a noble study. He soon informed himself, with some surprise and not a little indignation, that woman was the harder study of the two; at least, he made more mistakes than had been his lot while contemplating the few men and boys of his native village. The same rules did not seem to work; the girls who ought to be nicest, according to masculine standards, did not amount to anything; at any rate, they were not particularly interesting, yet others, whose faces and features wouldn't have promised anything in a man, proved delightful company. In his desire to study more carefully he made his acquaintance as close as possible, and some girls were so mistaken as to his intentions that, when disappointed, they had their fathers or big brothers call Jack to account in a way that caused his bones to ache for some weeks. His attempts to explain were laughed to scorn or sworn at, so when his third difficulty of the kind was manifestly impending, the well-meaning but blundering youth shook the dust of his native town from his feet, and made haste to bury himself and his sorrows in Boston.

But change of base did not change his business and mental bent. Although he took the first business chance that offered, he often made a great detour on his way between office and boarding house to take in the streets of commission merchants who dealt in honey, and he lingered critically and lovingly over the samples exposed to view. He studied people, too, though afar off. He did not know the family history of any one whom he met in business or on the streets, so he had to content himself with studying physiognomy. There must have been method in his madness, for his employers found him quite useful in "sizing up" new customers, and he had a promising future before him, when a chance newspaper paragraph caused him to leave at short notice and hurry to the South. It was not a question of heredity that caused this move, it was the report of a new wrinkle in the honey business. Up in the New Hampshire hills, where Jack was born and brought up, the summers are short and the winters long, so the bees have a short working season and must have a large part of their harvest left for their own sustenance during the winter. Here came a story, however, of a fellow who put up a lot of hives on a big scow, took them away down the Mississippi below New Orleans, about the end of February, where everything came early into bloom, and had himself towed about a hundred miles each week, thus following the blooming season and giving the bees the best chance that nature could provide for creatures whose instinct it was to work so long as there was anything to work upon. The plan sounded sensible; if any one could make money in that way he, Jack Brewster, with his unequaled knowledge of bees and their ways, could make more. Three weeks after the idea struck him Jack had a scow well loaded with bee-hives and was moored to the levee of the lower Mississippi, within easy scent of a great orange grove, and wondering why he had never had the sense to think out the new system for himself.

The bees attended strictly to business; so did Jack, so long as there was anything for him to do, yet he found most of his time at his disposal and nothing to do with it. At first, as he still knew everything, he determined to do missionary work and teach the natives everything they needed to know. They weren't a bit like New Hampshire people and didn't do anything in the way he had been taught to do it, which, of course, was the only proper way. A few endeavors in this direction taught him a great deal, at much cost of patience to the good-natured natives; he speedily learned, too, that New Hampshire dash and nervousness were entirely out of place if he expected to keep his health and temper, so he dropped back into his old habit of studying human nature. Not many people live directly on the banks of the Mississippi, and the few who are there know all about their neighbors, like the inhabitants of small neighborhoods elsewhere; so Jack soon heard all the gossip of whatever locality he and his honey-makers chanced to be visiting for the week. The tales did not differ much from those he had heard at home ever since he was a boy; they could all be traced back to the few sentiments which underlie pretty much everything that human nature does or has done since the world began, but because the dialect and surroundings were different Jack soon determined, like every other modern Yankee who had gone South, to write a book about it.

There certainly were some differences, however, in the people he now saw and those from whom he came, and the one which impressed Jack most forcibly was that the women were superior to the men. Young men of fine physique and high spirits were scarce, and not for the New England reason in similar cases—all gone somewhere to seek their fortune. On the other hand, almost all the young women whom he saw were so pleasant to the eye that he wished he might see them again and often. The subject was not one about which he could talk freely with the natives, yet by rolling it around his mind for some time he succeeded in polishing it until he felt justified in trying it on a new acquaintance in about this shape:

"Men along the river tell me they frequently have chills and fever, and that the climate don't allow the men to be very active, yet I can't see any sign that the younger women suffer in that way."

"No," said Sam Mazzitt, the man addressed, as he motioned the visitor to a seat on the log on which he was resting in front of his own door. "I reckon"—here he paused to puff contemplatively on his pipe—"I reckon the Lord thinks somebody down here ought to have a chance to be spry."

Jack made a mental note of this for his intended book, and then doubted whether it would do.

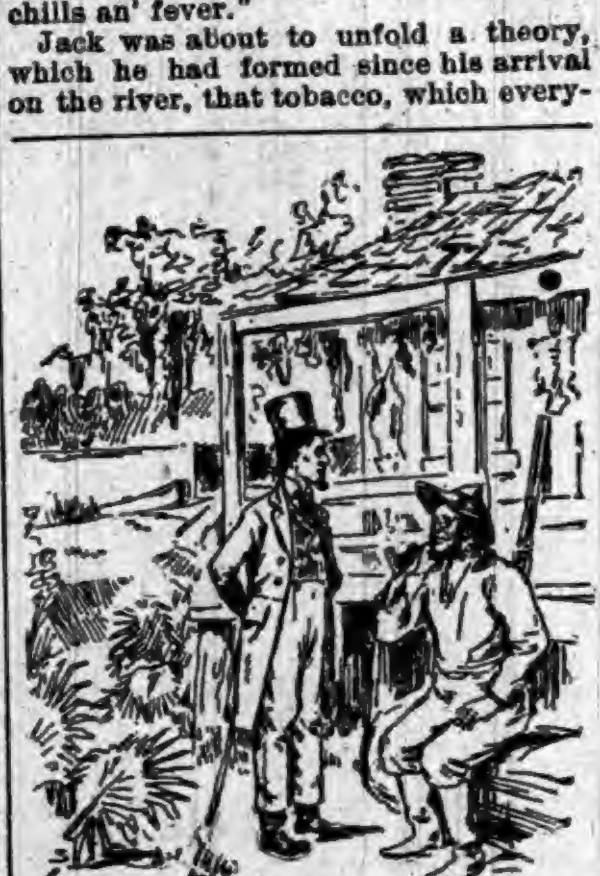
"Fact is," Sam went on, after a little more reflection, "gals ain't out in the woods an' swamps as much as men, an' they don't drink"—puff—"nor chaw"—puff—"nor smoke; leastways, not many of them takes to smokin' till they've been disappointed in love. Say, stranger, where's your own pipe? I'll git a coal of fire out here for to light it." Then he turned toward the house and shouted "Lizzie!"

"Please don't trouble yourself," said Jack, hastily. "I don't smoke."

The man looked sidewise quickly and suspiciously.

"What's that? Don't smoke? Well, some don't; but it's pooty bad for 'em in these parts. Tubbacker keeps off the chills an' fever."

Jack was about to unfold a theory, which he had formed since his arrival on the river, that tobacco, which everyone seemed to use, was probably one of the causes of malarial complaints, by making the liver torpid, when he heard a voice saying:



HE PAUSED TO PUFF CONTEMPLATIVELY AT HIS PIPE.

"What do you want of me, pop?"

Jack turned and saw in the doorway of the log house a specimen of that portion of the population that had seemed to him specially interesting. It was a girl in faded calico dress; but Jack wondered what the young fellows in his town at home would have said could they have seen her. There were some very good-looking girls in that town. Jack and the other boys had often looked at them admiringly for an hour at a time, when they should have been listening to the sermon which the minister was preaching that self-same hour, but none of them were like this girl. Yet she was not different from many whom he had chanced to see during his short trips ashore—merely a rich olive complexion, large, warm, dark eyes, and a great deal of black hair, with a head set firmly on a shapely neck. How could she be daughter of the thin, sallow, wrinkled, awkward man beside him? She must have inherited her good looks and figure from her mother. Jack resolved that he would improve the chance acquaintance, if possible, to see if there might not be something in the idea of inheritance by sex.

"It's nothin', Lizzie, gal," said the father; "I was goin' to git you to fetch but a coal to light the stranger's pipe, out it seems he don't smoke. Say, my friend, I know it ain't any of my business, but didn't you ever smoke?"

"Oh, yes," said Jack with a laugh. "Once, when I was about 12 years old, I smoked about an inch of a cigar. It answered me for life; I can taste it now, or whenever I think of it."

"Oh, I see," said the man, with a kind though pitying look; cigars ain't safe. If you'd begun on a pipe, now, you'd have been gettin' as much comfort out of tubbacker by this time as me."

Meanwhile, the girl had come from the house and stood in front of her father, listening to the conversation and looking at the visitor without any show of embarrassment. This seemed odd to Jack. If up in New Hampshire he had stopped at so common and shabby a place to speak to a native who did not know him, the women of the family would have regarded him from afar off, and looked uncomfortable if they chanced to meet him face to face. But this girl looked him full in the face, as pleasantly and with as little concern as if he had been an old acquaintance, and said:

"Pop gets so much comfort out of his pipe that I like to see him smoke."

Jack quickly determined that he would like to talk with a girl like that—a girl who made so little fuss about getting acquainted. He had already found that formal introductions were not in fashion among the humbler residents along the river, and that no one seemed to have any distrust of a man who attended to his business and did not concern himself unduly with other people's affairs. It was as delightful as it was strange—the way of Southern girls, or such of them as he had met, in talking to chance acquaintances; they were as frank and free as if among old friends, they did not seem on guard against possible impudence and any impulse toward flirtation seemed far from them. Was this a result of heredity? He thought it must be, yet how could it have come about? He would look into it; he would have plenty of time on his hands before his bees had got all they could out of the Louisiana lowlands.

"Supper's ready, pop," said the girl, "hadn't you better bring your friend in?"

"Of course," said the head of the house, knocking the ashes out of his pipe and arising. "Come along and have a bite with us, stranger."

"I am very much obliged," said Jack, "but if I am to enjoy your hospitality let me introduce myself. My name is Brewster; I'm down here with a boatload of bees, making honey for Northern markets."

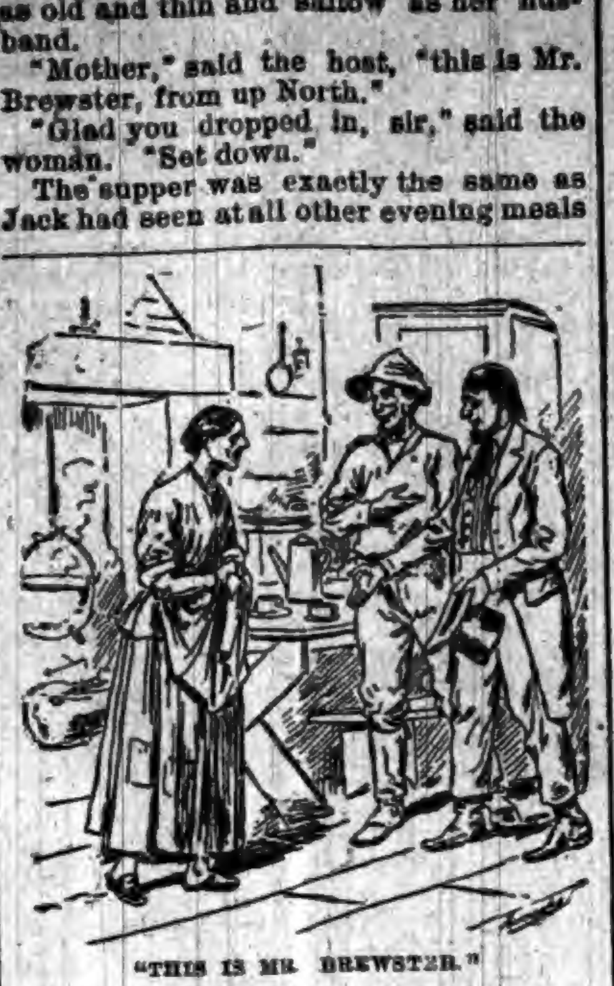
"That so?" asked the host, so much surprised that he forgot to offer his name in return. "That's queer. Don't they have any bee-trees up that way, I'd like to know?"

Jack thought not; he had forgotten that there were such things as bee-trees, though now he remembered to have read of them. He was about to explain the shortness of the Northern season and to tell of his method of work when he found himself within the house and in the presence of a woman about as old and thin and sallow as her husband.

"Mother," said the host, "this is Mr. Brewster, from up North."

"Glad you dropped in, sir," said the woman. "Set down."

The supper was exactly the same as Jack had seen at all other evening meals that he had seen on tables in the lowlands—fried pork, fried fish, fried bread, and coffee, which he felt sure would have been fried if any way could have been devised for preparing coffee in a frying pan. On his boat, thanks to a lot of stuff which he had brought down from the North, there was frequent change in the bill of fare. In his New England home he had been taught that much fried food was unhealthy, yet, right opposite him at a table sat a girl whose complexion would have been the envy of all the New England girls he knew. Could it be that heredity had accustomed the Southern physique to that sort of diet. He would make a note of that for future thought. Meanwhile, he determined that in this humble home, in which not a book was visible, he might hope to repay hospitality by offering some glimpses of a higher civilization, so he began to talk about the land from which he came.



"THIS IS MR. BREWSTER."

"Have you lived here long, sir?" he asked the host.

"Ever since I found a wife here," was the reply, "except the time I was off in the war. I belonged two or three hundred miles up the river, but I got down this way one spring, an' somehow I wasn't ever able to git away again; eh, old lady?"

The wife nodded assent, and Jack wondered how it could have been. He ventured the remark that the land seemed rich all along the river bank, and he supposed it was as good on his host's farm as anywhere else.

"Can't say much about the farm," said the host, with the shade of a laugh, "seein' I don't raise much but a little corn an' tubbacker. I was fishin' an' huntin' when I first come down, an' fishin' an' huntin' when I first met her, an' I've jest naturally been fishin' an' huntin' ever since. Seemed to be a land of sweets when I first got into it, an' it's been goin' on seemin' that way ever since."

"I don't wonder," said Jack, for the land was affecting him in the same way. The fragrance of orange, magnolia and the many odorous shrubs and grasses filled the air all the time he was ashore, the bouquet of his boatload of hives enveloped him when he was afloat; life was exuberant all around him, while the girls—cool-headed though he was—they, too, seemed to suffuse with sweetness all the atmosphere about them. Even the smoke of the native tobacco pipe was sweet. Jack had detested pipe-smoke at home, and had often lost part of an exciting debate in the village store by going outside for fresh air, but here the odor of burning perique was fragrance to his nostrils.

No sooner was the meal ended than the host again lit his pipe and the two men fell into chat on the one conversational stand-by of native-born Americans—politics. The visitor soon discovered that he could teach his host nothing on this topic, and that the women also talked well on the same subject—a subject which Jack's mother and sisters had always declared too tiresome to be endured. How could a man so intelligent be satisfied to live so plainly?

"Have you many neighbors?" Jack asked.

"Yes—yes, quite a heap of 'em," was the reply. "There's Raper, up the bend, about a mile away, and Trugg, a couple of miles down. Oh, yes; neighbors enough to keep us from bein' lonesome. Then the store's only four miles off; there's always sure to be somebody there. Then we see all the steamboats that go by; they're a powerful sight of company."

Jack stole a glance at Lizzie; her parents might be content to lazily decay in a lone cabin on the river bank, but girls were not made that way—at least, not such girls as he had known. But Lizzie's face was as placid and contented as if she had not an ungratified longing. He would find out about that, before his next move up the river.

"It's always pleasant here, except when it rains," said the girl. "There's always something new out of doors. Pop and mother think I ought to go to school, and sometimes I do, but it's an awful long walk, and it's real hard to sit indoors for hours when there's so much going on outside."

Jack unconsciously looked through the window to see what it might be that was "going on." There was much activity on some of the large plantations he had strolled out to, a mile or more from the river, but little could be expected directly on the stream; the Father of Waters has a way of carrying off with him large slices of his own banks, so nobody cares to live near the edge if he can build his home farther back. The scenery near the house was not inviting; there were plenty of cottonwood and sycamore trees, but whereabouts along the river were there not an equal number within sight?

Suddenly the girl sprang out to the front of the house. Jack followed her with his eyes and saw a young man with a gun sauntering by and looking toward the house.

"Now I see what is going on," said Jack to himself, and somehow the information made him feel sober and weakened his conversational powers. The girl soon returned, followed by the young man, who entered the house without removing his hat and remarked:

"Evenin'."

"Evenin'," replied the hostess.

"Evenin', Bill," echoed the host. "Always room for one more. This is our friend Mr. Brewster, from up North."

The young man nodded lazily to the guest, leaned his gun against the wall, and drew a chair to the table, putting his hat beneath it. Lizzie began to serve the remains of the supper and Jack tried to lose interest in the couple. He did not see what business it was of his, anyway; if a splendid girl like that chose to throw herself away on such a slouching, gawky fellow when she might have the society of a more intelligent man, he was sure she was welcome to gratify her own tastes. He had heard of wild roses before, but he never had learned that they ever came to much. He didn't care even to remain within hearing distance of such a couple of fools, so he invited his host to stroll down and look at the bee-boat, which was moored half a mile down the river.

MARYLAND ROASTER AND BAKER

IMPROVED
ROASTER & BAKER
FOR MEATS, FOWL, FISH, ETC., AND FOR BAKING BREAD, CAKES AND PUDDINGS.
BEST SIMPLEST AND CHEAPEST

THE STEAM produced by the process of cooking cannot escape, is absorbed by the article in the roaster, and acts as a basting. There is no evaporation, no drying up or burning, hence no shrinkage or loss of weight, and all the flavor and nutritious qualities of the food are retained. Tough meats are made tender, and any article roasted or baked will be sweeter, healthier and more digestible. Put the food in the roaster, place the roaster in a well heated oven; the roaster will do the cooking. It requires no attention. Can only be bought from dealers, the trade supplied by:

I had headache continually, my appetite was very poor, and a deathly faintness at the pit of the stomach accompanied by a terrible distress. During the past two years my Kidneys became very weak and pained me so badly I could not rest. Owing to extreme nervousness I was unable to attend to my business, and in January I came down with Nervous Prostration. Eight different Physicians have had me under their care, but I grew worse instead of better.

Learning of PITCHER'S LIVURA I began taking it and my improvement was noticeable from the first. I have taken 3 bottles and am ENTIRELY CURED, able to attend to my work, and have not felt so well for 6 years. I give all the credit to

SCHOOLS OF DEKALB.

And What They did Columbus Day.

DIST NO. 8, FAIRFIELD TP.

The people of Fairfield township, district No. 8, began gathering in the morning about 10 o'clock, bringing their well-filled baskets, for the purpose of having a dinner with the children and an enjoyable time. The dinner was the principal feature of the day, judging from the way the little folks (and we might say large ones) devoured the chicken, cake, and other delicacies so well prepared by the good ladies of the district. Besides the dinner the boys and gentlemen engaged in an old-fashion game of ball, pullaway, etc. The afternoon was principally taken up in procuring and planting a "Columbus tree," after which they each returned to their respective homes feeling that they had well spent their time in celebrating a day so long neglected by the American people.

DIST. NO. 7, WILMINGTON TP.

We had a mixed program, followed a part of the national program and No 2 in the Indiana School Journal. School opened at the regular hour, after which we proceeded with program No. 2 Then the school was marched out and formed in line about the flag in ordered ranks. After the president's proclamation was read by the master of ceremonies the flag of the nation was raised by an old soldier, Mr Carmer. The salute to the flag was then given and the school marched into the school house to proceed with the second part of the program, which was as follows:

"The Ode of Columbus Day"—Miss Nettie Long.

"A Loaf of Boston Brown Bread"—Miss Nora Sechler.

"Embarkation of Columbus"—Edward Long.

"Stolen Stars"—Miss Sadie Carmer.

"Meaning of the Four Centuries"—E H. Fisher.

"Independence Bell"—Miss Blanche Brown.

For this there was a large drawing on the board showing Independence Bell, with the inscription upon it in colored chalk. At 11 o'clock "America" was sung by the school and visitors. One great feature during this time were 80 flags, large and small, floating overhead The program being now finished tables were spread and pupils and visitors partook of a bountiful dinner. The afternoon program was short. Some historical notes were gathered relating to the former schools and school house of the district. A collection was taken in accordance to recommendations given in the School Journal, of $1 00, of which thirty-six cents was raised by the teacher, giving to each pupil a penny flag for a penny towards the Columbian exhibit, and two trees were planted, in which all the pupils of the school had a hand as well as others. One was in honor of the discoverer, and the other for the great and good Queen Isabella. After which the pupils, parents and all dispersed.

E. H FISHER, Teacher.

DIST. NO. 1, GRANT TP.

The 400th anniversary of the discovery of America was a gala day in the district. On Thursday a pole 57 feet high was raised and a flag purchased by the patrons and neighbors. On Friday morning the pupils, assisted by the teacher, decorated the school room with autumn leaves, flags and flowers. At 10:30 the school formed in a double semi-circle around the flag pole, and after the reading of the president's proclamation, the flag was raised and heartily saluted by all. Then followed the program, consisting of songs and recitations appropriate for the occasion. "Uncle Sam" then presented each pupil with a flag, and Messrs Soule and Jackson each entertained the company a short time with interesting speeches. All were then permitted to partake of a nice dinner prepared by the ladies present. The afternoon was spent in social enjoyment.

CORA A. SNYDER, Teacher.

Talk by Prof H. E. Coe, of Auburn, about "Man's Relation to the Objects Around Him."

The evening exercises were well attended by the parents of the precinct and the day was a well observed holiday in our neighborhood in general.

SPENCER BAIR, Teacher.

NO 7, UNION.

Mr. Reed, the teacher, called the school to order at 10 a. m The roll was then called, and each scholar responded by a quotation from the Holy Writ. In the center of the room, just above the black board, hung the portrait of Columbus The exercistes consisted principally of declamations and songs. They were well committed, well delivered, and well recited. After an hour of speaking and singing, all marched out doors in single file to pay homage to the dear old flag of our country (which floated in the breeze) by singing the song 'America" Returning to the room, the people were addressed by Mr. Smith and Mr. Carmer. After this, then, were two tables set extending nearly across the room, and were filled with the richest of viands. In the afternoon many trees were planted, three being named in honor of Columbus, Isabella, and Ferdinand The day was a pleasant one for the occasion The school is progressing finely under the kind and strict management of the teacher. The attendance was large After several hours of social chatting, all returned to their homes, feeling well pleased, intending to meet again in 1992.

ONE THAT WAS THERE.

NO. 11, RICHLAND.

In compliance with the proclamation of the President of the United States, and the suggestion of the states superintendent of public instruction, and also in fulfillment of the earnest request made by our worthy county superintendent, Mr. C M. Merica, the inhabitants of school district No. 11, in Richland township, and others, met at the school house on October 21, 1892, for the purpose of celebrating the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus

The forenoon exercises consisted in declamations, dialogues and select reading by the scholars, who, considering the short time which was taken in preparation, did very well The declaiming was interspersed with good vocal and instrumental music, conducted by Mr E Texter, a much experienced and efficient conductor, ably assisted by Miss Nora Lotzenhiser, organist, and her sisters, the Misses Lotzenhiser, and Mrs Alice Fried and Mrs. Malinda Lotzenhiser. At 11:30 adjourned, when the number of ladies present set about loading a long spread table witn the choicest eatables, which they had brought thither for our special use on that occasion, to which we all did ample justice. After the repast was over and the table cleared away, the flagpole which the patriotic citizens of the district had brought upon the ground was raised, and soon the flag, which the citizens, under the supervision of Mr. S. Nichols, our widea-wake and energetic school director had so generously contributed to buy, was seen floating from its top, after which the crowd assembled in the school-house to listen to a set speech by Mr. F. Griffith, of Garrett, whose natural oratorical gift and well chosen words greatly pleased his hearers. Mr. Griffith as a public speaker ranks among the first, and is a gentleman in every respect At the close of the speech many assisted in planting Columbus trees, which concluded the exercises for the day, when all wended their way home, feeling that it was a day well spent.

N. B. HATHAWAY, Teacher.

DISTRICT NO 8, JACKSON.

Columbus Day was observed at this place with true patriotism. Early in the morning Mary C Comeskey, the teacher, with scholars and patrons, assembled at the school house with well filled baskets. The exercises began at 10 a m, and were as follows: Raising of flag; devotional exercises, conducted by Rev. J. J Fred; recitations and singing of pupils and patrons. Then Rev. C. M. Elliott delivered an able address upon the subject of discoveries, after which the pupils gave a few more recitations, which was followed by another address by Rev. J. J. Fred, in which he brought to view many interesting facts concerning our country's flag. The exercises being now ended, a bountiful dinner was served, to which all did justice, and the afternoon was spent in planting the tree and social enjoyment. It was a day long to be remembered.

MARRIED.

At the residence of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Krise, Oct. 26th, Cecil O. Metcalf and Gertrude M. Krise. Over thirty invited guests were present to witness the ceremony which took place at 4 o'clock p. m. The parlor was beautifully decorated, especially the bay window in which the young couple stood, with Etta Metcalf and E. A. Eskright as bridesmaid and groomsman. Rev. J. S. Tedrow of Butler, performed the official duty, which made them man and wife. One of the principal features of the occasion was the supper which was served immediately after the ceremony. After spending an hour or two with the happy couple, the guests left wishing them many years of success, happiness and prosperity. The presents were beautiful and numerous.

DeKalb County Teacher's Association.

The DeKalb County Teachers' Association will meet at Auburn Friday and Saturday Nov. 25 and 26. Program of exercises will be announced in a few days. Besides good home talent. Mrs. Sarah Tarney Campbell will be with the association on Friday and give two talks on "Elements of Literature," illustrated in the Indiana series of primary readers L. O. Dale of Wabash, Ind., one of the most eloquent superintendents in the state will be with the teachers Saturday and give two of his valuable talks. Rev. J. B. Watson, the "Canadian Orator" has been engaged for a lecture Friday evening.

CHAS E. KRIEBEL, Pres.

W. C. T. U. Meeting.

The ladies of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Spencerville desire to express their tenderest sympathy with the members of their Union, who have been so recently and so sadly bereaved: Mrs. Mary A. Shutt, in the death of a loving husband; Mrs. Hattie Shutt, Miss Gertie Shutt, and Mrs. Claud Shutt in the loss of a kind and affectionate father.

That we commend the family upon whom the shadows have fallen so heavily to the tender care of an all wise and loving Father, who will never leave nor forsake them and who has promised to comfort and sustain us in our deepest sorrow.

Election Notes.

Editor Campbell, of the Dispatch, lost his vote by getting married and settling down in another precinct. Well we are not complaining.

The people's party polled about, 800 votes in the county. We will have the official figures next week.

Gilbert worked the saloons in Auburn, and was on the prohibition ticket in Steuben county. It takes a republican office seeker to straddle the fence properly, like the pious Wanamaker.

Oh, the infernal tin horns. We would like to get at the man who invented 'em.

In conclusion: The COURIER feels good, for it believes it helped greatly in the good work.

In our hour of triumph, let us remember the scores of the best republicans, who joined in with us, and helped to rebuke politcal corruption and bossism. They are worthy company for such republicans as Judge Gresham.

Republican speakers and papers, may as well stop trying to make people believe a tariff is a blessing. Have they forgotten what Lincoln said: "You can fool a part of the people all the time, or all the people a part of the time, but you can't fool all the people all the time." That saying alone, proves him a great man.

Republicans are not feeling as blue, as they might. They admit that they needed a lesson, and they admit that no more honest and capable man lives, than Cleveland.

Latest reports make Indiana democratic by 8,000. Ohio is now in doubt; Wisconsin democratic 13,000; West Virginia democratic 6,000; California and Nebraska in doubt. Several states claimed by republicans are so close that only the official count will decide.

Keyser township democrats are not to be sneezed at. They know a good thing when they see it, but would not believe Shockney's buttermilk story about the three cows that gave 2,000 gallons a day.

Don't let us forget to give credit to the democrat managers in the county, state and nation. They have proved their superior ability. Republicans realize that there has been a campaign.

Young man, climb into the democratic band wagon and go along with the procession. You can't afford to miss this chance to ally yourself with the party of reform and progress.

Be Decent.

We sincerely hope there is no need to say this, but we feel that there will be no harm in saying a friendly word or two to our fellow democrats, who have helped to win this sweeping victory. Brave men will not strike a fallen foe. Four years ago, the jubilant republicans, some of them, insulted several democrats by throwing [illegible]. We trust that no democrat will debase himself by retaliating in such a disgraceful manner. We have won a great victory and cannot afford to belittle it, by any small meanness. We won't do it. We will register a vow to be decent and respectful to our opponents.

A Great Popular History of the World.

The story of the world's history is, after all, the most interesting and most instructive story which has ever been told. It was probably never better presented, for general reading and reference, than in Alden's Cyclopedia of History, recently published. Every nation of the earth, ancient and modern, is treated in its alphabetical order, excepting, only, the United States, which is to form a separate work. You have ancient history as far back as B.C. 5004, and modern history down to A.D. 1892. All countries are described in their physical aspects, as well as historically, so you have the equivalent of a book of travels round the world. There are many illustrations, none for mere ornament, but all helpful for instruction. Considering the magnitude of the work, its small cost is astonishing. The entire history comprises about 800,000 words—equivalent, you will find by comparison, to about 10 volumes of ordinary size—and yet is issued in two handy volumes, in small but clear type, well and handsomely made, and sold in cloth binding for only $1.25 for the set, plus 20 cents for postage, if by mail. For 10 cents the publisher sends postpaid a paper-bound volume of 100 pages containing the complete history of several nations, by which you can judge of the character of the entire work. Every home ought to have a good Universal history; this is probably the best for general use. The publisher's catalogue of choice books, over 100 pages, a rich feast for book lovers, is sent postpaid for 2 cents. JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher, 57 Rose street, New York.

Desired Information.

We desire to impress upon the minds of the public the superiority of the service offered by the Wisconsin Central Lines between Chicago and Milwaukee and St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth and all points in the Northwest. The town is building an addition to the south side of the old jail, to be used for the fire engine in place of the room it now occupies in the old building. It would tickle modern carpenters to go and look at the places where the men have torn the corner strips off the old building. The solid plank walls are fully exposed, showing the great strength intended. The outer walls were of oak plank about 8 inches wide and 1½ inches thick laid flat one on the other, and passed through alternately at the corners. While such a wall could be easily bored through, a prisoner could not get hole made big enough to admit his body, as quick as he could through a brick wall. We have never heard that anyone ever cut through it.

Only once in a lifetime, unless we are especially favored, will we be apt to have such a treat as was offered at the Simcoe street Methodist church on Friday evening. Miss Laura McManis whistled herself into the good graces of her audience on her first appearance. Her costume was simple but becoming, and her presence was of that "taking" kind that at once established a bond of sympathy between her and the audience, preparing the way for a rich enjoyment of her wonderful powers for entertainment. One of her encores was the "Mocking Bird," and, charming as that bird is in his native glen, he has a formidable rival in Miss McManis. Miss Alice McManis is a practical little body, and aside from her musical abilities, which are of the first order, won the audience by the charm of her manner. It is seldom that piano solos are so appreciated that encores will be insisted upon, but Miss McManis is an exquisite pianist.—Oshawa (Can.) Vindicator.

Remember the whistling concert at the Presbyterian church next week. The whistler is a lady, Miss McManis, of Indianapolis, who has this wonderful gift that enables her to rival the birds in sweetness of song and her performances are said to be marvelous. She is said to be the equal at least of Mrs. Shaw, the famous lady whistler, and many think she is her superior. She has been giving concerts several years longer than Mrs. Shaw. Come out and hear the wonderful lady whistler. Her sister accompanies her to play the piano, and is a fine musician. Both ladies are highly repected church members at their home in Indianapolis.

The Lyon Comedy Company gave excellent satisfaction last week, and gave as their closing piece Saturday evening, one of their very best pieces, and played in their best style. The audience fairly went wild, especially the younger people, who went into ecstasies over the darky business, which was very amusing. Looking back now, at the hilarity of that night, one can hardly realize the change in scene of a few brief hours, as portions of that same audience watched the angry flames devouring the last vestige of the beautiful building. As we had said elsewhere the company lost about all of their clothing and stage properties. The ladies saved a good deal of theirs in the trunk that Mr. Lyon pulled out, but all the clothing of the gentlemen was lost, except only what they had on. Of course this made it awkward for them to play their week's engagement at Bryan, but it had to be done and we feel sure the good people over there would forgive any short comings in that line under the circumstances. Mr. Lyon lost 40,000 small bills and 20,000 tickets. He hastily had a few of each made to get him ready for the first days' start, and at noon on Monday, they took the train over the Lake Shore road to Bryan. We hope they will have better fortune there. In their engagements at Auburn, they have made many friends.

GONE UP IN FLAMES.

The Eureka Opera House, the Pride of of Auburn, a Pile of Ashes.

Sunday morning, at about 5 o'clock, the fire bell called the sleepy citizens of Auburn from their beds to witness the worst fire we have had for many years. The Eureka Opera House had caught fire at the east end, and the blaze was already shooting out through the boards when the first people got there. The light had wakened Mr. Bachtel's family, on the north side of the street, near his mill, and he had sent in an alarm. The fire department turned out promptly, and soon got to work. But the fire had got a foothold in the dressing rooms under the stage, and was roaring and rushing up through the stage itself with its oiled scenery and curtains—a regular tinder box, every part of which was inflammable. Two streams were turned on, but the intense heat and dense smoke made the fight a difficult one from the start, and the wooden sides, while they kept the water from reaching the interior, still helped to feed the flames that were raging within. But the fire gradually gained on them, especially as, after a half hour of steady pumping, the cistern gave out, a thing that had never happened before, though we have pumped from it for hours at other times. This caused a delay in geting the engine and hose around to the well near the National bank, from which which point they continued to play on the ruins the rest of the morning. The department kept watch all the forenoon, and twice there was a fresh call, the first having caught in the Ensley block, just at the north. There had been all the time a struggle to save this building, as well as John Knoder's residence, which stood right in the range of the wind, and close by, at the northeast, sparks also fell in showers. On the south, there was also great danger to Trout's livery barn, though the direction of the wind favored it. The horses and carriages were all taken out, and would have been saved, though he lost two sleighs that were stored under the opera house. Watson also had several sleighs there, and F. J. Yesbera had a good reaper, and of course these were all destoyed. The Lyon Comedy Company had just closed a week's performance, with a fine audience only the night before. It is supposed the fire originated in the theater dressing room, either from the stove or from a cigar stub, or in some such way. They lost all their dresses and theatrical outfit, except one trunk, which they managed to pull out of the flames. It was a serious loss to them, as they had an engagement to play all the week at Bryan. The owners of the Opera House, J. C. Henry and G. H. Yesbera, of course will suffer the most. The building cost something like $6,000, and is a total loss, with no insurance. They had originally kept it insured, but the rates were so high, and, in fact, insurance men did not care to take the risk till they got in the incandescent lights and re-arranged the stoves, etc. This they had just completed, and had got insurance men to send for revised rates, and in a few days it would have been fully insured, for both are careful business men. The loss to Auburn, also, is to be deplored. We need a good opera house, and this one was one of the best, if not the very best in any town the size of Auburn. The scenery and stage fittings were especially complete—the best and tastiest, perhaps, in this end of the state. As to whether they will rebuild, we cannot say.

Mr. Henry believes the fire caught in the dressing room, and gives a most reasonable explanation as to how it might have happened. One of the actors may have struck a match to light his cigar as he started away, and carelessly thrown the half extinguished match to one side, when it could easily have fallen into an open trunk containing clothing, as it is a common thing for actors to go away at the close of a performance leaving their trunks open, or at least not locked, merely letting the lid drop. If, in this supposed case, the lid dropped and the match lay within the trunk, it might have gradually ignited the clothing and so smouldered for some hours before bursting out. Mr. Lyon, the manager of the company, when he broke into the dressing room to see if he could get out any of the trunks, says that as the door gave way the trunks burst into flames and appeared all to be on fire. Tom Patterson, who works at the electric light plant, had with him that night for company Chaney Salyer, and John Altenberg. About 3 o'clock one of the boys, who had been asleep, woke up, and happening to turn his face to the window, noticed a light in the basement of the opera house, and remarked that "Hank Wolf evidently had not turned the lights out." But he thought nothing more of it, and lay down again and slept an hour or more. On waking a second time, they noticed a strong light at the dressing room window, and saw the building was on fire. Henry Baker, the night watch, had been along the alley leading from the street back to the lectric light works, soon after midnight, but everything was all right then. Mr. Wolf had gone, as we have already stated, to see that all was safe after the performance closed. Mr. Henry and his wife left the building last, except Wolf, who remained about fifteen minutes later. The loss of the building puts an end to our entertainments of that class. Mr. Henry spent a part of Monday cancelling all the dates he had made, for he had over thirty, filling in one for nearly every week till next spring. Our people sympathize with them in their loss, and realize besides that it is a great loss to the town. We hope it may be rebuilt at an early date, but can as yet give no information on that point.

FORT WAYNE, INDIANA.

ITS INDUSTRIAL ADVANTAGES

As a place of residence Fort Wayne is unsurpassed by any city in Indiana. Its agreeable climate, the prevalence of thrift and comfort apparent even in the dwellings of the working people, and the numerous and costly residences of the wealthy, together with unsurpassed Religious Privileges and Educational Facilities, combine to make this city one to be desired.

DIETHER & BARROWS,
MANUFACTURERS OF
The Weisell Washer—"The Best." Washes Quick, Clean, and Easy. Handy Folding Wash Bench. Agents Wanted. Send for Circulars.
New Plant will employ 100 men.

It is surely a City of Homes, as the visitor will be convinced when he looks with infinite pleasure upon the houses of the mechanic, the clerk, the young business man, and the laborer, miles and miles of streets being lined with neat but inexpensive houses, often surrounded by a plat of ground and owned by its occupant. Land has never been held at fancy prices, but the reasonable terms upon which the working classes have been able to obtain the great boon of owning their own homes has naturally enhanced the welfare of the city, and, apart from stimulating habits of thrift, has created a class of citizens who are content, and, having a stake in the country, are not so prone to become mixed up in labor troubles. The Savings Banks and Building and Loan Associations have done much good in this direction and numerous capitalists also stand ready to build and sell houses, payments to be made in small monthly sums, and no mechanic need be without a home of his own in Fort Wayne. Hundreds have been, and are now being built in that way, and the suburbs of Fort Wayne are rapidly filling up with neat and tasteful residences for the masses.

The Celebrated Kaiser, Bohemian and XX Beers.
Give employment to a large number of men the year around.

The climatic and sanitary conditions of Fort Wayne are first-class. Statistics show it to be one of the most healthful cities in the State. It is subject to no prevailing diseases, and has a perfect sewerage system.

The water works are city property, and the water taken from a nest of about eighty wells many hundred feet deep, and filtered through the sand and gravel of the naturally porous soil, thus making it absolutely pure and cool. The works are equipped with the Holly system having a capacity of four times the actual needs of the city.

FT. WAYNE LAND & IMPROVEMENT CO.
Just about once a day, on an average, the foundation of another new house is laid in Lakeside. The rapidity with which that beautiful addition is now building up with handsome homes is greater than ever before. If you have a hundred or two dollars to pay down on a lot, the Land Company will loan you all the money to build. The rent you are paying would soon secure you a home of your own.

S. F. BOWSER AND CO.,
Patentees and Manufacturers of Self-Measuring Oil Tanks.
Employ about one hundred and twenty-five men.

The Fire Department is conceded to be among the best managed and most complete in the country and never has the city suffered from any great loss by fire.

Of its educational institutions enough cannot be said. No expense is spared in perfecting and developing a complete system of public schools and besides several scholastic institutions of high rank have here found adequate support and management.

The right place for the business man or manufacturer is where they can get the many advantages required to run their business and successfully compete with others in the same line. These many advantages are to be found in Fort Wayne with her Natural Gas (at about one-half the cost of other fuel) the many trunk lines of railroad running through the city, every express company in existence represented by their agents, cheap rents, or if they wish to purchase, good value in real estate, and low taxes.

Besides the above concerns the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad employ 4,000; the Wabash Railroad, 1,000; the Grand Rapids and Indiana, 200; the Nickle Plate, Lake Shore and Michigan Southern, and Muncie Railroads, between two and three hundred, and the Fort Wayne Electric Street Car Company, a large number of men.

If you are looking for a location do not fail to visit this beautiful city.

The Sewerage of Paris.

It is generally supposed that the sewerage of Paris is the best in the world. Hundreds of Americans have floated in a boat along the sewers of this city, and, on regaining the ground, have never dreamt that there are 100,000 cesspools in Paris which are emptied only once or twice a year.—Inter-Ocean.

THERE is something wrong that so much money is spent on funerals and tombstones, while so many who are in distress and want.

SOMEWHAT STRANGE.

ACCIDENTS AND INCIDENTS OF EVERY DAY LIFE.

A CURIOUS circumstance in connection with the recent epidemic of cholera at Hamburg was the departure of all the birds from the city a few days prior to the outbreak. Numerous records exist of birds thus suddenly disappearing from plague-threatened centres, and throughout the world these fittings are generally looked upon as omens of approaching sickness. Thus in the summer of 1884, when the cholera was raging at Marseilles and Toulon, all the birds, as if actuated by a common impulse, abandoned these two cities and suddenly resorted to Hyeres. The latter place enjoyed a complete immunity from cholera, and the extraordinary influx of birds there attracted much attention at the time. Similar migrations have been observed in various parts of Italy, Austria and Russia just before the advent of cholera, and in Galicia, especially in the summer of 1872, all the sparrows suddenly quitted the town of Prezemsyl a couple of days before the appearance of the pest, and not a single bird returned until the end of November, when the cholera had entirely disappeared. The extent to which birds realize and guard against the dangers of certain forms of contagious disease have long engaged the attention of naturalists, whose speculations on the subject are likely to be revived by the recent migration of the birds from Hamburg.

"THERE are on nearly every railroad locomotives that are known as Jonahs" said Henry E. Archer, who has spent twenty years in the service of the Illinois Central, to a St. Louis Globe-Democrat man. "Some years ago an engine on an Illinois road blew up, cutting the fireman's head off with a segment of boiler iron. The engine was rebuilt and made as good as new, but no engineer could be found to run it more than one trip. It was soon whispered about that it was haunted; that the headless fireman had an unpleasant habit of appearing on the tender with pick and shovel and insisting on firing up. One night an engineer and his fireman deserted the locomotive while out on a run, and the conductor attempted to bring the train in. He was not afraid of ghosts; not he! But he sidetracked at the first opportunity and waited until daylight before completing the run. He told me that the ghost was no joke; that every time the furnace door was thrown open the headless apparition entered the cab, bearing a shadowy scoop of coal. For a month the engine laid in the shop. Then an engineer, who was compelled to either take it out or lose his place, mounted it. Before he had run a dozen miles it went through a culvert, wrecked the train and killed nine people. It was never rebuilt."

IT would surprise a good many persons probably, to hear that "Punch and Judy" is a Chinese institution, but there seems to be good ground for the supposition, according to a correspondent of a London paper, who says: "A few years ago I witnessed at a garden party given by the general then commanding the troops in Hong Kong the exhibition of a Chinese 'Punch and Judy,' which had been brought down from Canton. The general arrangements were precisely the same as those of an English 'Punch and Judy,' the only difference being that instead of the dog Toby there was a wooden figure with clapping jaws, supposed to represent a dragon. The costumes were Chinese, and the piece varied in some respects from that which we see in England, but all the characteristic features were the same. The lesser mandarins were duly knocked over by the big mandarin, with just the same satisfactory whack as that with which Punch disposes of Judy and Jack Ketch, and all the accessories of voices, pipes and scenery corresponded to those of the English performance."

Two instances of wonderful presence of mind have turned up in England of late. The other day the steamer Conqueror of Margate broke her main beam directly underneath the cylinder. The pieces flew in all directions, like the bursting of a monster bombshell, and the scalding steam escaped with terrific noise in blinding volumes of superheated vapor. But the brave engineer, unmindful of the terrific danger he incurred, opened the safety valve and stopped the engine. Had he for a moment lost his presence of mind, or been the least less prompt in action, every soul on board would have lost their lives. As it was, several of the passengers but narrowly escaped. A large purse was made up by the passengers as a token of their gratitude to the brave man who had saved their lives. The second instance of presence of mind is in the case of a Manchester schoolmistress who noticed that a factory next door to the school was on fire and that the tall chimney was threatening the schoolhouse with instant destruction. Coolly and quietly the heroic woman ordered all the pupils, 179 in number, to run into the yard at once and not to wait to collect slates or any of their implements of education. Scarcely were the children out of the house before the immense chimney fell with a tremendous crash, burying the empty building under tons of smoking brick.

A CLEVER trick was played a short time ago on board a steamboat plying between Calais and Dover, relates the Boston Transcript. The sea was rough. A young woman, apparently ill with seasickness, groaned until a gentleman, who seemed to be a stranger, approached and asked if she would take a lozenge, which he had often tried on people with marvellous results. The young lady finally accepted the offer. The cure was instantaneous. Hardly had she swallowed the lozenge when she was sitting up all smiles and ordering ham sandwiches and bottled ale. Some passengers, struck with the incident, inquired what was the wonderful remedy, and the gentleman, who proclaimed himself the agent for the sale of the lozenges, disposed of a considerable number of boxes at $2 each. What was the surprise of the buyers when they saw the lady and her preserver go off arm in arm when the boat reached Dover. The pills were common jujube paste.

THE Captain of the steamer St. Paul tells of a remarkable storm of volcanic ashes through which his ship passed on her last trip from San Francisco to Alaska. He says that at ten o'clock in the morning the vessel entered into a dense black cloud from which it did not emerge until two in the afternoon. From the speed of the ship and the velocity of the dust storm he thinks the volcanic cloud was probably a hundred miles long. Showers of fine volcanic dust fell upon the deck to the depth of several inches. At noon it was so dark that lamps had to be lighted, and the sunshine was pale as moonlight. The nearest active volcano was in the Pabloff Mountains, 265 miles away. The officers thought the ashes came from some volcanic disturbance nearer the vessel, and it has been suggested that perhaps a new island has arisen from the sea somewhere, as volcanic islands have emerged in Alaska waters quite recently.

IN writing of Francis Battalia, the Italian lithophagous, or stone eater, Dr. Bulwer, in his "Artificial Changeling," has this to say: "This queer creature was born with two small pebbles in his hands, one in each. He refused all nourishment, only when small stones were given him with the nursing bottle." After Battalia grew to manhood he was exhibited in all the principal cities of Europe. Dr. Bulwer had a chance to professionally examine the "queer creature" after "it" had been kept on a stone diet for about thirty years. He thus describes Battalia's manner of feeding: "He would put three or four stones in a spoon, swallow them down and then drink a glass of beer after them. He devoured a half peck of these stones every day, and when he shakes his body they chink in his stomach. In appearance he is a black, swarthy-looking fellow, and having been a soldier, made good use of the food allowed him by selling it and subsisting on dirt and pebbles."

"RAIN GAMBLING" is the latest vice to develop in India, and the police of Bombay and Calcutta are just now vigorously at work prosecuting rain gamblers in the local courts in an endeavor to show that the law includes this form of gambling. In Calcutta the "outfit" of the rain gamblers is in a street in the Burrabazaar. Here into a small tank, four feet square and six inches deep, an ordinary spout discharges rain water from the roof of a three-story building. In gambling with this apparatus bets are made at the beginning of the rainy season as to whether or not the tank will overflow at a given shower, to the extent the rain will overflow it when the water sheets come down in proper tropical style. It is alleged that on busy days in the bazaar several lakhs of rupees change hands. This is surely vice made easy for the lazy man.

RECENTLY (says a Helena paper) the finely bred Gordon setter Faro, owned by John Keppler of Helena, Mon., entered the Capital gambling-house with a $10 bill in his mouth. Going to one of the faro-tables the dog dropped it on the queen. To say that the suave dealer was surprised would be putting it mildly. But recovering himself after a few moments, he asked the dog if he wanted a copper on the $10. The dog barked as if in the affirmative, so, placing a copper on the money, the dealer made the turn. The queen came up a smiling loser, and the dog won. Taking two $10-bills in his mouth, Faro gave them to his master.

IN a farmhouse between Marcellus and Skaneateles in New York there is a curiosity. Between the plastering and the siding of the houses, at one joint, there is a vacant space, which for the past three seasons has been utilized for hiving purposes by a colony of bees. The colony has grown to such an extent that on a warm Summer day it is sometimes unsafe to drive horses in the yard near them. The family living in the house expect to make repairs in the fall, and they estimated that they will harvest 200 pounds of honey from their novel hive.

THE oldest man in England is said to be Amos Jinks, a native of Shropshire, now living at Wellingborough, Northamptonshire. The claim that he is 107 years old, it is averred, has been investigated and thoroughly verified by responsible parties. The old man is withered and bent, his eyesight has failed, and his voice is shaky, but apart from these evidences of age he is free from physical infirmity. He eats, drinks, and sleeps well, and is not at all deaf.

A COMPARATIVE anatomist says that the little toe has got to go, that it is a useless appendage, already showing signs of degeneration or withering away. It is proved that the horse, in the course of several centuries, has dropped four toes and now travels on one, and some think that man's pedal extremities are bound to follow a similar line of evolution. In the horse it is the middle digit which has survived as the fittest. In man it will be the first or great big toe.

A "MOVING STONE" in Lexington, Ky., is one of the wonders of the State. A huge bowlder stands alone, near the residence of the late Governor Gilmer. Resting on this bowlder is another weighing at least twenty tons. The upper bowdler is sustained by a stone pinnacle about two feet square, and so evenly balanced that, although the slightest touch will cause it to rock to and fro, a hundred horses could not pull it from its socket.

NEAR Calcutta a panther has been killed which during the past few years has killed and eaten sixty children, forty women and several men.

Pet Names.

The popular abbreviations of pet names in earlier times were in, on, et, kin, and others says the Boston Home Journal. Emma was shortened to Em, and for love's sake it became Emmott or Emmet. Matilda was first Til, then Tillot. Bartholomew was Bart, then Little Bart or Bartlett. The popularity of these pet names is seen in the great number of them which eventually became family names.

The Tillotsons, the Emmetts and the Bartletts are numerous in England and America, although few dream that their names were originally pet and not surnames. Before the use of family names it was often necessary to use the diminutive forms from the fact that the same name was not infrequently give to two or three children of the same family. The original of the surname Robinson is the pet name of Robin or Little Robert.

As Germans of to-day add chen to children's names as a term of endearment, making Anna Annchen, Elizabeth Lischen, so our English ancestry used the equivalent kin. Watkin was Little Walter, Simkin, Little Simeon, Perkin Little Peter. Terminations in kin were in use among the lower orders—that is, among the Anglo-Saxons, while the diminutives in, on and et were mere aristocratic and used by families of Norman blood.

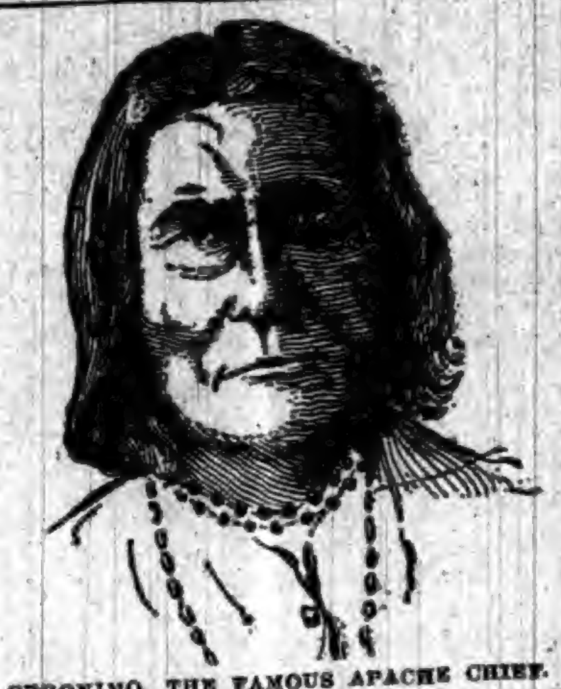
A Curious Crab.

The administrative report of the Marine Survey of India for the official year 1891-92 has been published. Among the animals Dr. Alcock has, specially observed is the red ocypode crab, which swarms on all the sandy shores of India. The bigger of its two chelæ, or nippers, bears across the "palm" a long, finely toothed ridge, and on one of the basal joints of the "arm," against which the "palm" can be tightly closed, there is a second similar ridge. When the "palm" is so folded against the base of the "arm," the first ridge can be worked across the second, like a bow across a fiddle, only in this case the bow is several times larger than the fiddle. Dr. Alcock concluded that the use of the stridulating organ appears to be that a crab, when it has entered its burrow, may be able, by the utterance of warning notes, to prevent other crabs from crowding in on top of it.

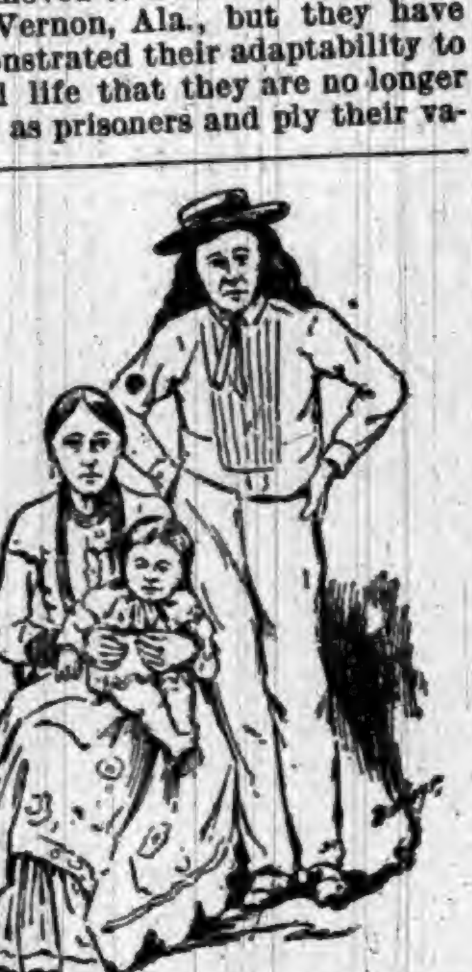
HAPPY AND HOPEFUL.

Geronimo and His Followers Gradually Being Trained to Ways of Civilization.

Gradually the Indian, even the most savage, is showing signs of susceptibility to the influences of civilization, and the generally accepted belief that he and the customs of social life were incompatible is no longer received without a question. When Geronimo and his band of braves surrendered a few years ago to General Crooke it was deemed an almost impossible task to tame the fierce spirit of the warriors who had cost the nation so much in money and blood, but the experiences of to-day teach differently, and the Apaches who then spread death and destruction in their path now stretch forth their arms in contact with nineteenth century civilization. After Geronimo and his band surrendered they were confined in Florida as prisoners, but the climate was less merciful to them than that of Arizona and many of them sickened and pined away and died. The survivors, between 300 and 400, were removed to a military station at Mount Vernon, Ala., but they have so demonstrated their adaptability to civilized life that they are no longer treated as prisoners and ply their various business occupations, earning money and laying by their savings for the proverbial rainy day. Every thing wears a happy, hopeful aspect. While, indeed, the old braves will never become wholly civilized, they look upon it favorably, and their children are fast drinking in the sweets of education.

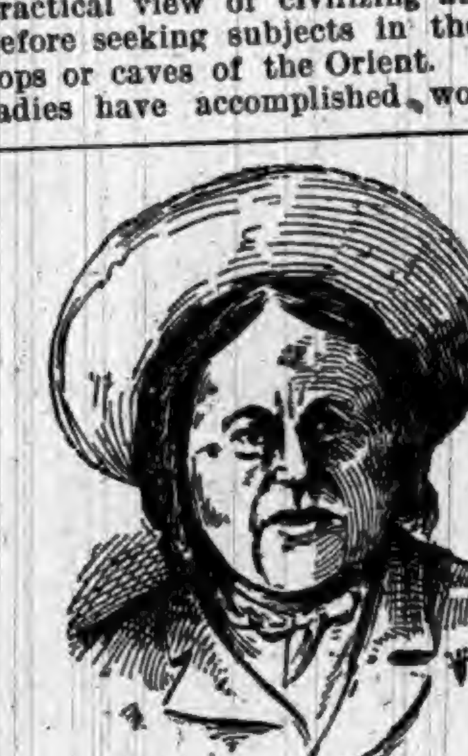


GERONIMO, THE FAMOUS APACHE CHIEF.

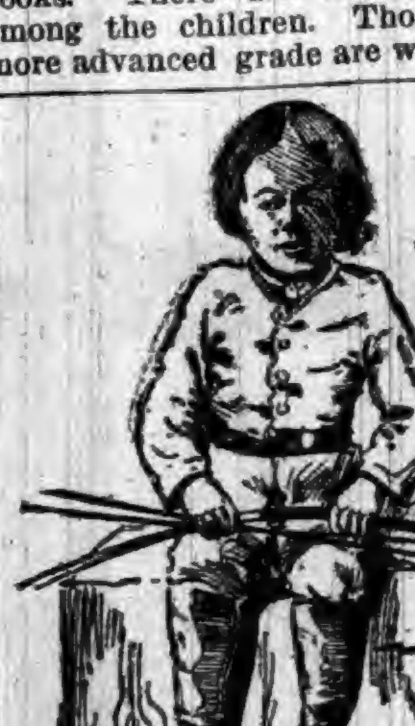


PARTLY CIVILIZED APACHE FAMILY AT MOUNT VERNON.

Some three years ago a number of Boston people established a school at Mount Vernon, Ala., for the education of Indian children. A building was erected and placed in charge of the Misses Shepard, two young ladies of rare refinement, who took the practical view of civilizing at home before seeking subjects in the tree tops or caves of the Orient. These ladies have accomplished wonders, when one takes into consideration the careless freedom of the Indian child and its antipathy to discipline. By a system of presents, simple and inexpensive, the love of the little one was won, and when the ground was prepared the seeds of education were carefully and judicially planted. Generally the boys take deeper interest in their studies and pursue knowledge further than the girls, for the latter become belles at 13 or 14 and are more solicitous for beaux than books. There are several classes among the children. Those of the more advanced grade are well versed in geography and their knowledge of it would compare well with that of the pupils of our common schools. Sunday school is also held and so deep an interest is taken in the work that many of the grown-up Indians attend. To insure cleanliness, which is next to godliness, a weekly inspection of the children is held, and the parents vie in having their little ones look clean and neat. The little copper-colored faces fairly shine after the vigorous polishing administered to them by their mothers. The children are taught to sing and the voices of the little ones sound as sweet and harmonious as those of any Sunday school in the land as they ring forth in the good old hymns that reach a tender spot in the heart of every believer in Christianity.



LOCO, AN APACHE CHIEF.



AN APACHE CHILD AT MOUNT VERNON.

Beside the school building, barracks, and homes of the Indians, there has been a hospital recently established where the sick are well cared for. At first the Indians were averse to entering the wards, but the few who entered spoke so highly of the kindness received that now all the sick are anxious to be taken into such comfortable quarters. Should an Apache die while in hospital, friends bring the body to the woods, where it is disposed of, but the spot of interment is never divulged. The adults employ their time in making bows and arrows, baskets, water jugs, placques, and in chicken farming. Their water pitchers are unique. They are made of wicker and are coated on the inside with a resinous preparation that renders them impervious to water, while at the same time it assumes a very polished appearance. The weaving of blankets, which are models of workmanship, occupies much of the time of the women.

Of the old chiefs at Mount Vernon, Loco is the most disposed to civilization. Geronimo at first yearned for his old-time freedom, and in his face there was a tinge of sadness and in his heart deep sorrow over his restraint. But the longing feeling has now nearly departed and Geronimo looks more favorably on his surroundings. Like the rest of his people, he is intelligent and possessed of natural keenness. The Apaches are not as sluggish or debauched as the Sioux; but when on the warpath they even exceed them in cruelty and wantonness. The hope of the "colony," however, is based not upon the old chiefs but upon the children. They are very quick to learn and generally docile. Nothing pleases the little girls better than to watch the lady visitors to the station and to examine the make up and colors of their dresses and bonnets. They are as susceptible to Dame Fashion as any of their pale-faced sisters.

A Spanish Election.

The Spanish regard for a fine bull is well known. Very often the animals of the bull-ring are as famous as the toreadors. According to a report in a Spanish paper this regard for the bull was put to a very new and singular use in a town in the province of Toledo recently. An election was being held in the little town of Oropesa, where the ministerialists, or government party, and the Carlists, or Spanish "old-liners," were nearly of equal strength. Each party, therefore, was trying to prevent the other from polling its full vote.

The polling had gone on, without any apparent majority on either side until nearly the end of the day. All at once all the parties were greatly interested in the appearance of a superb bull, led by a countryman, exactly before the door of the voting booth. Everybody took an interest in him.

Presently it was observed that as certain voters approached the door of the booth the bull made a sudden lunge toward them. This frightened them so that they took to their heels, and did not dare to approach the door again.

But when certain other voters came up, the bull stepped back politely and let them enter. In course of time it turned out that all the voters who had been frightened away were ministerialists, and all those whose who had been allowed to vote were Carlists.

When it was too late to change the result, and the Carlists had carried the day in Oropesa, it came out that the supposed countryman was a Carlist "heeler" in disguise, and that, by means of a bradded stick concealed under his flowing cape, he had goaded the bull forward whenever a ministerialist appeared, and urged him backward when a Carlist hove in sight!

Impromptu Speeches.

James Russell Lowell is recorded as saying that he always liked to prepare his impromptu speeches. At a dinner given to Mr. Longfellow during a visit to London, it was agreed that no set speeches should be made.

After the fruit and coffee had been discussed, Admiral Farragut arose, and protested that they could not dream of parting without hearing from Mr. Gladstone.

Mr. Gladstone began by assuring the company that he was of the mind of Lord Palmerston, who said, "Better a dinner of herbs where no speaking is, than whitebait and oratory therewith."

His "remarks" developed into an eloquent oration. He had read the works of the American poet, and quoted passages from several of his poems, and concluded by paying a splendid tribute to Mr. Longfellow's attainments.

The subject of this superb panegyric was deeply touched, and replied without rising in a few happily chosen phrases, prefaced with the remark that in his case the pen was mightier than the tongue, and that he could not make an extempore speech.

Wages in Spain.

There are among Spanish mechanics some who get but $8.50 weekly in return for years of expensive education. From $700 to $1,000 will be found to be the average moderate remuneration for the ordinary Spanish engineer. Of course there are engineers, again, whose annual totals go beyond $2,000. Working sixty hours per week they will receive but $5 to $7. Only the extra good hands get the larger amount. As living is not cheap in the towns (about the same as in Paris or other big French villes) they are obliged to either go a rather long way to their suburban homes, or, if living in the city, to live poor and have less food and less pure air. Puddlers only earn 3½ to 4 pesetas daily. All salaries are usually paid fortnightly.

AMERICAN watch factories produce 35,000 watches per week, and about that number drift into the hands of the patient and ever-ready pawnbroker.

Western Pearl Co., Chicago, Ill.
Dear Gentlemen:—I received the Safety Bicycle last Saturday about 6 p. m. I was very much surprised at seeing such an elegant, handsome Safety. It is really more than I expected. By trials and testimonials I find your firm is reliable in its dealings and promises. I really cannot express my thanks for the nice Safety. Yours truly, Emil Dahlman.
Western Pearl Co., Chicago, Ill.
Dear Sirs:—The Bicycle came promptly. The boy is overjoyed. He acted like a crazy child for a while. Over and over he repeated, "It seems as if I were dreaming, but no, there it is"; and then he would go to it and pat it and talk to it. We have found you men of your word. Thanking you for your faithfulness to your word, I remain, Yours respectfully, H. A. Day, for Lee Day.

For the Good of Others

Rev. Mr. Williams Heartily Indorses Hood's Sarsaparilla.

We are pleased to present this from Rev. A. A. Williams, of the Sillsbee Street Christian Church, Lynn, Mass.:

"I see no reason why a clergyman, more than a layman, who knows whereof he speaks, should hesitate to approve an

Article of Merit

and worth, from which he or his family have been signally benefited, and whose commendation may serve to extend those benefits to others by increasing their confidence. My wife has for many years been a sufferer from severe

Nervous Headache

for which she found little help. She has tried many things that promised well but performed little. Last fall a friend gave her a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla. It seems surprising what simply one bottle could and did do for her. The attacks of headache decreased in number and were less violent in their intensity, while her general health has been improved. Her appetite has also been better. From our experience with

"How Old I Look, and not yet Thirty."

Many women fade early, simply because they do not take proper care of themselves. Whirled along in the excitements of a fast-living age, they overlook those minor ailments that, if not checked in time, will rob them of health and beauty. At the first symptom of vital weakness, use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The roses will return to your cheeks, sallow looks depart, spirits brighten, your step become firm, and back and headache will be known no more. Your appetite will gain, and the food nourish you.

BUILDING A PASSENGER CAR.

A Detailed Description of How the Work Is Accomplished.

Thirty-five thousand passenger cars are now in use on the 175,000 miles of railroad in the United States and Territories, and these cars have cost over two hundred million dollars. A passenger car costs $5,000 to $8,000. An outline of the manner in which such cars are built cannot but be of interest, as this class of car construction constitutes an important industry here. When an order is received for a given number of cars it is accompanied by carefully prepared drawings of every detail and by specifications which even enumerate the quantity and quality of screws, nails, bolts, castings, trimmings, etc., which are to be used. Those unfamiliar with this class of work would be astonished at the elaborate nature of the drawings, many of them of full size, with all dimensions marked on them so that no mistakes may occur. The specifications aim to contain a clear statement of all the materials to be used, their quantity, quality and sizes; and the manner in which they are to be treated and built into the proposed cars, is also very carefully described; even the paint and varnishes are specified, as well as the number of coats of each, and the length of time each coat is to be given to dry. Thus it will be seen that a car is first carefully constructed in the mind of the designer and all details put upon paper, which serve as a guide to those having the construction in hand. When an order for cars is placed, bills of the materials required are made in each department and patterns for the iron and wood work are made, to guide the foremen in laying out their portions of the work. As speedily as possible departments are furnished with the raw or finished materials called for on their bills of materials with which to make their portions of the car. As an illustration, the wood machine shop gets out from the rough lumber the exact number of pieces of wood of every kind and form called for, and the blacksmith shop gets out the forgings required, the bolt department makes the exact number of bolts of various kinds needed, and the brass foundry fills its order for the necessary trimmings, which trimmings, when so specified, are taken in hand by the electro-plating department and plated with nickel, silver or gold, as called for. The glass department cuts the glass, etches it, and silvers it when required, and makes and furnishes all the mirrors. When everything is ready the prepared materials are delivered as needed at the compartments where the cars are to be erected. First, the bottom materials, such as sills, floor-joists, flooring, draft-timbers, and transoms arrive and are taken in hand by the bottom-builders. At the completion of the bottom of a car, which comprises the work of the bottom-builders, it is turned over to the body-builders, who put up the frame work and complete the body of the car, their work consisting of applying posts, bracing, filling, belt railing, paneling, car-lining, etc. The car is now taken by the roofers, who apply the roof-boards, moldings, etc., and then the tinners put on the metal covering. After a careful inspection the car is taken by the outside painters, and is entered at the same time by the inside finishers, who put in and finish the nice inside wood-work, which is of the best kinds of lumber, such as oak, ash, cherry, mahogany, or vermilion. The piping for heating and for lighting is set in before the seats are placed in position. The inside finish, too, conceals the electric wires which may be called for in the specifications. Cars are lighted by oil, gas or electricity. If by gas, it is carried in condensed form in tanks underneath the car, and is conducted to lamps by suitable piping. Electric lights are derived from storage batteries, and from dynamos run in a baggage car, by steam from the engine.

When the inside wood work is all in place, and some of this finish comprises exquisite carving, the inside painters go over the entire interior wood work, making the car ready for the trimmers, who place the bronze or plated trimmings upon doors, sash, blinds, and walls. The upholstering, draperies, seat-coverings, carpets, etc., which have all been previously prepared, are now put in, and when the finishing touches are added by the equipment department the car is ready for delivery to its purchaser, to whom it is sometimes sent by special messenger. Parties for whom cars are building generally keep an inspector at the shops to see that all work and materials are in accordance with plans and specifications. All work in the construction department is carefully subdivided, many different gangs of men having their allotted tasks, which they perform with surprising quickness and dexterity. Most of this passenger car work is paid for by piece wages. These car works have the capacity for turning out twelve new passenger cars a week.—Pullman Journal.

WHAT SWALLOWED JONAH?

Perhaps It Was a White Shark Instead of a Whale.

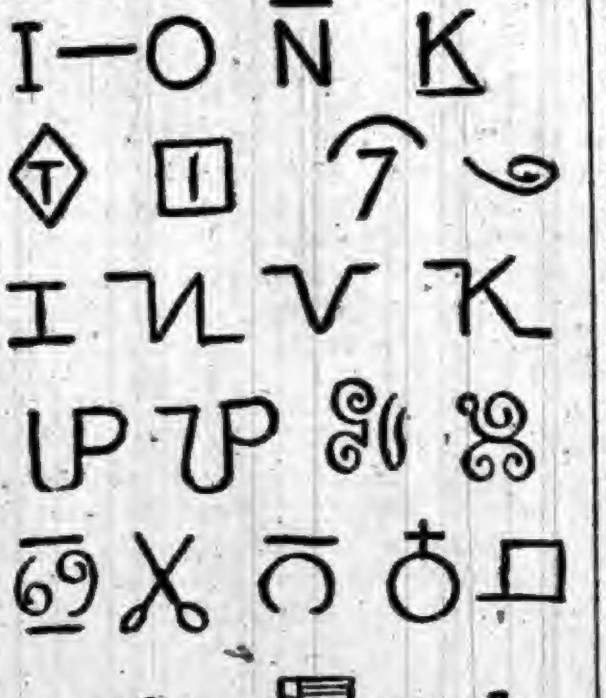
There is no argument valid upon a premise of inherent impossibility. It used to be concluded beyond question that there were no black swans, because it is impossible to conceive a black swan. But one harmless and unconscious black swan from the antipodes put all the ingenious thinkers to rout. Hume argued from his conception of a true induction that the major premise must include all possible cases. This he thought conclusive against a great deal of popular belief. But what test have we of the possible? It is harder to believe that we have explored and classified the whole field of knowledge, than that a ravenous fish—with no higher and no lower thought in its meager brain than a plentiful dinner—should have swallowed and then disgorged a man. Besides, we are not without evidence that such piscine conduct is at least possible. Jonah was sailing in the Mediterranean—right along its whole length—from Joppa, in Palestine, to Tarshish, in Spain; and it is in this very sea that even at the present day a huge fish, the white shark, is found. And not only this, but the bones of a much larger species now extinct. For the word used in the Bible is a general term for a large fish, and it includes in various writers sharks, tunnies, whales, dolphins, and seals. This white shark attains such a size that it has been known to weigh four tons and a half. One that was exhibited last century over Europe weighed nearly two tons, and very nearly re-enacted the part of Jonah's fish. A British war vessel was sailing in the Mediterranean when a man fell overboard. A huge shark instantly rose and the unlucky seaman disappeared within its mouth. The captain fired a gun at it from the deck, and as the shot struck upon its back it cast the man out again and he was rescued by his companions. They forthwith harpooned the fish, dried him, and presented him to his intended victim.

In the beginning of this century a shark was taken at Surinam, and in it was discovered the body of a woman excepting the head. Instances are recorded upon good authority of specimens being found in the same sea; one with a sea calf in its stomach as big as an ox, another with a whole horse, and another with two tunnies and a man. That a man could live there for a considerable time seems by no means impossible.

CATTLE BRANDS.

Queer Hieroglyphics Which Adorn the Stock on the Western Prairies.

The prairies have a series of trade-marks as general and valuable as those that decorate queensware, pottery, and editions de luxe. The emblems are conceived with much care, and a violation of the rights they involve means death to the depredator. They do not appear on paper, nor are they modeled in earthenware or metal. They are traced in living flesh by red-hot irons, and are read by cowboys and ranch owners, from the uplands of Wyoming to the river valleys of Texas. Yet few east of the Missouri River have ever seen a sample of the designs or realize the completeness of their system.



SOME SAMPLE BRANDS.

The identification of cattle upon the great Western plains, where tens of thousands of long-horned beasts roam throughout the year, unfenced and unherded, would present a serious aspect were it not for branding. Only by that means is it possible, in a country where stock-raising is carried on so extensively that fencing the ranges is almost out of the question, for owners to keep any knowledge of their possessions. No more rigid system of identification exists anywhere, and the owner of a steer is almost as certain of his property when the animal has strayed a hundred miles away as if the home-ranch corral inclosed him. It is not uncommon for a Western Kansas cattleman to receive notice from a friend in Nebraska or Wyoming, saying that one of his cattle has strayed from home, and is in his vicinity, the friend having looked up the animal's brand in the herd book.

A PATHETIC EPISODE.

How Two Brothers Died on a Western Railroad.

"I have seen a great many men killed," said Burke McMahon, at the Southern. "I was with old Pap Thomas at Chickamauga when his corps stood like a rock for the flower of the Confederacy to beat and break upon, and with Grant when he hurled his columns at the impregnable heights of Vicksburg. I have seen commanding officers torn to pieces with a shell and beardless boys dead on the battle-field with their mother's picture pressed to their cold lips, but I never had anything affect me like the death of a couple of young railroad men in Texas seven or eight years ago.

"I was riding on the engine of a fast passenger train, and at Waco the engineer got orders to look out for a brakeman who was missing from the freight we were following. He was supposed to have fallen between the cars of his train. 'My brother is breaking on that train. I wonder if it can be him?' said the fireman. 'I'll keep up steam while you stand on the pilot and watch out,' replied the engineer. The fireman took his post in front and we pulled out. We had just got well under way when the fireman gave the signal to stop. The engineer applied the brakes. They failed to respond, and we were on a down grade and could not stop. The missing brakeman was lying on the track, badly mangled, but conscious.

"He raised his hand and frantically signaled the train, but the great iron machine went plunging down upon him at a rate of twenty miles an hour. The fireman cast one despairing look at the engineer, then sprang in front of the pilot and hurled his wounded brother off the track. But he was not quick enough to save himself. The engine caught him and crushed both legs off at the hips. As we picked him up he said, with a quiet smile: 'It's no use, boys; I'm done for. But I saved Ned.' We laid them down in the baggage car side by side. Ned put out a feeble hand and clasped that of his brother. 'I've got my time, old fellow,' he said. 'Here, too, Ned; we'll make the run to the next world together,' was the response, and, holding each other by the hand, they died without another word."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Few Reflections Upon Night.

It is night. A policeman awakes with a sudden start and moves around the corner, having a secret fear at his heart that he had slept through all that night, all next day and far into to-morrow night. It is night in a great city. The poker and faro-rooms are in full blast, 10,000 loafers are holding down street corners, and here and there an intoxicated Alderman can be seen making his way to a policy shop or a gathering of the pavement ring. Under cover of darkness, first manufactured over 6,000 years ago, the hotel beat lowers his duds from the fourth-story window; all who have dead-head tickets start for the opera-houses; hundreds of young men set out to spark; reporters look forward to fires, robberies and murders, and church choirs meet to rehearse and wrangle and lay up clubs for each other.

'Tis night in the country. The stock has been fed, the squeal of the pig is hushed, and the tired horse munches at his corn and wonders why his master throws in so many cobs without a kernel on them. The watch dog sits at the gate, perfectly willing to chew up any of the neighbors for a cent, and within the farm-house all is serene, or would be if John Henry could find the grease for his boots, Mary Ann could find her novel, the old man discover the hiding-place of the bootjack, and the mother solve the mystery of how some of her neighbors managed to get a dress costing 2 shillings per yard while she had nothing but calico.

'Tis night on the ocean. The proud steamer sails gallantly on and on, the Captain snoring in his berth, the mate playing euchre, the lookouts asleep, and everything in readiness to swear, in case of collision, that it was all the other vessel's fault. Nothing is heard but the steady beat of the propeller, the groans of the immigrants and the voices of men and women declaring that anybody who plans an ocean voyage for pleasure ought to be shot to death with codfish balls. The sportive dolphin gambols away his hard earnings, the whale rolls over for another nap, and the business-like shark follows in the wake to pick up any opportunities which may tumble overboard.

'Tis night on the prairie. The red men gather about the camp-fire to count the scalps they have taken within the last week, and to grumble at the Government for not furnishing them port wine and repeating rifles. The white hunter and trapper curls himself up to wonder where he can find old bones for breakfast, and to realize what a fool he has made of himself, and the gaunt wolf shoulders his empty stomach and sets out in search of something to make life worth living for.

Night grows apace. In the city the weary wife takes her place in the hall with club in hand. In the country the old folks fall into bed aweary with the work of the day, and the young people spark and chew pop-corn. On the ocean the sea-sickers continue to grow worse, and the songs of the mermaids fall flat. On the prairie the Indians finally decide to make war in the spring, the hunter falls asleep to dream of eating his boots for dinner, and the wolf meets a wildcat and offers to toss up to see which shall eat the other.—Detroit Free Press.

A Last Request.

"Wait a minute," said the Texas desperado who had been convicted of horse-stealing and murder.

"What's the matter now?" asked the sheriff.

"I wish to ask a favor before I am taken to the scaffold."

"Let one of your deputies go up-stairs and get my lucky penny."—Judge.

"No, sir, I do not. There is no telling, Dr. Fourthly, when this world is to be deluged again and I'm not going to be caught on dry land with the example of Noah before me."

A Canal Reopened.

Health is largely dependent upon a regular habit of body. The bowels act as an important canal for the carrying of waste matter of the system. They, together with the kidneys and pores, are outlets for debris whose presence is fatal to the body's well-being. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is no violent purgative, but a gentle laxative admirably adapted to the wants of the constipated. It never gripes and wrenches the intestines as all drastic cathartics do, but produces an action akin to that of an effort of nature. Biliousness, indigestion, with their associate manifestation, costiveness, are speedily and completely remedied by this fine corrective, which also conquers malaria, sick headache, kidney and rheumatic trouble, and checks premature decay.

He Thought Out Loud.

The late Duke of Cambridge was in the habit of thinking out loud, so to speak, and there were times when his audible expressions of opinions was at least inopportune. It is related of him by a London journal that during divine service, whenever the rector said "Let us pray," his royal highness would answer in a voice audible throughout the church, "Aye, to be sure; why not?" Once at the opera, after the duke had swept the house with his glasses, he called out in a tone that reached from pit to dome, "Why, I declare, there are not half a dozen pretty girls in the house—not half a dozen, not half a dozen."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Red Clover.

Red Clover grows in New Zealand with great luxuriance, but until recently it was necessary to import all seeds from England. Darwin showed that the plants can be fertilized and made to produce seed only through the agency of humble bees, and, as these creatures were unknown in New Zealand, attempts were made to introduce them, and they were finally, about ten years ago, carried the entire journey alive, while in a torpid state, in freezing chambers. Since then they have multiplied, and the red clover bears seed.

IN GLASS. That's the way Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets come. And it's a more important point than you think. It keeps them always fresh and reliable, unlike the ordinary pills in cheap wooden or pasteboard boxes.

They're put up in a better way, and they act in a better way, than the huge, old-fashioned pills. No griping, no violence, no reaction afterward that sometimes leaves you worse off than before. In that way, they cure permanently. Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the liver, stomach, and bowels are prevented, relieved, and cured.

They're tiny, sugar-coated granules, a compound of refined and concentrated vegetable extracts—the smallest in size, the easiest to take, and the cheapest pill you can buy, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned. You pay only for the good you get.

There's nothing likely to be "just as good."

Consumption.

Dr. Hambleton writes: "There can be no doubt, whatever, as to the great benefit of the habit of deep breathing and full inspiration in ordinary life. The great curse in this country is consumption, and children suffer from it heavily." It is well that the parents should remember that consumption always begins with a cold and any cold, no matter how slight, is exceedingly dangerous. When a cold attacks the system, it should be attended to at once. The best remedy is REID'S GERMAN COUGH AND KIDNEY CURE, for this ministers to all the excretory organs. It acts at once upon the kidneys and enables them to renew their work of purifying the blood, by driving out of it, the uric acid. When this is done, the lungs will easily perform their part. JOHN WANAMAKER,

Postmaster-General of the United States,

Is usually considered, and rightly so, one of the brightest business men in America, and when he writes to the Editor of ARTHUR'S NEW HOME MAGAZINE as follows:

OFFICE OF THE POSTMASTER-GENERAL,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 17, 1892.

MY DEAR MR. REED:

As your Magazine gets thicker, it gets brighter. Like the big wood fire on the hearth in my library when I pile more logs on. I knew Mr. Arthur very well from way back, but I doubt if he would know his old monthly since you've put out the dead wood, and put in so many more pages and departments, and taken on so many young and sparkling writers.

If you keep on giving such good pictures you'll have 200,000 subscribers. I fear advertisers will crowd you (for some things can be well advertised in magazines), but don't drop any of the reading pages, and don't let a dry or dull line creep in.

Don't raise the price either, if you can help it, even if it is half the price of other no-better magazines. I congratulate you on doing what no one else has done in putting out two copies at the price that others charge for one. The old homestead and the young daughters' new home can each have your Magazine without paying more than others charge for single copies of their publications.

Your old friend, JOHN WANAMAKER.

It should indicate to the average American citizen that under the new management it is at least awake, and when we know that they have more than TREBLED their circulation within the year, and that among the very best people of the land, we may admit, without further argument, it has been the journalistic success of 1892.—"Building Business," Boston.

The acknowledged superior cure and immediate relief for all derangements, painfulness and decay of the kidneys or bladder, Bright's disease, diabetes or any complaint that hurts or despoils either of these delicate organs. This new remedy has been thoroughly tested by learned physicians and found far superior to any medicine yet discovered for quickly relieving all weaknesses, aches, pains and distresses arising from disease of any part of the urinary passages. It great relief for the old, middle aged and children, male or female. It relieves at once retention and pain in passing water, and it is very effective in relieving prostatic troubles in the old, and for nightly incontinence of water in children, or others, caused by weakness of the bladder. It may be worth to many a hundred times its cost. This is a remedy of great value to ladies, because they are very liable to weakness and pain peculiar to their sex. Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

Gentlemen: I take pleasure in informing you of the very beneficial results which have followed the use of DR. MILES' RESTORATIVE NERVINE in the case of myself and wife. For a year I was subject to a distressing pain at the base of the brain and upper portion of the spinal cord. I lost flesh and was greatly troubled with sleeplessness. CURED Your Nervine was highly recommended to me. My case had been so obstinate that I had no confidence in the efficacy of any medicine. Yet as a last resort I consented to give it a trial. Much to my surprise, I experienced marked benefit; my sleeplessness disappeared; my headache was removed; my spirits and general health greatly improved. I soon gained twenty pounds. THOUSANDS ALL THIS OCCURRED AFTER LEARNED AND WELL KNOWN PHYSICIANS HAD FAILED. My wife is taking the Nervine with the best of results. LOUIS D. VANDERVERE.

WATERLOO.

Mrs. Lilly Brysland is in Ft. Wayne, where she has a position in Root & Co's. dry goods store.

Mrs. Lehman has gone to Ft. Wayne to spend the winter with her daughter. She has been east to visit her brother.

Mrs. Jacob Brown has moved her family to Elkhart, to take care of her father, and keep house for her oldest son who has a position there.

Our town has been visited of late by many Italians, men, women and children. They seem heavily laden with large baskets covered with oilcloth, which baskets probably contain wares for sale.

Mrs. Post formerly of Auburn, but now of Fennville, Mich., was up here this week visiting the family of Charles Reed. After finishing her visit in Auburn and in Butler township, she will return home.

Mrs. Darby has been very ill at Battle Creek, recently, Dr. Darby went at once, and remained until there was a change for the better. He has since returned to his wife's bedside, accompanied by his daughter, Verne.

Several fine, new monuments have lately been placed in the cemetery here. Mrs. Ax has one admired by many for form, style and work. Mr. Amstutz has one, of Swedish granite that is unlike any other there, and attracts attention.

Boyer & Leas' store was burglarized one night the latter part of last week, and about three hundred dollars worth in overcoats and mens' and womens' underwear taken. The burglars effected an entrance by breaking the glass in window on the south side of the store building, through which they entered, and unfastened a door. The safe was not disturbed.

Quite a little crowd assembled at the station Friday when the train from Auburn reached here at noon. The expectation that Wanamaker would be on board and would speak for ten minutes before taking his train west, brought many there, some to hear him, some out of mere curiosity. The substance of his speech was that "Harrison has done well as president for one term, and the most of us think he should fill the office again." He claimed for himself to be no politician, only a business man, and there was not an office on earth that he cared to have. He is a good looking, well dressed man, but to judge further of a man from seeing him so brief a time, most persons would look at his eye, said so truly "to be the index of the soul" in this case it was impossible, as he kept them almost closed.

BUTLER.

Ed. Loughran has succeeded Ben Iterfel in the manufacture of organs.

Chambers & Volrich have disposed of their stock among the other stores in town and have retired from trade.

The new foundry building is nearly completed, and will prove a great advantage to the company, as they will now do all their work at home.

Political quietude reigned in Butler until election day. Even the third party, that tried to raise the wind on the last day before election, proved a dismal disappointment. The ladies of the W. R. C. were well patronized, at their oyster supper on election night.

The M. E. pulpit was exceptionally well filled last Sunday by a veteran in the M. E. ministry of about eighty years, Rev. Mather, of Bristol, Ind. The old man is earnest and eloquent, and revived the memories of the forties in the minds of the older members of the church. His voice suffers but little from his extreme age.

Mrs. Alice Childers, wife of George Childers, and daughter of Joseph Oberlin of this place, was buried last week. Her sad death, leaving three small children, is severely lamented by her many friends and relatives. Mrs. Childers was among our best young women, and her death casts a gloom over our community.

Dan Oberlin and sons are now behind the bars—the liquor bars of the old Tomlinson saloon. They have long been held in good esteem by our citizens, by their industrious and sober habits and strict attention to their respective callings—draying and railroading. The sincere desire of their many friends is that they may be able "to sell whisky and not drink it, too."

We learn that Christian Mutzfeld, an old and much respected citizen, living about three miles west of Butler, died last Saturday. Mr. M. has been a resident of our township for about twenty-five years, and was highly esteemed by all who knew him. He was a member of the Brethren Church, and his funeral was perhaps the first one in the new church that he was largely instrumental in building, which is located within a mile of his late residence.

The Duluth and Superior Special.

In full keeping with its well known progressive policy the North Western Line (Chicago & North western Railway), has recently inaugurated through train service between Chicago and the Lake Superior region. This new train is known as the "Duluth and Superior Special," and it leaves Chicago daily at 5:50 p. m., arriving at Superior at 8:20 a. m. and Duluth at 8:52 a. m. the next day, making the journey in the remarkably quick time of fifteen hours. The train is made up of baggage cars, standard day coaches and palace buffet sleeping cars of the most modern and approved design, and all classes of passengers are carried through without change of cars. Supper is served in dining car after departure from Chicago, and breakfast is served from a well stocked buffet before arrival at Duluth. To insure yourself a quick and comfortable journey be sure and ask for tickets via the North Western Line. Any ticket agent can furnish full information regarding this railway, or it will be promptly furnished upon application to W. A. Thrall, General Passenger and ticket agent, Chicago. 8

An Interesting Reunion.

At their home in Sedan, Mr. and Mrs. Hine entertained a few of their elder friends, who in former years were closely associated with Father W. Waltman, of Kendallville, formerly pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran church at Sedan.

Brother and Sister Hine in the advent of the North District Conference of the Evangelical Lutheran Synod, of Northern Indiana, conceived the idea of bringing together those who had listened to the teachings of Father Waltman about thirty years ago in the old school house at Sedan.

There were present in all at this reunion, about forty persons, all of whom, together with Father Waltman surrounded the festal board. At the close of the supper, Mr. Hine arose and proposed the following toast:—"The Church as it Was and Is:" to which Father Waltham responded in a short speech, as follows:

"In looking into your faces this evening, and beholding you as I do, calls to my memory a time about thirty years ago, when I labored among you in the old school house; and now as I look back on it, it brings to recollection what we are and what we ought to be. I am certainly glad to meet so many who were charter members of this organization. Here in your midst was planted this vine which has grown and flourished, and brought forth fruit to the everlasting glory of our God. Many have gone from among you, long since, and to-night are looking down upon this happy gathering with thanksgiving in their hearts. I feel rejoiced to see so many still faithful workers in the Master's vineyard. May you go on. Work faithfully while the day lasts, for there cometh a night wherein no man worketh."

Among this company present, were still living, eight, who were taken into the church under Father Waltman, in connection with six others who were converted under his teachings. Two couple present were united in the holy bonds of wedlock by him. Two were baptized when taken into the church. Five of the children of those present were baptized in infancy. In this reunion there are called up many recollections of the past which were a pleasant to think upon. Many pleasant memories cluster around this reunion which have brought these people together.

The lives of some are drawing to a close, they can not expect to have many more such reunions here but may they all be faithful here that they may be re-united, never more to part, upon the other side.

Among those present was the Rev. W. L. Tedrow, president of the synod of Northern Indiana.

U. S. Supervisors.

Intelligent American citizens have always looked with dislike and suspicion on the federal interference in our elections. There is but one federal officer voted for direct by the people, and he is the people's direct and duly direct federal representative, our member of congress. So it has always been the belief of our most thoughtful and conservative statesmen that elections should be solely under the control of the states and their citizens. There has been no public sentiment in favor of such interference. No body of representative men has ever demanded it, and no good reason has ever been given, or can be given for the use of this federal supervision over the free exercise each state should have in the matter of its own affairs, or that its citizens should have over their rights to free and untrammeled suffrage. Especially in Indiana is this interference needless and hateful. The people of this state have always, and justly so, prided themselves on the impartial and honest character of their election laws. Every safeguard possible to secure perfect fairness and freedom has been carefully provided, so that it has not been possible, even under the old law, to prevent a voter from depositing just such a vote as he pleased. Each election board has been, and still is, composed of five members. The township trustee in his own precinct acts as inspector, and in the other precincts of his township is an inspector appointed by the board of county commissioners. Then there are two judges of election, one of each leading party, selected by the local managers of those parties; and lastly, there are two election poll clerks, one from each of the leading parties, and selected in the same way as the judges. So it will be seen, there could be nothing fairer—the balance of power being always held by the man who happened to be township trustee, or by the inspectors appointed in his place by the county commissioners. And in proof that this arrangement has been satisfactory to all parties, we may say we do not remember of any trouble or complaint in all these years, in any of the 1,800 or more precincts in the state, if we except the Sim Coy trouble in Indianapolis a few years ago. But that was not caused by any action of the local election boards, or by anything that could have been prevented by the use of U. S. marshals or supervisors. Hence we claim that the use of these officers in Indiana is an insult to the intelligence and integrity of our people. When, therefore, it was suddenly announced last Saturday that the people's party had called for these ornamental officers, the ordinary voter was astonished. This new party has made a great blow about its confidence in the people, about its desire to see fair play, about its desire to reduce expenses and to save the people's money from needless waste or improper use. It does not argue much in favor of the advanced ideas claimed by the new party when the first public step they take is in the direction of giving up the few rights reserved to the people, besides questioning the honesty of their neighbors, as well as squandering the public money, for we presume some way will be found to pay the thirty six men employed in this county. In order that the credit or blame may be attached to the proper persons, and not to the innocent we give the names of the parties asking federal supervisors, as well as the application itself. The article is an exact copy of the original, and it will be seen that the only excuse offered is that they doubt the honesty and fairness of their neighbors, those selected on the election boards being, as usual, leading citizens and representative men

To the Honorable, the Judges of the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Indiana:

The undersigned, citizens and voters of DeKalb County, in the State of Indiana, of good standing, hereby respectfully make known to the Judge of the Circuit Court for the District of Indiana, that an election for Representative in the Congress of the United States, for the Twelfth Congressional District, will be held in said County on the eighth day of November, 1892, and it is their desire that the said election should be guarded and scrutinized in accordance with the provisions of Title XXVI of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and to that end they pray that Supervisors of Election may be appointed in said County, as prescribed in said title:

The French flag was adopted during the revolution. The republic first took green, but gave it up, and blended the Bourbon white with the red and blue, and the colors of the city of Paris.

A Remarkable Discovery.

A remarkable discovery is one of the chronic proclamations of advertisers. Cubeb Cough Cure is not such, it is an established remedy with known merit, made on scientific principles by experienced and able chemists. It affords instant relief, and is called the one minute remedy, for it stops coughing at once, does not cure but gives temporary relief to consumptives, and absolutely cures all other affections of the throat, lungs, etc. For croup, whooping cough and colds of children Cubeb Cough Cure is valuable. There has just died in Poland a once celebrated beauty, who refused the hand of Napoleon III. She was the Princess Helene Sagonsko, and died unmarried at the age of 57.

Don't get Imposed Upon.

Is a good motto to follow in buying a medicine as well as in everything else. By the universal satisfaction it has given and by the many remarkable cures it has accomplished, Dullam's Great German blood, liver, stomach and kidney cure has proven itself unequaled for building up and cleansing your system and for all diseases arising from impure blood. Do not experiment with an unheard of or untried article which you are told is as good, but be sure to get Dullam's. All druggists keep it. $1 a bottle. For sale by Casebeer & Matheny.

A bit of steel was removed from the cerebellum of a patient at Bellevue hospital, New York so quickly and painlessly that the patient laughed aloud when the operation was over.

A Wonderful Statement.

Proprietors of Dullam's Great German Remedies. Gentlemen:—I have for the past two years been troubled with a serious and very severe liver and stomach difficulty. Have had advice and medicine from our very best physicians and only to be temporarily relieved. Some of my friends persuaded me to try your Great German remedy for the blood, stomach and kidneys and to my surprise after using three bottles I feel like a new man. If you desire you can use my name in print or by reference in any of the Grand Rapids, Mich., papers, or any other papers in the states, to convince the afflicted that it is the best blood, liver and kidney medicine on earth. I feel like a new man. Have lived here over 40 years. $1 a bottle.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."
UNITED HOSPITAL AND DISPENSARY, Boston, Mass.

THE WAY THINGS LOOK

IN THIS GREAT WORLD OF OURS.

Citizens of Kentucky Take Up Arms to Prevent the Collection of Taxes—Small-pox Breaks Out in Chicago—Homestead Day, December 13—Gave Away Millions.

LIKE WAR TIMES.

Three Hundred Mounted Farmers Ride Through the Streets.

The citizens of Grayson, Ky., were reminded of war times the other day, when more than 300 mounted men entered the town and rode through the principal streets, followed by nearly as many on foot. The demonstration was caused by the railroad tax. Collector Peter Brown had levied upon some land and advertised it for sale at the court house door and the citizens of the county have risen in a body to oppose the sale. A committee waited upon Brown and he was induced to forego the sale and resign his collectorship, after which the citizens retired in an orderly manner to their homes. This settles the railroad tax question in Carter County as it will be impossible to find any one to accept the collectorship.

Homestead Day, December 13.

President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, has issued a circular to the public in which he appeals for financial aid and moral sympathy for the Homestead strikers. Mr. Gompers says it has been decided by the Amalgamated Association, the representatives of the men and the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor to designate Tuesday, December 13th, as Homestead day, and he calls upon the wage-workers, as well as liberty-loving citizens, to make a contribution of a portion of their earnings of that day to aid the struggling Homesteaders in their contest to defend themselves before courts. Their cases, he adds, must be brought before the highest tribunal of our country if necessary. Contributions should be sent to Secretary Chris Evans, 14 Clinton place, New York City.

Small-Pox Breaks Out at Chicago.

Martha Johnson, a Swedish peasant girl, who arrived in this country October 27, on the Servia, is at the pest house, Chicago, suffering from a severe attack of small-pox. She has been suffering from the disease for a week, and during that time a number of persons have been exposed, as she has ridden in street cars, visited numerous stores and called upon friends in different parts of the city. The health department was notified at once and the patient was promptly removed to the pest house. The houses where Miss Johnson had lived were fumigated and quarantined and two policemen were placed on guard at each place.

Gave Away Millions.

Grand Rapids (Mich.) Special: Delos A. Blodgett, one of the richest men in the State, divided all his possessions into three parts, retaining one-third himself and giving one-third to his son, John W. Blodgett, and the remainder to Edward Lowe and wife nee Miss Susie Blodgett, his daughter. The estate includes the largest tract of Michigan pine now standing, about half a million acres of southern timber lands, large investments on the Pacific slope, the Times building and other valuable business real estate in Chicago, valuable business property here and various other assets. The total is inventoried at $7,200,000.

Is She Married?

Albuquerque (N. M.) special: Miss Margaret Mather with her company arrived from Los Angeles and played "The Honeymoon" at the Grand Opera House. Regarding the telegrams sent out from California announcing her marriage to Gus Pabst, son of the wealthy Milwaukee, Wis., brewer, the actress positively refused to acknowledge or deny the story of her marriage to Pabst. He traveled with her across the country to this city, but instead of stopping here went on east. Members of her company think she is married to him.

A Prominent Mason and Odd Fellow Dead.

Chicago special: L. B. McFarland, a prominent Mason and Odd Fellow of Lincoln, Neb., a man 66 years of age, died on a Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific train, while enroute to this city. The remains were brought here to an undertaking establishment. Mr. McFarland was apparently in good health when he left Omaha, but when within a few hours ride of this city, he sickened suddenly, and, although medical attendance was found on the train, he died within a few minutes.

Horrible Wreck.

Cumberland (Md.) special: The Chicago night express on the Baltimore and Ohio road was wrecked near Grafton. The entire train left the track and two Pullman sleepers went over the embankment. Many of the passengers were more or less injured, but no fatalities resulted. All the cars were wrecked. A splice bar which broke allowing the rails to spread caused the accident.

Big Tunnel Caved In.

A tunnel 900 feet in length fell in on the Cincinnati Southern road, near Harriman, Tenn. All trains between Chattanooga and Cincinnati will be run through Knoxville until the track is cleared.

Diplomates Appointed.

The President has appointed William Pollock of Pennsylvania, to be Minister to Italy; David Thompson of Oregon, to be Minister to Turkey.

Anarchist Paper Seized.

A dispatch from Berlin says that the police of that city have seized the first number of an anarchist paper entitled Arbeiter Zeitung. Five thousand copies which had been printed were confiscated. The publisher's house was searched and the plates from which the paper had been printed were destroyed.

Cars Running at Columbus.

Friday morning the Columbus, Ohio, Street Railway Company and the strikers agreed to submit their dispute to Mayor Karb for arbitration. On this disposition of the case all the employes resumed their places and cars are now running as usual.

NO EXTRA SESSION.

It Would Be Directly Opposed to All Precedents.

Precedent seems to be against the likelihood of an extra session of the next Congress, and according to a Washington correspondent it is not likely that the proposed move will materialize. When President Arthur became President in 1881 it was held that he must and would call Congress together to take action upon certain issues which were impending and which were agitating the country, principally the proposed revision of the tariff. The same had been said when Gen. Garfield became President. There were international questions, it was held, which demanded immediate action. Neither Garfield nor Arthur had the least idea of calling an extra session. When Mr. Cleveland became President in 1885 the Democratic and independent press throughout the country demanded and anticipated an extra session for the revision of the tariff. The circumstances were the same as the present, but Mr. Cleveland, in private conversations, laughed at the suggestion of an extra session of Congress. Every reader will recall how when General Harrison became President it was demanded that he call Congress together for tariff revision. Everybody seemed to expect an extra session till the President said he would not even consider the subject of an extra session. He said the country would fare very well till Congress met in regular session. It is now pointed out by prominent Democrats in Washington that, besides being opposed to extra sessions of Congress in times like these, President Cleveland will have too much to do making changes in offices to warrant attention to Congress. It is learned that some of the leading tariff reformers are favoring an average reduction of about 20 per cent. from the McKinley schedule. They expect a bill to be passed by the new Congress and made operative two years afterward.

AMERICAN CORN IN MEXICO.

The Blockade on the Mexican International Railroad Raised.

The corn blockade on the Mexican International Road at Piedras Negras, Mexico, and at Torreon has been removed, and the shipments of grain from the United States promptly handled. President Diaz has issued a decree extending the time for free entrance of corn into Mexico to Feb. 18; the exportation movement has greatly decreased during the past few days. In the southern states of the republic the new crop is being harvested. The price is rapidly going down. Serious suffering among the poorer classes is still reported from Zacatecas, although the government has taken active steps looking to its relief during the past few days.

Mrs. Deacon's Appeal Cases.

The appeal of Mrs. Deacon from the decision of the tribunal of the Seine, which declared that she had no right to apply for a divorce from her husband and awarded the custody of the children to Mr. Deacon, came up before Judge Perivier and was adjourned for a week. The appeal of Mrs. Deacon against the jurisdiction of the court at Grasse to hear and determine the action for divorce her husband has brought up against her has been fixed for a hearing by the court at Aix for Dec. 8.

Broke All the Windows.

A terrible explosion of gas from the mains of the Economic Fuel Gas Company, at Monroe street and Michigan avenue, Chicago, took place. Buildings for a block either way rocked from the violence of the explosion and every window in the vicinity was shattered, the sidewalks being covered with a coating of broken glass two or three inches in depth. Two men, Frank Bassey and Thomas Agers, were badly burned about the face and hands, and were removed to their homes.

Mark Miles Standish's Grave.

Two cannon—32-pounders, weighing 5,700 each—have been placed in position to mark Captain Miles Standish's grave at Duxbury, Mass. Twelve empty 8-inch shells will also be placed there, and a bowlder has been laid at each of the graves of Captain Standish, his daughter and his daughter-in-law. A 5-ton bowlder marked "Miles Standish" has been placed in the center of the lot. Appropriate public observance will subsequently be held.

New Style of Shingles.

Slate roofs are to be crowded out by shingles manufactured from a peculiar kind of fire clay. The material used is a rich plastic clay, which burns a fast red and is found at various points in the upper Ohio valley. The clay shingles are said to be as durable as the best slate and can be supplied at a much lower figure. A manufactory is to be started at Steubenville or at Torono. There is one at Indianapolis.

Train Robbers Foiled.

Three train robbers held up the W. & A. train at Adairsville, Ga., but were successfully held off. Twenty shots were fired, one of which struck a robber and another wounded the flagman. All the robbers escaped, but pursuit has been instituted.

Mismanagement Is Alleged

Samuel R. Dalin and R. B. Wasson, of Medina, Ohio, have begun suit asking a receiver for the Ohio Farmers' Insurance Company, on the ground of insolvency and mismanagement.

Died from Gas.

J. Doyle and wife, from Davenport, Ia., were found dead in bed at the International Hotel, San Francisco. They had been asphyxiated by gas.

Twenty-five Lives Lost.

A dispatch from St. John's, N. F., says that as a result of the gale ten vessels were lost or missing, and twenty-five lives are known to have been lost.

RESULTS IN DETAIL.

INTERESTING FIGURES FROM THE POLITICAL BATTLE.

A Summary of the Vote in All of the States Made Up as Complete as Possible from the Latest Associated Press Dispatches.

Wisconsin.

Cleveland has undoubtedly carried Wisconsin by a plurality probably exceeding 10,000, and Peck, Dem., is elected over Spooner, though by a decreased figure. Republicans gain three, and the Democrats lose two, Congressmen in the State, the Republicans electing four and the Democrats six of the ten. In the last Congress the Wisconsin delegation stood eight Democrats and one Republican. Under the apportionment law of 1890 Wisconsin increased its Congressional representation from nine to ten. The Congressmen-elect by districts are as follows: First, H. A. Cooper, Rep., by 3,000; Second, Charles Barwig, Dem.; Third, John W. Babcock, Rep.; Fourth, John L. Mitchell, Dem.; Fifth, George H. Brickner, Dem.; Sixth, Owen A. Wells, Dem.; Seventh, Geo. B. Shaw, Rep., by 2,755; Eighth, Lyman E. Barnes, Dem., by 1,800; Ninth, Thomas Lynch, Dem.; Tenth, Nils B. Haugen, Rep., by 4,500. The Legislature is Democratic in both the Senate and Assembly. With their fifteen hold-over Senators the Democrats will have twenty-five of the thirty-three members of the State Senate, and they will have a majority of thirty-one on joint ballot.

Illinois.

Illinois gives Cleveland a plurality of over 25,000, and elects a Democratic Governor, Altgeld, by several thousand. There is little doubt that the next Congressional delegation from Illinois will be composed of the following: First District, J. Frank Aldrich, Republican; Second District, L. E. McGann, Democrat; Third District, A. C. Durborow, Jr., Democrat; Fourth District, Julius Goldzier, Democrat; Fifth District, A. J. Hopkins, Republican; Sixth District, R. R. Hitt, Republican; Seventh District, T. J. Henderson, Republican; Eighth District, Lewis Steward, Democrat; Ninth District, H. K. Wheeler, Republican; Tenth District, P. S. Post, Republican; Eleventh District, R. F. Marsh, Republican; Twelfth District, J. J. McDannold, Democrat; Thirteenth District, W. M. Springer, Democrat; Fourteenth District, Owen Scott, Democrat; Fifteenth District, J. G. Cannon, Republican; Sixteenth District, G. W. Fithian, Democrat; Seventeenth District, Edward Lane, Democrat; Eighteenth District, W. S. Forman, Democrat; Nineteenth District, J. R. Williams Democrat. Twentieth District, G. W. Smith, Republican.

Indiana.

Indiana gives a safe plurality for the Democratic electors, and from the latest returns it is figured that eleven Democratic Congressmen are chosen, with the First still doubtful. The delegation will probably be made up as follows: First District, A. H. Taylor, Dem.; Second, John L. Bretz, Dem.; Third, Jason B. Brown, Dem.; Fourth, William S. Holman, Dem.; Fifth, George W. Cooper, Dem.; Sixth, Henry U. Johnson, Rep.; Seventh, William D. Bynum, Dem.; Eighth, E. V. Brookshire, Dem.; Ninth, Daniel Waugh, Rep.; Tenth, Thomas Hammond, Dem.; Eleventh, A. N. Martin, Dem.; Twelfth, William F. McNagney, Dem.; Thirteenth, C. G. Coon, Dem. The Legislature will be Democratic by about 33 majority on joint ballot, insuring the re-election of Turpie to the United States Senate.

Michigan.

The following are the Congressmen-elect in Michigan and their approximate majorities: First District, J. Logan Chipman (Dem.), 2,500; Second, S. Gorman (Dem.), 750; Third, Julius C. Burrows (Rep.), 5,000; Fourth, Dr. H. F. Thomas (Rep.), 250; Fifth, George F. Richardson (Dem.), 600; Sixth, D. D. Aitkin (Rep.), 500; Seventh, Justin R. Whiting (Dem.), 800; Eighth, W. S. Linton (Rep.), 1,200; Ninth, John W. Moon (Rep.), 200; Tenth, Thomas A. E. Weadock (Dem.), 700; Eleventh, Dr. John Avery (Rep.), 800; Twelfth, S. M. Stephenson (Rep.), 2,000. The Democrats have elected Presidential Electors in the eastern district and in the First, Second, Seventh, and Tenth Congressional Districts. They hope yet for the Eighth District.

Iowa.

Harrison's plurality in Iowa will reach about 22,000. The entire Republican State ticket is elected by about the same plurality. The Congressional delegation will stand ten Republicans and one Democrat, as follows: First District, John H. Gear, majority, 500; Second, Walter I. Hayes (Dem.), majority 8,000; Third, D. B. Henderson, majority 1,500; Fourth, Updegraff, majority 1,300; Fifth, R. B. Cousins, majority 400; Sixth, J. F. Lacra, majority 1,200; Seventh, J. A. T. Hull, majority 4,500; Eighth, W. P. Hepburn, majority 1,100; Tenth, J. P. Dolliver, 3,500; Eleventh, G. D. Perkins, majority 1,500.

Minnesota.

Harrison has undoubtedly carried Minnesota. Nelson, Rep., is elected Governor by a plurality of 12,000 to 15,000. The following seem to have been elected to Congress: First District—Tawney, Rep.; Second—McCleary, Rep.; Third—Hall, Dem.; Fourth—Kiefer, Rep.; Fifth—Fletcher, Rep.; Sixth—Searle, Rep.; Seventh—Feig, Rep.

Sufficient returns have been received to show that the Republicans will have a majority of twenty-eight in the Legislature on joint ballot, thus insuring the re-election of C. K. Davis to the United States Senate.

The Dakotas.

Harrison has carried North Dakota by 2,500. Johnson, Rep., is elected to Congress by 3,000. The Republican State ticket receives average pluralities of 2,500, while the Legislature is in doubt.

Scattering returns at hand indicate that Harrison Electors have carried South Dakota. The Republican State ticket is certain. Pickler and Lucas, Reps., are elected to Congress. The Legislature is probably Republican. Chairman Peemiller, of the Democratic State Committee, still claims the State for the Weaver Electors.

Ohio.

Ohio has apparently gone Republican. With only two counties to hear from, unofficial returns give the Harrison electors 917 plurality, and Col. A. W. Taylor, Republican candidate for Secretary of State, a plurality of 1,055. The latter gained 197 votes through an error discovered in the returns from Summit County. Only the official count will determine the result.

Nebraska.

It is too early to give the exact vote of Nebraska. The entire Republican State ticket is undoubtedly elected by pluralities ranging from 1,000 to 2,100. The Legislature will stand: 54 Populists, 33 Democrats, and 46 Republicans.

Returns from Many States.

Pennsylvania—The Republicans made a clean sweep, by 85,000 majority.

Wyoming—The Weaver electors and the Democratic State ticket have been elected.

Vermont—Returns received from fifty Vermont towns give Harrison 12,765; Cleveland, 5,606.

Tennessee—Cleveland has 65,000 plurality and Peter Turney is elected Governor by 50,000. Buchanan, the third party candidate, polled only 20,000 votes.

New Mexico—Joseph (Dem.) is returned to Congress. Republicans control the Legislature.

Mississippi—Cleveland carries the State by 20,000. The Democrats elect all their Congressmen.

Oregon—The Democratic State Committee concedes the electoral vote to Harrison, except one.

Maine—Harrison's plurality in Maine will be less than 15,000, a Republican loss of 8,000 since 1888.

Montana—Has chosen Harrison Electors and the Republicans elect a majority of their State ticket.

Rhode Island—Harrison's majority in Rhode Island is less than 3,000. Capron (Rep.) is elected to Congress.

New Jersey—Cleveland's majority will fall little short of 12,000. Werts, Dem., for Governor, is chosen.

Maryland—Cleveland's majority will be over 20,000. All six Democratic Congressmen have been elected.

Virginia—Virginia is Democratic by nearly 30,000. A solid Democratic delegation has been returned to Congress.

Idaho—This state has elected Weaver electors, but the Republicans have elected Sweet and McConnell to Congress.

Georgia—Full returns show the election of the entire Democratic ticket. The majority for Cleveland may reach 70,000.

Louisiana—The entire Democratic delegation to Congress is chosen and the State goes for Cleveland by more than 50,000.

North Carolina—The Democratic majority will probably be reduced by the People's party vote, but not enough to hurt the ticket.

New Hampshire—The majority for Harrison in New Hampshire is about 3,000. The Legislature will probably elect the governor.

Florida—Democrats claim 22,000 majority for the Cleveland electors. There was no Republican ticket, and the third party vote was light.

Alabama—Returns indicate a majority of at least 25,000 for Cleveland. All the Democratic candidates for Congress have safe majorities.

Delaware—The Republicans concede 1,000 Democratic majority. A Democratic Legislature is chosen, insuring the re-election of Senator Gray.

Missouri—The entire Democratic ticket has been elected by a plurality of 17,000, and the Democrats have carried thirteen out of the fifteen districts.

South Carolina—Cleveland's majority will not fall much below 40,000. Democrats have elected Congressmen in every district except the Seventh, which is in doubt.

Washington—Harrison has at least 5,000 plurality. McGrew, Rep., for Governor, leads, while the vote on the two Congressmen is close, favoring the Republicans. No estimates on the Legislature.

Connecticut—Cleveland's plurality, 5,417. Four years ago it was 336. The entire Democratic ticket is probably elected. The State Senate is a tie, and the Republicans have about 20 majority in the House.

West Virginia—The Democrats confidently claim the election of all four Congressmen. Cleveland will undoubtedly be given the Electoral vote, and the election of the entire Democratic State ticket is generally conceded.

Colorado—Weaver has carried the State. Both the fusion candidates for Congress have been elected by safe majorities. The Legislature is in the hands of the Populists and Democrats, which insures the election of a Democratic Senator.

Kansas—The Democratic State Committee says the Weaver electors will have a majority in the State of 22,000; that Lewelling, for Governor, will have 17,000 majority, and that the Democrats and Populists will get seven out of the ten Congressmen.

Texas—Cleveland has carried the State, but the race between Hogg, Dem., and Clark for Governor is very close, with indications favoring the former. The Populists have probably captured two and the Republicans one Congressman out of thirteen.

Massachusetts—The Republican ticket was completely successful by pluralities from 2,000 down, except Russell, Dem., who has 2,000. The Legislature is heavily Republican in both branches. Of the thirteen Congressmen the Republicans carried ten.

California—The Democratic State Committee announces that the State has gone for Cleveland about 7,000 majority. Chairman Myers, of the Republican Committee, concurs. The Congressional delegation is probably five Republicans and four Democrats.

Kentucky—The Democrats have elected Congressmen in the First, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, and Tenth Districts, and the Republicans in the Eleventh. The Second is doubtful. Cleveland receives about the same plurality as four years ago.

Nevada—It is conceded by all that Weaver has carried Nevada by 1,500. Newlands, silver party, is elected to Congress. As to the Legislature, it is generally believed the silver party has a majority, which will insure the re-election of Stewart to the United States Senate.

New York—Cleveland's plurality in New York State is about 44,000. In New York City it is 75,800, and in Kings County about 25,000. The New York State Legislature will be Democratic by 14 or 16 on joint ballot, thus insuring the election of a Democrat to succeed United States Senator Frank Hiscock. The Assembly will probably be made up of 70 Democrats and 58 Republicans.

Pleasant Forms of Greeting.

In a recent address, describing a journey through Southeastern Russia, Mr. George Kennan said the traveler in that region must always be prepared to improvise a new, and appropriate salutation. To illustrate: "In the morning a mountaineer greets another with, 'May your morning be bright,' to which the prompt rejoinder is, 'And may a sunny day never pass you by.' A guest he welcomes with, 'May your coming bring joy,' and the guest replies, 'May a blessing rest on your house.' To one about to travel, the appropriate greeting is, 'May God make straight your road;' to one returning from a journey, 'May health and strength come back with rest.'" But, notwithstanding their courtesy, the Caucasian mountaineers are very pugnacious, and resort to their daggers very promptly to settle personal differences. This alacrity to fight, however, is by no means uncommon in other races among whom forms of excessive courtesy prevail.

ABOUT RED HAIR.

It Has Long Been Held in Ill-Repute, and as Indicating Villainy.

For centuries the popular notions throughout Europe associated hair of this unlucky color with villainy, untrutworthiness and deceit. In Henry Bebel's "Collection of Proverbs," published in 1512, occurs the following: "Proud are the short, untrustworthy the red-haired."

An old French proverb, which is known to be over five hundred years old, says: "Salute a red-haired man or a bearded woman at thirty feet off with three stones in thy fists to defend thee if need be."

In very early times all pictures of Judas, Christ's betrayer, were shown with great shocks of red hair falling down well on the shoulders. This and the fact that the Judas in the "Miracle Plays" was provided with a red hirsute worked the superstitious people of the middle ages up to such a degree that it was actually unsafe for a red-haired person to appear in company. Seeing that things were coming to a serious pass, writers of all classes began to rebuke and denounce "the senseless prejudice against those of lively colored hair." Cyrano de Bergerac, in his "States and Empires of the Sun," boldly praised and glorified the despised color in the following words:

"A brave head, covered with red hair, is nothing else but the sun in the midst of his rays, yet many speak ill of it because few have the honor to be so."

The adjective, "Judas-colored hair," and many similar allusions are often met with in writings of the older authors. In "As You Like It," Rosalind says of Orlando, "His very hair is of that dissembling color," to which Celia replies, "Something browner than Judas'."

Dryden in writing of Jacob Tonson, a publisher whom he thoroughly despised, says:

He has leering looks, bull-faced and freckled fair,
Two left legs and Judas-colored hair.

Hundreds of other citations to this popular prejudice could be given, but the above are sufficient to prove that the red-haired person's position was not an enviable one in the years gone by.—Republic.

A Curious Cave.

The cave temple, of Karli, India, is rightly considered one of the greatest wonders of the world. This gigantic recess in the mountain ledge has been chiseled by human hands from porphyry as hard as the hardest flint. The cave is 124 feet long, 45 feet broad, and 46 feet from floor to ceiling. Before the entrance to the temple stands a monster stone elephant, upon whose back is seated a colossal goddess, all hewed from one solid block of stone. Like the temple walls and the outside ornaments, every article of adorning sculpture on the inside is hewed from the native rock.

There are aisles on each side separated from the nave by octagonal pillars of stone. The capital of each pillar is crowned with two kneeling elephants, on whose backs are seated two figures, representing the divinities, to whom the temple is dedicated. These figures are perfect, and of beautiful features, as, indeed, are all the representations of deities and divinities in this peculiar temple.

The repulsiveness so characteristic of modern Hindoo and Chinese pagodas is here wholly wanting. Each figure is true to life, or rather to art, there being no mythical half horse, half man, or beast birds depicted in this underground wonder of Karli. This wondrous underground pagoda or cave temple has been a standing puzzle for the learned archæologists of both Europe and Asia for the last twenty-five hundred years, and is as much of an enigma to-day as it was in the time of Confucius.

The Mothers of Great Men.

A great deal has been written about "The Mothers of Great Men." We imagine, however, that the folks of Loenberg, in Wurtemberg, have started a precedent by erecting memorials to a series of mothers of great men. This little township of about 2,000 inhabitants was the birthplace of Paulus, the famous rationalist theologian; of Schelling, the equally famous philosopher, and of Hochstetter, the naturalist. It was also the dwelling place of the mother of the poet Schiller from 1796 to 1801, and of the mother of the astronomer Kepler two centuries earlier, though three villages in the neighborhood contend for the honor of having been Kepler's birthplace. The Town Council of the "Town of Mothers," as it proudly calls itself, has affixed tablets to the walls of the old castle of Duke Ulrich the Well Beloved, where the Magna Charta of Wurtemberg liberties was signed by the Duke in honor of the mothers of the poet and the astronomer. We presume that the patriotic Town Councilors will not stop short at these two honorable women, but will extend similar tokens of respect to other mothers of whom they are so justly proud.—Pall Mall Gazette.

On the Lawyers.

The Quitman (Ga.) Free Press has heard two good jokes on lawyers. One is on Judge Jim Guerry, of Dawson. A short time ago an old negro was up before the Judge, charged with some trivial offense.

"Haven't you a lawyer, old man?" inquired the Judge.

"No, sah."

"Can't you get one?"

"No, sah."

"Don't you want me to appoint one to defend you?"

"No, sah; I jes tho't I'd leab de case to the ignance ob de co't."

The other is on the legal fraternity in general. An old farmer was on his deathbed. He requested that two lawyers from a neighboring town be sent for. When they came he motioned them to take seats, one on each side of the bed. He looked from one to the other for a few moments, and then with his last breath exclaimed: "I die content, like my Savior, between two thieves!"

HOW FREQUENTLY are the honesty and integrity of a man disposed of by a shrug! How many good and noble actions have sunk into oblivion by a distrustful look, or stamped with the impression of proceeding from bad motives by a mysterious whisper!

LOVE AND HUMAN NATURE.

Tale of a Short Courtship on the Mississippi River.

BY JOHN HABBERTON.

CHAPTER I.—Continued.

When the old man went away Jack retired to his little cabin and pretended to go to sleep, but he spent a most uncomfortable night. Why, even his boat cabin, not ten feet square, was a palace compared with the house at which he had taken supper. The idea of a man and woman bringing up such a daughter in such a place! What could they be thinking of, or, could it be they did not think at all? He thought his own quarters cramped and his river life almost as quiet as a hermit's, yet if that girl lived on a bee-boat she would see a great deal more of the world and its inhabitants than she ever could while she inhabited that bare cabin. But why should he think of her being on a bee-boat at all? There was no way for her to reach such luck unless she were some day to marry a man in the honey business; instead of that she would be sure to throw herself away on that stupid, unmannerly, lounging, hulking fellow with a gun. He wished his mother and sisters could have the making of that girl, and then send her back to her own country to teach her old acquaintances what was what. Wouldn't she make a stir if she could be put in that quiet old New Hampshire village—even if she made her first appearance in that very faded calico dress? As he imagined her walking into the village church, the white walls of that barn-like edifice suddenly grew rosy, to his closed eyes, and the scent of orange flowers banished the well-remembered and pervasive odor of caraway seed.

Nothing of that sort could happen, though, if she already was gone on that infernal fellow with a gun, as, of course, she was; if not, why did she rush out so wildly to stop him as he went along and bring him into the house? Beauty did not imply brains—he had learned this long ago in his home studies of heredity; neither did it save its possessor from rude tastes. Well, Jack was sure the whole affair was none of his business, and, if he could not get it out of his head, where it seemed determined to stay, he would have himself towed up the river ahead of time, and get away from such a nightmare of stupidity. If he could afford to rush the season a little he guessed the bees could stand it, too.

CHAPTER II.

As he emerged from his cabin in the morning, with a light and aching head, and began to make his toilet, he was startled by an apparition of the young man with a gun. Jack rubbed his eyes and saw that it was no apparition at all, but the man in his real person, with a very real gun. Jack had a gun of his own and knew how to use it, so he hurried into the cabin, slipped a cartridge into his rifle, and then peered cautiously through one of his little windows. The man was still there, but he did not seem in haste to proceed to bloody work, for he had leaned his gun against a tree and seated himself on a stump. Jack placed his own gun within the door yet where he could reach it quickly if necessary; then he ventured outside again. The man with the gun raised his head, saw Jack and shouted:

"Hello!"

"Hello yourself," Jack replied; then he thought it safe to say: "Won't you come aboard?"

"Don't care if I do."

Jack pushed out a plank, and the visitor, leaving his gun behind, sauntered aboard with his hands in his pockets and looked carelessly about him. He seemed to approve of what he saw, for he soon remarked:

"Mighty pooty bizness, this of yourn. Old man Mazzitt was tellin me 'bout it after he came back last night, an' I 'llowed I'd take a look at it if you didn't mind."

Evidently, then, the man with the gun was so close a friend of the family that he had spent the night with them. The idea of so uncouth a fellow being even under the same roof with that girl and treated as her equal! Jack wanted to toss him overboard and drive him to the bottom with a push-pole, but he restrained himself and explained the bee-boat business to him. If the fellow was to marry Lizzie perhaps the girl's life would be more endurable if her husband was to go into some business which would enable his wife to see what little of the world lay along the banks of the big river. It wasn't an impossible scheme. The business did not require much capital to start it, and, to tell the truth, there was not much more work about it than in carrying a gun and skulking about in the woods. So Jack enlarged a little upon what he had already said about bee-boating, and the fellow seemed to understand it, for he asked an intelligent question or two. Then he leaned against the sunny side of the cabin, looked Jack full in the eye, and startled the owner of the boat by remarking:

"You 'pear to be a pooty decent kind of a feller."

"Thank you," said Jack, "though I don't see how you've made up your mind on so slight acquaintance."

"Oh, well," said the hunter, "we have to learn in this country to take a man's measure pooty quick. There's all sorts come along, some by land and some by water, an' there's no time to look up somebody that knows 'em and ask questions about 'em. If I didn't think more'n usual well of you, I wouldn't have come down here this morning to say somethin' to you—somethin' strictly 'tween man an' man."

"What the—something—is the fellow up to?" Jack asked himself.

"It's about her," said the native, nodding his head in the direction of Lizzie's residence.

"Don't worry about me," said Jack promptly and quite loftily. "I never attempted to take a girl away from another fellow."

"There's lots that she'll be taken away from, by whoever gets her," was the reply. "I 'llow you aint married? Well, her heads full of you."

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Jack, with a frown which he could scarcely keep from becoming a smile. "She never saw me until last night."

"That don't make no difference," said the visitor. "I know the signs in gals. She couldn't talk about nothin' else all last night while me an' the old man was smokin'."

"You must have got two men mixed, my friend," said Jack. "I don't think I exchanged twenty words with her."

"Gals have eyes as well as ears, my friend," was the reply. "I ain't a-goin' to go over agin what she said, 'cause I don't b'lieve in tattlin', but what I've told you is dead sure, an' as you're a pooty decent kind of feller, as I said before, I made bold to come down an' ask you between men, an' not to go any further, an' that you don't go to makin' yourself extry pleasant an' sociable-like onless you mean bizness."

Jack eyed the fellow sharply. Was this talk what it seemed on the surface, or was it a sly way of discovering whether he had any intentions regarding another man's sweetheart? Of course this man Bill was himself in love with the girl—he couldn't help it—no one could, Jack was sure, who saw her often. He had heard that some simple-looking Southerners were desperately crafty, and it was plain to Jack's practiced eye that this fellow, in spite of his rude exterior, was no fool; had he not discovered, through his own unaided intelligence, that Jack himself was "a pooty decent kind of a feller?" What could he be up to? Well, the most straightforward course was the best, particularly with a man who always carried a gun, and was astir so early in the morning.

"My friend," said Jack, "I give you my word as an honest man that all I'm thinking about down here is the bee business. I like the people I've met along the river, and the young woman you have been talking about is a very charming girl, but I've a mother and sisters of my own, and I've too much respect for other women to trifle with their feelings."

"I didn't 'llow that you'd do anythin' mean—no siree—not a bit of it," was the reply. "It aint you I'm afraid of doin' anythin', it's her, bless her big, warm, natural, innocent, heart. You're somethin' new an' strange, not that she ain't seen other men that wasn't brought up in these parts, but I reckon you ain't like the rest of 'em; she thinks so, anyhow."

Jack had been studying the man closely while he talked. Unless all rules of human nature were false, this man was no sly dog; there were traces of the gentleman in the expression of his countenance. It was natural that he should not have said bluntly that he himself was in love with the girl; he had displayed admirable taste in the way he put the case. Jack's heart warmed toward him, and Jack's hand went forward as its owner said:

"Your manner does you great credit, old man, and I wish you joy of her. I promise solemnly that I will not go near her house again. When I find myself feeling lonesome I'll tramp in the opposite direction and find somebody to talk to. We Yankees are great talkers; everybody has his weakness, you know. But as for that girl, I again give you my word that I won't see her again."

The visitor dropped Jack's hand and his face grew long as he sighed:

"That'll be awful hard on her."

Jack stared in astonishment; then he began to lose his temper and he exclaimed—almost shouted:

"See here, old man, you talk like a fool. No man can be near that girl without admiring her a great deal; you've told me certain things about her; you don't want her to get more interested in me, nor me in her, yet——"

"Yes, I do," came with great energy from the visitor, while Jack in his surprise stepped backward and nearly tumbled into the river. "I only want you to keep away if you don't mean anythin' serious. Nothin' would suit me better than for her to git a man like you for her husband."

"What? And you give her up?"

Then it was the visitor's turn to be surprised. He began to straighten himself to a standing posture, and he continued until he seemed a giant when he said:

"What have I got to do with it? I aint her beau. I'm goin' to marry a friend of hers as soon as my cabin's done."

"Oh," said Jack, with a whole gamut of inflections as the change of conditions became clear to him. Then he found his brain in a whirl. It was utterly ridiculous, the discomfort he had suffered in abandoning that girl, whom he had first seen only twelve hours before, to the man whom he supposed was her lover. Now that he learned she was free he wanted to shout with joy, which of course was equally ridiculous. Besides, the fellow was probably mistaken; any man in love imagines everybody else in the same condition. He would question his informant farther, not that it would be possible for him to fall in love in earnest with a woman of whose family he knew nothing, but it would be delightful to be sure that so glorious a creature had really become interested in him.

"It's born in her," said the visitor, after a short chat about the indications which had aroused his interest. "Her father and mother went the same way. I've heard ag'in an' ag'in how her mother, who was the most run-after gal in these parts, never took a shine to any feller till one day Sam came along. There'd been some land flooded down here by a break in the levee, an' Sam come down with some more fellers from up-river to go for deer that got bunched on a little rise of ground that the water didn't cover. He stopped at her old man's house to light his pipe; he didn't git no deer with his gun, but he got a 'dear' with his tongue before mornin'." Then the visitor indulged in a long and gentle laugh over this time-honored joke of the vicinity. As for Jack, he murmured beneath his mustache:

"Heredity! heredity!"

"Sam could have done a good deal better for himself, in the money way," said the visitor, "if he hadn't been so fond of his wife. He's got a good head for business, an' more'n one big plantation owner back of the river has offered to go shares with him if Sam would manage the place an' let the owner go off North or somewheres else an' fool away his money, but Sam won't live anywheres but in the cabin where he fust met his gal. Well, I don't blame him. If a feller has got that sort of stuff in him good and solid, he gits more good out of the world than money could buy him—don't you think so, stranger? The old gal's just as sweet an' pooty in his eyes as the fust day he saw her, an' she can't see no change in him. Ain't that enough?"

"It certainly ought to be," said Jack, with a great deal of feeling. The visitor, who had been studying Jack's half averted face, offered his own hand, which had a grasp like a vise, as he said:

"I thought you'd say so; I saw it in your eye. Well, I must be goin' I'm after a buck that I saw in the woods down here a few days ago. He was too quick for me that time, but I marked his runway, an' I'm goin' to lay for him."

"Here!" shouted Jack, as the visitor was going ashore. "Won't you have something to keep the chills off?" Jack wondered, as he dashed into his cabin and emerged with a flask of brandy which he had brought down only for medicinal purposes, what any inhabitant of his native village would have thought had they seen him offer any one a drink that was stronger than water.

"Much obliged, but I don't ever take nothin'," was the reply. Then, after standing silent on the plank a moment, the visitor remarked:

"You didn't look to me like a drinkin' man."

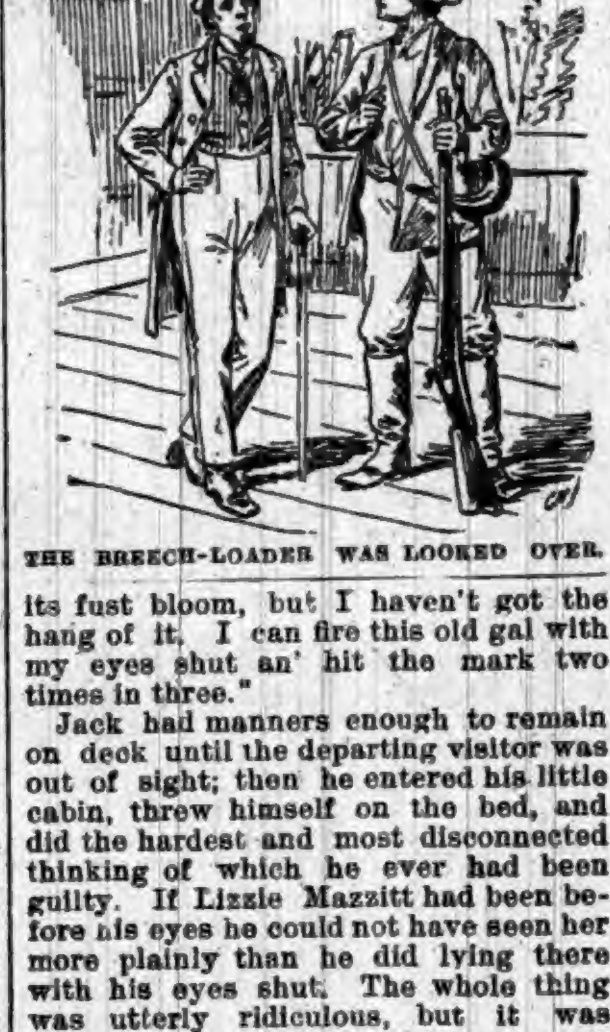
"I'm not," said Jack. "I never touch liquor except when I am sick."

"Oh, that's all right," was the reply. "'Twould have gone agin me to have found you was a drinkin' man."

"Say," shouted Jack, as the man again started away, "are you sure you have plenty of cartridges? Is your gun dead sure? You're welcome to take mine, it's the best that money can buy."

The visitor returned. Was there ever a hunter in so much of a hurry that he could not stop to look at another hunter's gun? Jack's breech-loader was looked over critically and admiringly, but returned with the remark:

"It's as pooty as a young magnolia in its fust bloom, but I haven't got the hang of it. I can fire this old gal with my eyes shut an' hit the mark two times in three."



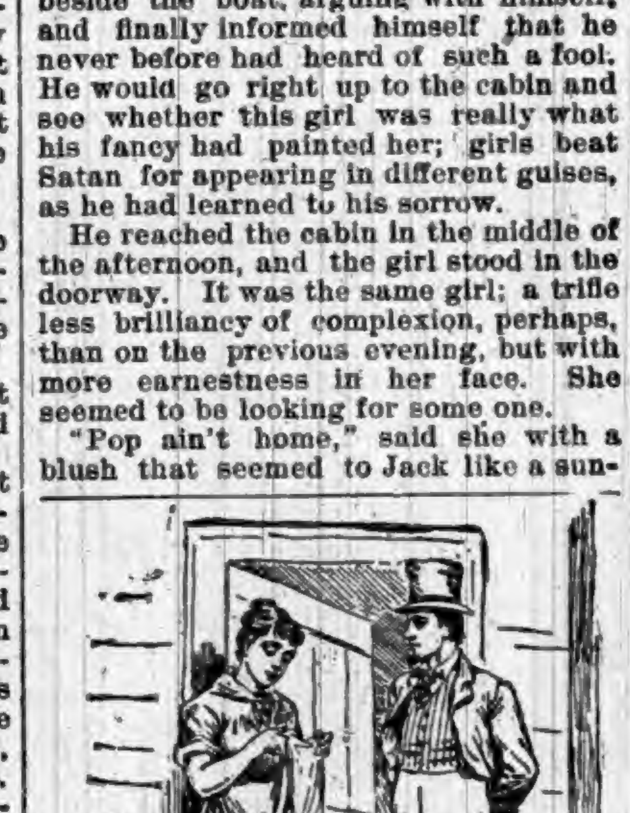
THE BREECH-LOADER WAS LOOKED OVER.

Jack had manners enough to remain on deck until the departing visitor was out of sight; then he entered his little cabin, threw himself on the bed, and did the hardest and most disconnected thinking of which he ever had been guilty. If Lizzie Mazzitt had been before his eyes he could not have seen her more plainly than he did lying there with his eyes shut. The whole thing was utterly ridiculous, but it was also very real. A handsome young woman—a clear case of hereditary singling out of a single man—a young man impressed as he never had been before, and all in an atmosphere that seemed redolent of love and all manner of sweetness. What would people at home say? Hang the people at home! His mother and sisters had never known him to be mistaken in his estimates of human nature; they would trust him now; and as to others, it was none of their business. He would have no time for love-making; all such affairs in New Hampshire took a full year, unless they began in the summer and a fellow had to marry before planting season, so as not to waste time. He might try to hasten things a little, so as not to delay his move up the river at the proper time—try to make the girl better acquainted with him, so that she would be willing to wait for him until the next season; but how awful it would be to be separated from her for a year—be separated from this girl whom he had seen for about half an hour—no more! What nonsense!

Remembering that he had not breakfasted, he made some coffee and ate a biscuit; at dinner time his appetite was equally doubtful. He paced the shore beside the boat, arguing with himself, and finally informed himself that he never before had heard of such a fool. He would go right up to the cabin and see whether this girl was really what his fancy had painted her; girls beat Satan for appearing in different guises, as he had learned to his sorrow.

He reached the cabin in the middle of the afternoon, and the girl stood in the doorway. It was the same girl; a trifle less brilliancy of complexion, perhaps, than on the previous evening, but with more earnestness in her face. She seemed to be looking for some one.

"Pop ain't home," said she with a blush that seemed to Jack like a sunrise in paradise. "I thought he might be coming."



"POP AIN'T HOME," SAID SHE.

"Isn't he careless to go away and leave such a jewel unguarded?" the young man asked. He thought afterward it was a very stupid and stilted speech, but there are times when young men can't be sensible.

"Pop knows I'm perfectly able to take care of myself," said the girl, with an arch smile which robbed Jack at once of his senses, though it made him respect the speaker all the more. Still, he ventured to say:

"If you're not, you're welcome to call upon me any time, now or forever"

The girl's eyes opened wide, though without a bit of fear. Jack went on:

"I came up to ask you as a special favor to let me become well acquainted with you. I don't amount to much, but such as there is of me is genuine, and I'd be very glad if you could learn to like me."

"I like you now," said the girl, as honestly as if she was talking of some matter-of-fact affair.

"But I want you to like me more," the young man persisted. "I don't understand much but honey and human nature, but I do profess to know all that's worth knowing about both of them. I'm filling my boat with the best honey that ever was taken North, but it would be a great deal sweeter, and so would my life be forever, if I could take you, too."

"Are you joking?" asked the girl, with a very serious face.

"I never was more in earnest in my life," said Jack, lifting his hat and bowing his head.

"I'd follow you all over the world," murmured the girl. Jack looked up quickly, and saw a face so transfigured that he took it to his heart to make sure that it was real. He found that it was; so he kept it there for some moments, releasing it only for a second or two at a time for purposes which need not be explained to any one who has been in love.

Jack never could explain to his family and friends; all he could say was that there was something peculiar and delicious about the air of the Louisiana lowlands. Certain it is that he married Lizzie within the week, for the bees were demanding fresh flowers, and there began among the hives a honeymoon so long that it has not yet ended.

Bridget (to herself, two hours afterward)—Humph! More of that jam gone. I don't see how that boy reaches it.—Street & Smith's Good News.

To Quiet the Patient.

A doctor finds it difficult sometimes to secure for the patient the quiet necessary for his recovery. One doctor, however, was equal to the emergency. The fussy, worrying wife of a man who was ill came up as he was leaving the house, asking, "Oh, Doctor, how is he? How is he to-day?" "Above everything he must positively have quiet, so I have written out a prescription here for a couple of opium powders," replied the doctor. "When shall he take them? When shall I give them to him?" "Him?" said the doctor; "I've prescribed them for you."

English Barmaids.

It is estimated that no fewer than 70,000 girls are employed in the public houses and drinking bars of the United Kingdom.

DEAR SIRS:—"Last winter I had La Grippe in its worst form, leaving me in a terrible condition, my Brain was confused, my Heart weak, and my legs refused to hold me up, and the muscles were so sore that it was painful to lie down. I had continual Headache, and everything I ate distressed me. I could not work, sleep, or eat, and my right side became numb. Several doctors told me I had Incipient Paralysis, and that I could get no better. I grew so weak that I could not leave the house.
Hearing of PITCHER'S LIVURA I got a bottle and it helped me from the first. I took 4 bottles in all, and am PERFECTLY WELL in every way, and now work all day. I know that PITCHER'S LIVURA CURED ME."

MARYLAND ROASTER AND BAKER

IMPROVED
ROASTER & BAKER

FOR MEATS, FOWL, FISH, ETC., AND FOR BAKING BREAD, CAKES AND PUDDINGS.
BEST SIMPLEST AND CHEAPEST
THE STEAM produced by the process of cooking cannot escape, is absorbed by the article in the roaster, and acts as a basting. There is no evaporation, no drying up or burning, hence no shrinkage or loss of weight, and all the flavor and nutritious qualities of the food are retained. Tough meats are made tender, and any article roasted or baked will be sweeter, healthier and more digestible. Put the food in the roaster, place the roaster in a well heated oven; the roaster will do the cooking. It requires no attention. Can only be bought from dealers, the trade supplied by:

LIVURA M'F'G. Co.,

GENTLEMEN:—"My little girl had Blood Poison; her system was all run down, her body was completely covered with a rash and horrid red blotches, owing to the intense itching she could not sleep. Her digestive organs were in a very bad condition; she complained of pain in the limbs and we were very much alarmed about her. We tried everything we could think of but nothing had the desired effect until we found PITCHER'S LIVURA. She had not been taking LIVURA more than one week when her eyes looked natural again, her appetite improved, and before the second bottle had been used, the rash and blotches disappeared, the itching left, and she is now PERFECTLY WELL and has gained flesh. THE AUBURN COURIER

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, postoffice as second-class matter.

THURSDAY.....NOVEMBER 17, 1892.

ONLY a microbe now—The G. O. P.

CLEVELAND has a majority without New York.

A WOMAN has been elected attorney-general of Montana. She is a practicing attorney.

AUBURN will have its big jollification meeting Saturday evening. Everybody turn out.

BUTLER will jollify Friday evening Hon. W. F. McNagny will make the address. A big time. All come.

CLEVELAND'S plurality in Illinois is over 27,000. The Sucker state did nobly for the first democratic majority.

COTTON mills in New England states are increasing wages of workingmen. They are not afraid of Cleveland.

THE fat fisherman of Buzzard's Bay, as the republicans call Cleveland, seems to have had good luck. He caught about everything in sight.

REPUBLICANS over did the "old soldier" business. They tried so hard to make people believe that Cleveland would stop the pensions when he got in, that some of their own party went and voted for Cleveland in hopes that he would do that very thing.

WE HAVE an article in which Wanamaker gives his ideas as to what caused the democratic victory. Among these causes he names the "booth," meaning the Australian ballot law. He seems especially bitter on this subject. As the only marked change this law makes is to secure an honest election and to prevent vote buying, this wail from the pious postmaster general is rather suggestive.

THE Dispatch is still claiming that democrats are opposed to "American tin." What nonsense. Neither democrats nor republicans are opposed to any American industry, old or new, unless it may be the advocates of the McKinley law, a bill which doubles the tax on the imported tin we are obliged to use, in making "American tin plate." The democrats, we hope, will remove this obstruction.

Election Notes.

Republican papers are weeping over the ruin that will fall on American manufacturing interests. How silly!

The solid south and the solid north almost. But we don't want the earth. Give 'em Rhode Island.

The South Bend Times came out last week in the color so fashionable now with democrats, the color they have used on so many towns—a bright, glowing red. Bro. Stoll was not originally a Cleveland man, but when the nomination was made, he, like Dave Hill, declared he was "a democrat" and like Hill, he went into the fight with his whole soul, and now rejoices in a victory he did so much to win. That is the kind of a democrat we like to see.

The Editor of the Dispatch no doubt is glad that he did not run against J. E McDonald.

The Garrett railroad men voted their tickets nearly straight. The promises made them by the republican candidates were evidently not trusted. Shockney's big stories were more than they could swallow.

The prohibitionists of Steuben county did themselves little credit in putting Gilbert on their ticket instead of Butler for prosecutor. Gilbert went through the saloons of this county, and tried his best to get their support. Butler is a real temperance man. Gilbert is sham.

The Dispatch complains that some democrats got drunk over their good fortune. If they did, it is to be regretted. But we remember distinctly, that four years ago, some of the staunchest republicans in Auburn did the same thing, and the Dispatch never even "regretted" it.

Harrison says the tariff and force bills did it. He claims he was all along in favor of a more liberal policy on both lines. If so, why did he not say so, and save himself?

Down went McKinley to the bottom of the sea. And he must be very wet, for they havn't found him yet. All sing.

Clerk Moody has been kept busy sending off big blanks full of election reports to various officials at Indianapolis. And he says he has a lot more that he keeps ready for any other official that may prove a right to have them.

Capt. G. W. Bell, who made the fine speeches here, is happy, as well he might be, for he did good work.

McKinley probably feels the "responsibilities of fatherhood." His darling little Bill has got the colic.

There was not a democratic supervisor appointed in Indiana. Democrats believe the people can be trusted.

One disgruntled republican came to Auburn the other day, and asserted that in less than a year, wheat would be down to thirty cents.

North Dakota elected a lady state superintendent of public instruction, and now they are in doubt as to whether she can serve legally.

Democrats in a Missouri town, closed their jollification by burning their hats, and the hats of all others they could get, about 500 in all.

An Indiana farmer bet his stock against that of a neighbor, and now he has a double set of everything, including horses, cows, reapers, etc. He bet on Cleveland. A Kansas man lost his farm by a bet on Harrison. A firm in Virginia, Ill., sold agricultural implements to be paid for when Harrison was elected. Busted now.

There was a large vote in every state, so the landslide was no accident. Cleveland will have about 700,000 more votes of the people than Harrison. Four years ago, he had nearly 100,000 the most, but Harrison got the electors. Now Cleveland has twice as many electors as Harrison.

THE ELECTION.

How the States Voted in the Great Landslide.

New York gave Cleveland a plurality of 44,900 and the democrats have the legislature insuring another democratic U. S. senator. It will probably be Edward Murphy of Troy.

Wyoming gives 500 for the Harrison electors, but goes democratic by about the same on goveenor and congressman. Legislature one republican.

Kansas gave the people's party a plurality of about 4,000 with the legislature the same way giving the new party a U, S. senator.

Massachusetts gives Russell, democrat over 2,000 for governor, but the other state officers, and the electors are republican.

Connecticut gave Cleveland electors and elected a democratic governor by a majority over all others.

Minnesota went republican 16,000 on five electors and 11,000 on the other four, and get the legislature. The democrats get all the supreme judges at this election, or 3in 5.

North Dakota gives the republicans the secretary of state and legislature, but the fusion ticket gets electors, and rest of state ticket.

Montana gives republican electors and legislature.

Iowa gave Harrison 22,872 plurality.

California went republican about 1,000, but the democrats get the legislature.

Wisconsin went democratic by about 8,000, legislature the same way.

Indiana's democratic majority is over 8,000, and the legislature by 47.

Arizona, New Mexico and Utah gave democratic majorities. We should admit them as states, for they give more than twice the vote of Nevada, Wyoming and Idaho.

Washington state goes republican by nearly 4,000.

Delaware's plurality for Cleveland is 506. A small state with but three counties

Texas, democratic by 75,000.

Nebraska republicans beat the democrats and people's party, but lose the legislature.

Oregon gives Harrison a small plurality.

In Ohio they are having the official count. The two first electors, a democrat and a republican, ran ahead, having been stamped by mistake, supposing that would be a straight vote. In this way we may get one elector there, the rest of the ticket being probably slightly republican.

"A Tale of Two Cities," Says Wanamaker.

When Postmaster General Wanamaker was asked if the democratic victory meant the fall of the republican party he at once began to explain that the defeat was wholly temporary, and due to local causes. "It is a tale of two cities," said he. "New York and Chicago are responsible for it. They are made up largely of a foreign element, and it has been this element which has given the democratic party the preponderance of strength in the great cities of the country and through the country at large."

"Then you do not regard the result as a verdict of the American people against the theory of protection?"

"By no means. I cannot believe that our people will ever surrender the theory or practice of protection. I have just come from a trip through the natural gas belt of Indiana, where I had before me practical illustrations of the fostering care of protection. All you have to do is to stick your umbrella in the ground and you get a natural gas well capable of giving power, light and heat to some great factory. The works are springing up and numerous other branches of industry are taking advantage of the McKinley tariff. Now is it possible that the American people meant to say yesterday that those factories must be abandoned? If the verdict was free trade, then the tin plate works and other industries of the gas belt and elsewhere must give up the struggle for a foothold. No, the American people gave no such verdict. Local causes brought about the result. The two great cities with their foreign population were the first factor and the new voting booth was another. It was a 'Booth' who struck a blow at American freedom in 1865, and I am afraid it was another 'booth' which overthrew yesterday the party of anti-slavery and protection to American industries."

Mr. Wanamaker had just come from a half hour talk with the president. "I do not think that he has the slightest feeling of personal regret over the result," said Mr. Wanamaker. "When a man's cup is full to the very brim, as it has been with Mr. Harrison for weeks, you cannot add another drop. He feels for his party but not for himself.

PERFECTION IN TRAVELING

At 6 30 p. m daily one of the handsomest trains in the United States and known as the North-Western Limited, leaves the passenger station of the North-Western Line in Chicago, on its journey to St. Paul and Minneapolis, the twin cities of the North-West. Vestibuled throughout, and equipped with buffet, smoking and library cars, private compartment sleeping cars, drawing room sleepers and superb dining cars, it furnishes its occupants with every comfort and convenience which could be desired by the most fastidious.

While in its entirety it undoubtedly takes rank with the finest trains in the world, there are two features of its equipment that deserve especial mention for they are new departures in the western railway world:

The buffet, smoking and library car is furnished in the most luxurious manner, with comfortable arm chairs, writing desks, book-cases and a well stocked buffet, from which light refreshments are served. The private compartment sleeping car is designed especially for the accommodation of family parties and ladies traveling without escort. It is composed of ten separate compartments, each complete in itself, and containing washstand, hot and cold running water and all necessary toilet arrangements.

Aside from these two features, it is in keeping with the rest of the service to say that the supper served in the dining car, after the train leaves Chicago, is a meal calculated to please the epicure.

In a word, if you desire to travel in the most comfortable manner and make the trip to St. Paul, Minneapolis, or any point in the Northwest, in the quickest time, be sure that your ticket reads via the North-Western line. Maps, time tables and full information can be obtained upon application to any ticket agent, or by addressing W. A. Thrall, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Chicago & North-Western R'y, Chicago.

Low Excursion Rates to Chicago.

On November 28, 29 and December 2, the B. & O will sell excursion tickets to Chicago, Ill., at very low rates, on account of the National Horse Show, to be held Nov 28 to Dec 3 Tickets will be good for return passage for five days, including day of sale. For further information, call upon or address any agent of the B. & O. railroad, or L. S. Allen, Ass't Gen'l Pass'r Agent, Chicago.

Playing Cards.

You can obtain a pack of best quality playing cards by sending 15 cents in postage to P. S. Eustis, Gen'l Pass. Agt., C. B. & Q. R. R., Chicago, Ill. 3

Save Your Eyes.

Don't ruin your eyes, by wearing improper glasses, or those not properly fitted. Get an experienced and skillful man to fit them to your eyes. So wait till C. J. Porter, the Waterloo optician, comes to Auburn. He will be at the Hollister House, the first Tuesday in each month. Don't forget the date.

A Great Popular History of the World.

The story of the world's history is, after all, the most interesting and most instructive story which has ever been told. It was probably never better presented, for general reading and reference, than in Alden's Cyclopedia of History, recently published. Every nation of the earth, ancient and modern, is treated in its alphabetical order, excepting, only, the United States, which is to form a separate work. You have ancient history as far back as B.C. 5004, and modern history down to A.D. 1892. All countries are described in their physical aspects, as well as historically, so you have the equivalent of a book of travels round the world. There are many illustrations, none for mere ornament, but all helpful for instruction. Considering the magnitude of the work, its small cost is astonishing. The entire history comprises about 800,000 words—equivalent, you will find by comparison, to about 10 volumes of ordinary size—and yet is issued in two handy volumes, in small but clear type, well and handsomely made, and sold in cloth binding for only $1.25 for the set, plus 20 cents for postage, if by mail. For 10 cents the publisher sends postpaid a paper-bound volume of 160 pages containing the complete history of several nations, by which you can judge of the character of the entire work. Every home ought to have a good Universal History; this is probably the best for general use. The publisher's catalogue of choice books, over 100 pages, a rich feast for book lovers, is sent postpaid for 2 cents. JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher, 57 Rose street, New York.

Desired Information

We desire to impress upon the minds of the public the superiority of the service offered by the Wisconsin Central Lines between Chicago and Milwaukee and St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth and all points in the Northwest. Two fast trains leave Chicago daily for St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth with Pullman Vestibuled drawing room sleepers and coaches of latest design. Its dining car service is unsurpassed. This the Public is invited to judge for itself. It is the only route to the Pacific coast over which both Pullman vestibuled, first-class, and Pullman tourist cars are operated from Chicago via St. Paul without change.

Pamphlets giving valuable information can be obtained free upon application to your nearest ticket agent, or to Jas. C Pond, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Chicago, Ill.

N. B. Hathaway of Keyser, is this winter teaching the same school he held some years ago, when we were county superintendent, proving him acceptable to the good people over there. In fact, his patrons tell us, he is doing splendid work.

Prof. Chas. E. Kriebel of Butler, was here last week, working up the coming meeting of the teachers' association. He is an energetic worker in the good cause. He left a part of the work here for Mr. Merica, who is attending to it. It will be held here one week from Friday and Saturday, Nov. 25 and 26.

The little boy, Joseph Story, was buried last week. The sad accident by which he lost his life, was noted in these columns the week before. His foot was completely crushed by the wheel of the truck on which the moving building was placed, and for the few days he lived he was a great sufferer. His parents have the sympathy of all.

The junior society of Christian Endeavor was entertained by their superintendent, Mrs. Healy, Saturday afternoon. Although a small society, it is an ambitious one. The little ones that day opened their missionary jugs, and found $6 in all. At their election of officers: Mabel Baker was made president; Anna Copy, vice-president; Scott Showers, treasurer, and Kittie Bishop, secretary.

Mrs. W. M. Terry, who has been in the drug business at Elkton, Ky., for the past twelve years, says; "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy gives better satisfaction than any other cough medicine I have ever sold." There is good reason for reason for this. No other is so certain in a preventative and cure for croup; no other affords so much relief in cases of whooping cough. For sale by Robbins & McCord.

Lew Bowers has returned from his visit with the family of Cyrus Olinger, in Kansas. He brings word that crops have been good there this year. Politics ran pretty high of course, and he mentions the fact that his little grandson, Mel. Olinger, although his father is a republican, become so enthused for Cleveland, that he put up a bet with his sister, depositing the necessary funds with Mr. Bowers, who had the pleasure of giving it over to him, before he came away. Ed. Weeks was along with Mr. Bowers, so that politically it was a pair.

American Art Journal, N. Y. Oct. 8; During the reception, by the Ladies Citizens, Committee, at Washington, D. C., to distinguished members of the G. A. R., the vast audience assembled in the Congregational church received a musical treat which was as fine as it was original. Miss Laura McManis, whistler, and her sister, pianist, delighted their listeners with a rendering of a Chopin waltz. Their conception of the music blending, was as beautiful as it was poetical, and well did Hon. C. A. Boutelle, of Maine, compliment them, saying that the artistic birdlike thrilling of the whistler, and the seraphine music of the fair pianiste, was a sample of what American young ladies could do. They are from Indianapolis. The whistler simply gives the melody, with its runs and trills, but with a refinement which was not lacking in the succeeding valse by Wieniawski, which would be hard to excel.

Mr. Moore, the postmaster at Bradshaw, Va, after reading an advertisment of Chamberlain's colic, cholera and diarrhea remedy, concluded to try a small bottle of it. He says: "I used it it in two cases for colic and diarrhea with perfect satisfaction. I have handled and used a great deal of patent medicine but never tried any that gave as good results as this." For sale by Robbins & McCord.

Speaking of the U. S. Supervisors called for by the people's party, the Dispatch says, "We fail to see how any man favoring honest elections can object to any protection that is thrown around the ballot box. The marshals can do nothing more than see that the ballots are honestly counted, and honest returns made." But we have already made full provisions for honest work, by appointing, under the law, two representative men of each party to do the work of the board, and in addition there are two election sheriffs, who witness the count. These, with the inspector make seven persons, all honest and reputable citizens, and besides are sworn to do their duty. Was the eighth man any more honest than the other seven? We don't believe they are. But they and their party will go on record claiming they are better than their neighbors.

Quite a large number of our democrats went over to Garrett Tuesday evening to help them jollify. It was a grand affair. Clerk D. D. Moody of Auburn and J. M. Robinson of Ft. Wayne were to have made the speeches, and were both present. But Mr. Moody says the crowd was so happy that he hadn't the heart to call them away from their fun on the street. So there was no speech.

In our report of the fire last week, we made one erroneous statement. It was not Mr. Bachtel who gave the first alarm, but night watch Baker. He discovered the fire first, and rang the first alarm, and the fire bell. The first man to turn out was John Reesch at Trout's livery barn as the Opera House was on fire. We make this correction because we see that parties are using our statement against Mr. Baker, and our first statement was wrong.

Washington Post, Sept. 24, 1892: Two young ladies from Indianapolis were escorted to the stage. They were the Misses McManis, whose sweet but unique music has become famous in the West. Miss Laura is the whistler and her sister, Miss Alice accompanies her on the piano. They thoroughly understand each other, and the dulcet music of the whistler proved such a feature of the entertainment that a recall was given, to which the young ladies most gracefully responded.

There seems to be no limit to Colonel Knox's ability for writing history and description in the most agreeable manner. The Boy Travelers in Central Europe, just published by Harper & Brothers, is the latest of his books, and it follows "the Boys" as they wander among Paris cafes, along the Seine, over sunny France to the Alps in Switzerland, and in the happiest way imaginable, through the central countries of Europe. One can almost travel with them by reading the book, it is so fully illustrated.

Are your children subject to croup? If so, you should never be without a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough remedy. It is a certain cure for croup, and has never been known to fail. If given freely as soon as the croupy cough appears it will prevent the attack. It is the sole reliance with thousands of mothers who have croupy children, and never disappoints them. There is no danger in giving this Remedy in large and frequent doses, as it contains nothing injurious. 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord's.

B. M. Hastings, agent for this county for the Ohio Farmers Insurance Co., informs us that while this old and popular company has been called upon to pass through one of the most stringent and technical inspections by the State Insurance Commissioner of Ohio, (which took him and his assistants nearly six weeks to complete) yet the company is not only perfectly solvent, but that it is able to meet all of its liabilities of all kinds and have a net surplus of over $220,000 over all. And further more that the company has no thoughts or intentions of withdrawing or quitting business in this state, and that all policy holders' interests will be looked after and cared for in the same prompt and honest way that has always characterized this old and reliable company.

Dedication.

The new U. B. church three-fourths of a mile west of Wilmington Center, will be dedicated next Sunday, Nov. 20. Rev. J. A. Krum of Hudson, is pastor. But the dedicatory sermon will be by Rev. Wm. Dillon, Editor of the Christian Conservator at Dayton, Ohio.

Fair Stockholders' Meeting.

Notice is hereby given that there will be a meeting of the stockholders of the Auburn District Fair in the Gandy Hall on Saturday Nov. 26, 1892, at 10 o'clock a. m. A full attendance is earnestly requested and especially all directors are requested to be present.

J. L. DAVIS, Pres. CAL. HUSSELMAN, Sec'y.

Meeting of Commissioners.

The commissioners, Hoffelder and Henderson were in session yesterday, to accept bonds of the new officers, George Ralston as sheriff, Reuben Sawvel as treasurer, C. E. VanAuken as surveyor. Mr. Hoffelder takes his second term in December, and Henderson in December of next year. Mr. Lockwood was not present, having gone off fishing. Quite a reformer, he is, to leave important public business in that way. Republicans have been unfortunate in the election of officers.

Reading Room Notice.

The Reading Room managers are compelled, very reluctantly, to announce that they will close the room at the end of this month for lack of sufficient interest financially. All who have books borrowed will please return to the librarian at once. All who have books loaned to the association will have them returned on presentation of list. The furniture and fixtures will be for sale except such as may be retained in hopes of being able to resume the enterprise in the future.

GROVER IS THE VICTOR.

Our Own Glorious Democracy Triumphant.

TARIFF ROBBERS ARE SEVERELY REBUKED.

A Significant Victory for the People Won by the People.

THE PARTY OF JEFFERSON ONCE MORE SUPREME.

American Workingmen Will No Longer Bow to Protected Monopolists.

CLASS LEGISLATION IS DOOMED TO EXTIRPATION.

Fruits of the Ominous Ante-Election Stillness Have Been Made Known.

VERSATILE TIN-PLATE LIARS NOW OUT OF A JOB.

Cleveland and Stevenson, Vindicators of the People's Cause, Are the Nation's Exalted.

The Dreams of the Dawn of Democracy's Day Have Been Realized.

No more force bills.
No perpetual war taxes.
No more minority rule.
No more billion-dollarism.
No more bumptious diplomacy.
No everlasting tariff for monopolies only.
No more bounties or subsidies to favored classes.

We have won. Cleveland and Stevenson are victorious and Democracy, our own glorious Democracy, is triumphant. The people, the plain working people who reap but that which they have sown—and that only after the tax-gatherer has made his liberal deductions for the use of the tariff-fed millionaires—have again come into their own. For the second time in thirty-two years the Democratic party has triumphed over the allied forces of plutocracy and political corruption. Politically this country is ours. Let Democrats everywhere rejoice!

It means much to have a Democratic Vice President ruling over the sessions of the United States Senate, but the victory is chiefly significant when considered with deference to the platform upon which it has been won.

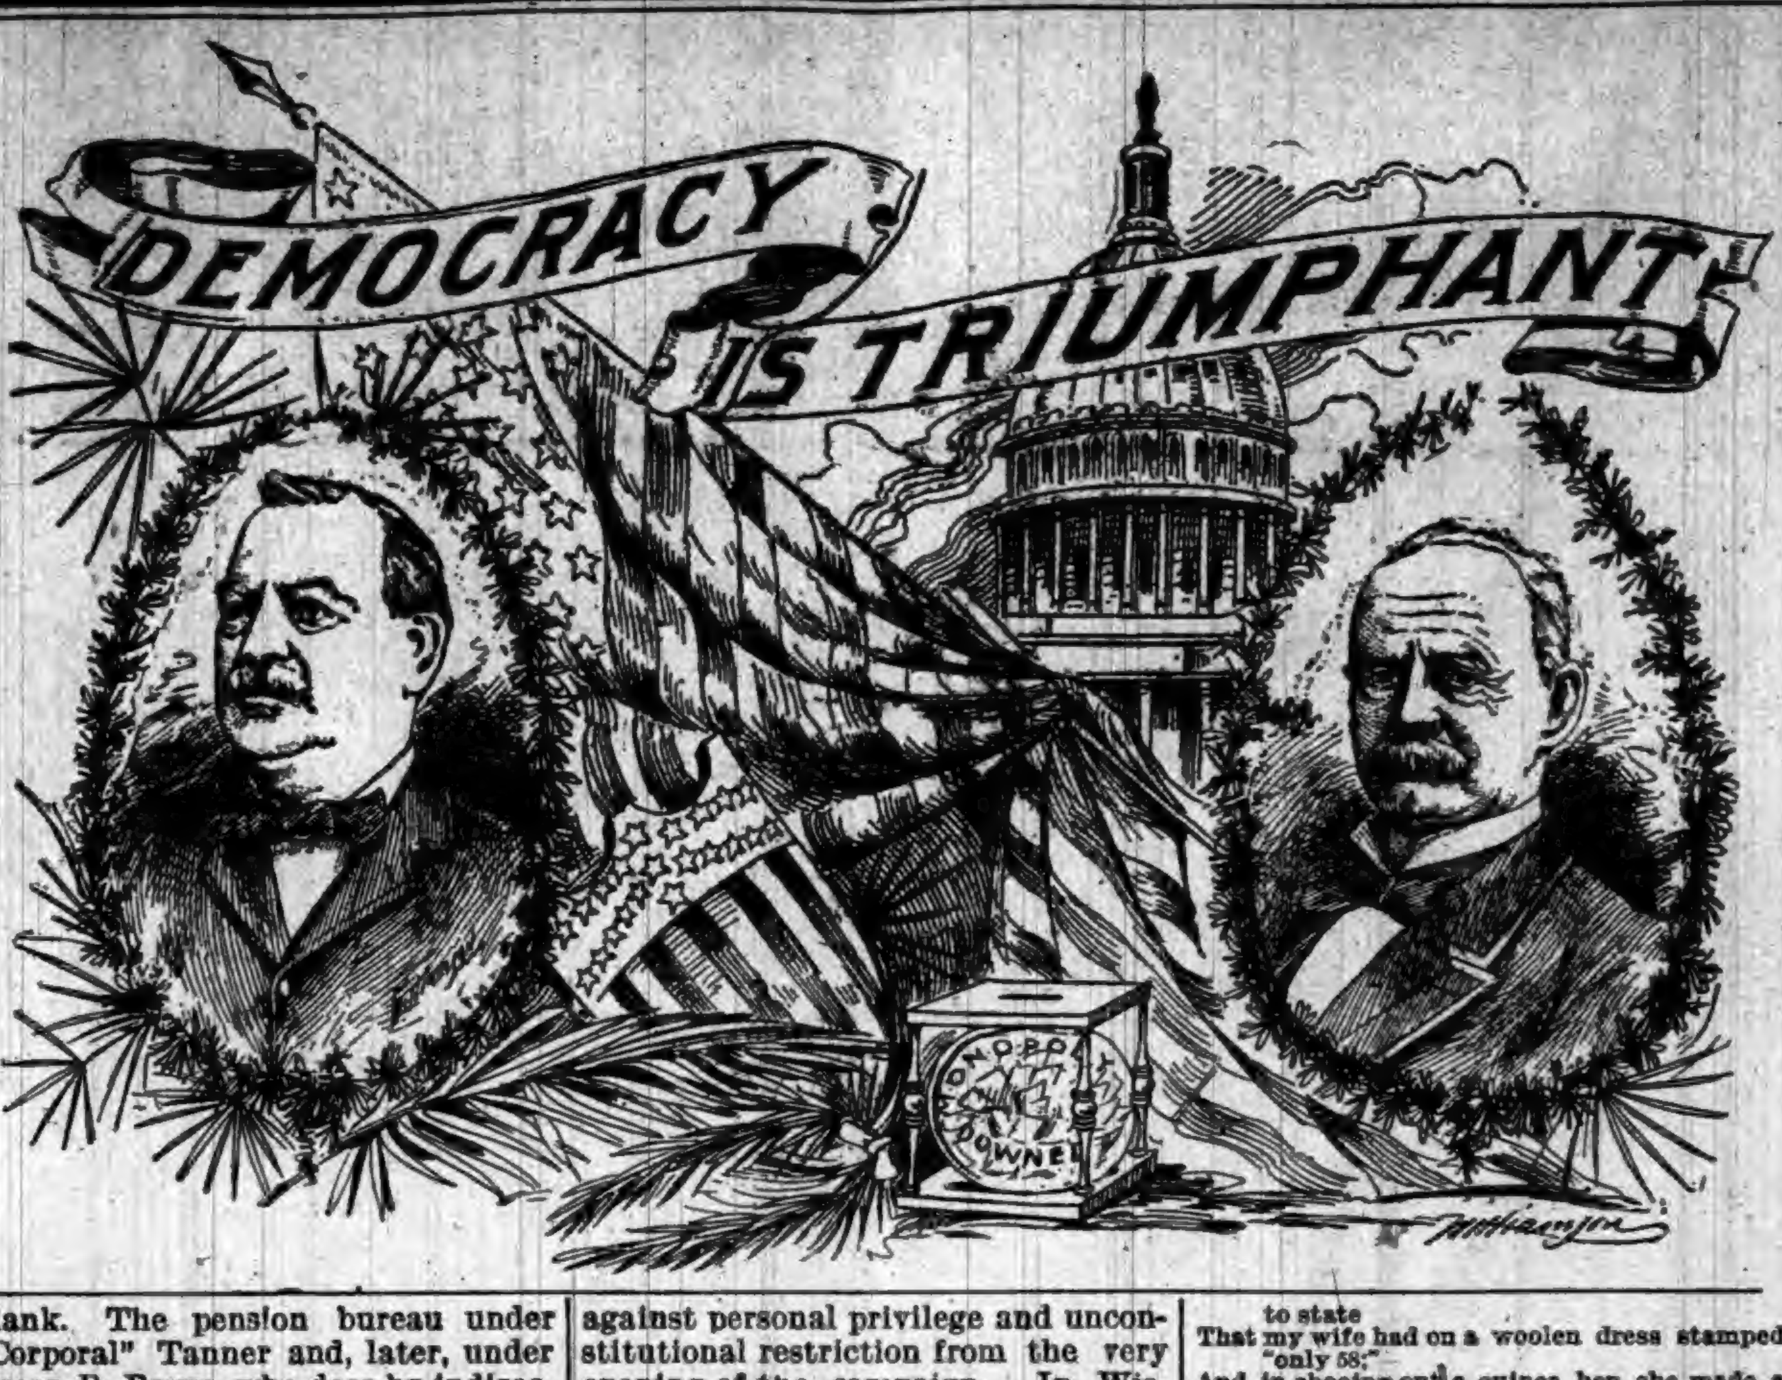
Never was the fundamental difference between the two great parties more clearly put in issue. "We denounce Republican protection as a fraud; the labor of the great majority of the American people for the benefit of the few," declared the Democrats assembled in convention at Chicago. "We declare it to be a fundamental principle of the Democratic party that the federal government has no constitutional power to impose and collect tariff duties except for the purposes of revenue only—and we demand that the collection of such taxes shall be limited to the necessities of government when honestly and economically administered."

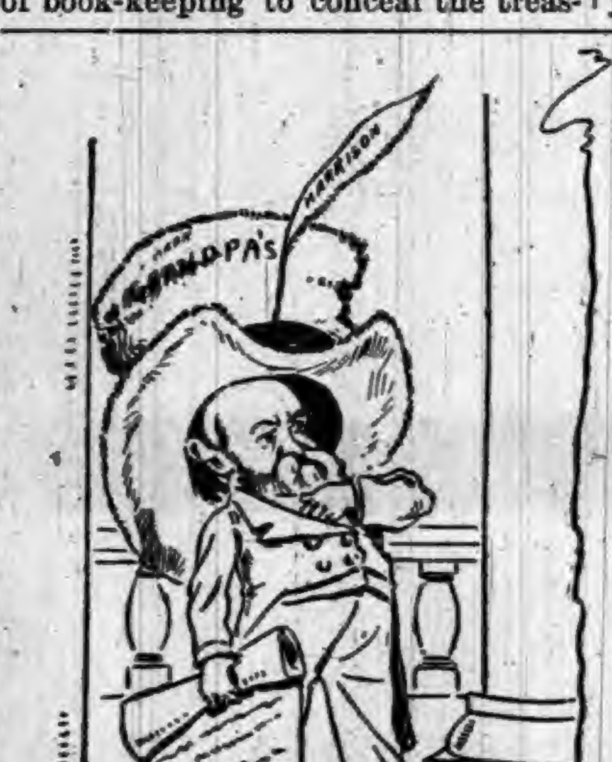
The battle was fought and won upon the issue of tariff for revenue only. The gauntlet was thrown down to McKinley, Carnegie, the champions of wealth, of vested "rights"—which are often vested wrongs. They responded by pouring money extorted from despoiled consumers and underpaid workmen into the Republican campaign fund. The three big safes in Chairman Carter's office were crammed to repletion. We of this State know something of how that gold flowed in slimy streams, corrupting whatever it touched. We have seen the procession of so-called independent newspapers, with editors destitute equally of conscience, convictions, and cash, sneak, shamefacedly, into the Republican ranks. Just for a handful of silver they left us; just for a ribbon to wear in their coats. They have the silver, we the victory.

It has been said that the campaign was dull, that there was a lack of brass band enthusiasm and marching club oratory. And the wiseacres have dolorously prophesied that this portended Democratic defeat. They know better now. The fact is that there never was a campaign in which was more thinking and less shouting. There was never a campaign in which the arts of the professional campaigner counted for so little. Notable factors these in the Democratic triumph, for the professional campaigner has been on the side of the heaviest money bags, while the men who did the thinking went to the polls with Democratic tickets in their hands.

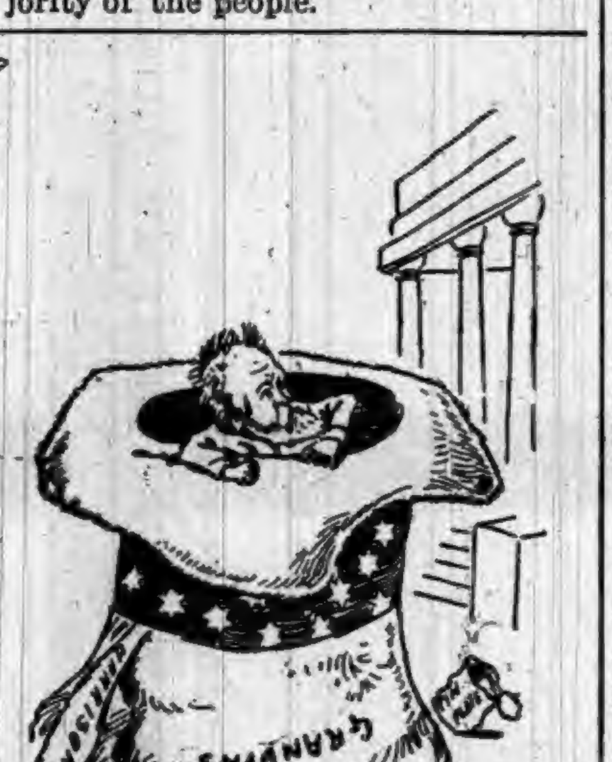
Magnitude of the Victory.

Let us not underestimate the magnitude of the victory gained nor the extent of the obstacles surmounted. "Harrison's administration," said recently an eminent man of his own political faith, "has been four years of political campaigning." He has subordinated everything to his desire for a second term. His cabinet was shrewdly formed, so as to take out of the field some of his principal rivals in his own party. How he undermined and drove into private life the most able of all Republicans, James G. Blaine, is matter of notoriety. Blaine's diplomacy was distorted to the President's glorification. Blaine's shrewd device for sugar-coating with reciprocity the unpalatable pill of McKinleyism was heralded by Harrison as his own. And when the Secretary of State withdrew from a position made a false one by the duplicity of the President the cry of "treachery" was raised by the Federal officeholders who were even then gathered like a body of paid retainers to vote for the renomination of their chief. Every executive department of the National Government has been employed for the personal ends of Harrison. The diplomatic and consular service was filled with shrewd political managers from pivotal States, who, when the campaign opened, came home to do battle like a well-drilled army for their leader. The Treasury portfolio was given first to a possible rival and, upon his sudden death, to an Ohio politician whose time has been about equally divided between political work in Ohio and devising new forms of book-keeping to conceal the treasury deficit due to McKinley and the billion-dollar Congress. The post-office was given to John Wanamaker in exchange for a $400,000 campaign fund. For his assistant Clarkson, the most unscrupulous of practical politicians, was chosen, and the heads of Democratic postmasters fell faster than a score of swift perfecting presses could have turned out copies of the Republican platform with its hypocritical civil-service reform plank. The pension bureau under "Corporal" Tanner and, later, under Green B. Raum, who does by indirection and sneakingly what Tanner did with brazen effrontery, was a mere vote-making machine for Harrison. The Navy Department served its turn when jingoism was thought to be politically profitable, and the expensive and discreditable Chilian complications were political tribute paid to him. And if the army has not been employed to serve his personal ends and further the designs of his party it is not for lack of desire. Had not the execrable an infamous force bill been beaten there would have been soldiers at every doubtful polling-place under orders of Federal officials, whose very livelihood would have been dependent upon a Republican majority. There will be no more force bills now.





BEN THE BUMPTIOUS. Sept. 5.



BEN THE DEFEATED. Nov. 9.

What It Means.

What does it mean, then, Democrats, this victory we have won? That the doctrine that the many may be taxed for the benefit of the few is finally overthrown by the stroke of the people. That this nation rejects with abhorrence the theory that bayonets at the polls are essential to—or, indeed, not fatal to—a free expression of the people's will. That the extravagance of the Republican party during the brief period when it was in uncontrolled possession of both branches of the Government, has received a second veto. That Grover Cleveland's sterling integrity and uncompromising devotion to duty have stood forth convincingly when contrasted with four years of self-seeking and partisan jugglery under Harrison. Finally that the voters of these United States have come to recognize the Republican party as the party of plutocracy, the party of privilege, the party which robs the poor to further enrich the wealthy, a party without principle or excuse for being, maintained for the profit and glorification of an army of mercenaries, living on the record of its past and having no future. The statesman to whom Republicans point first and most proudly as their greatest character, once said in homely phrase: "You can fool all the people part of the time, and you can fool part of the people all of the time, but you can't fool all the people all of the time." Thirty-two years is not an eternity, but it was a long time for so shallow a body of pretenders as the Republicans to fool even a majority of the people.

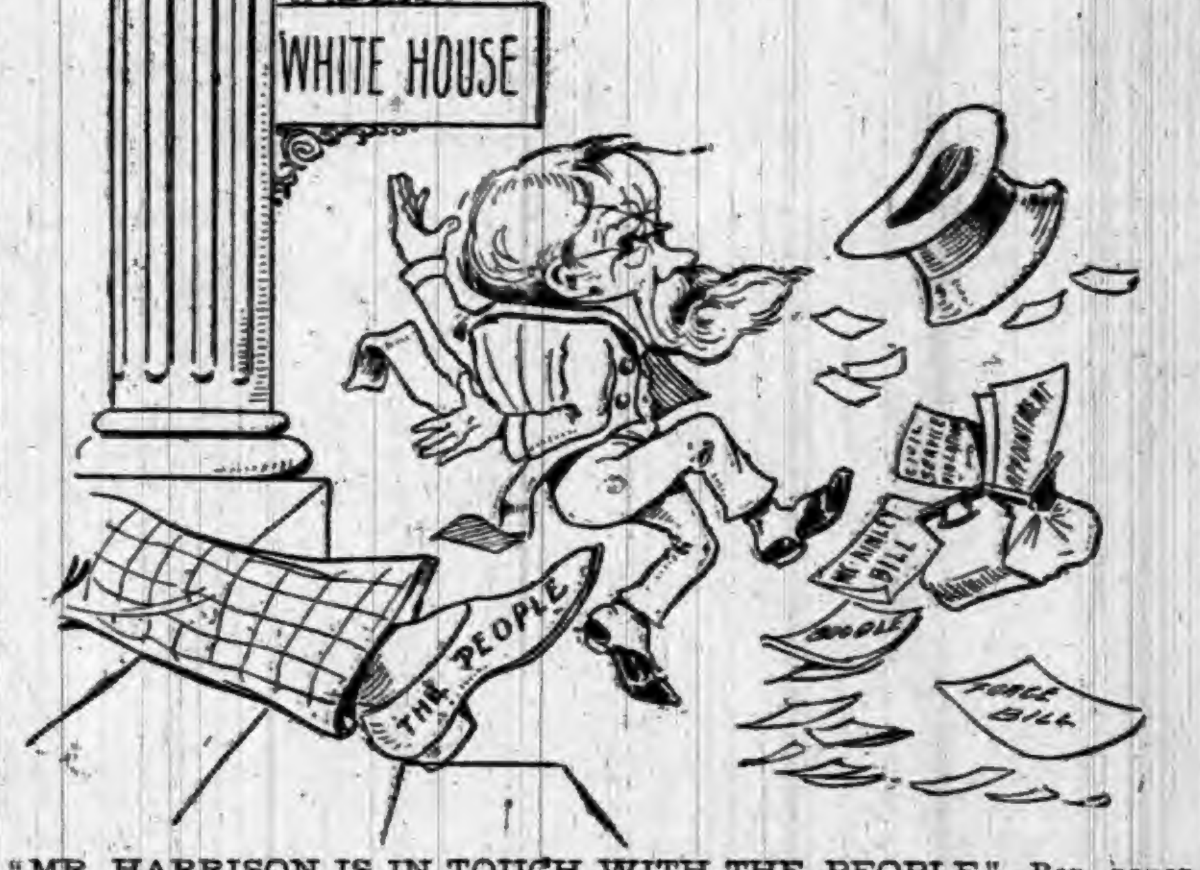
GONE OUT OF BUSINESS.

It is a victory for Democracy won by Democrats. There was no mugwump aid this time. It was won upon the merits of the parties, not through adventitious circumstances. We were aided by no blatant Burchard, crippled by no lying Murchison. Democratic principles—the creed of justice which declares that every man shall enjoy the same rights and liberties as every other man—have triumphed. It has been a battle against personal privilege and unconstitutional restriction from the very opening of the campaign. In Wisconsin and Illinois the citizens who held that they possessed an inalienable right to educate their children as they chose found a champion in the Democracy. In Kansas and Iowa all who denied the power of other beings to regulate their diet turned to the Democracy for aid. All over the face of this broad and prosperous land the sturdy citizens who hold that none should be taxed save for his own benefit, and that the purity of the ballot could better be conserved by removing the temptation to protected millionaires to debauch it rather than by hedging in the polls with Federal bayonets, saw leaders whom they might trust in Cleveland and Stevenson.



"MR. HARRISON IS IN TOUCH WITH THE PEOPLE."—Rep. paper.

The first time the Republicans attained power in this Republic they held control of the Government for twenty-four years. When next they returned to office four years of constant scandal, squandering and spoliation was enough to cause the people to rise in their might and turn the rascals out. Grover Cleveland is victorious. Democracy is triumphant, and the nation is redeemed. Noble Democrats! Glorious Democracy! Victorious Cleveland!

WHY HE VOTED DEMOCRATIC.

I was one of them "fool farmers," yes, I'll own it like a man;
There was plenty of us fashioned on the same peculiar plan;
And I've lived out here in my State more than five and twenty years;
A-growin' poorer and poorer, as it certainly appears.

I seldom read the papers—I work too hard for that—
And never knew why I got lean while other men got fat;
I didn't fool with politics, I had too much to do,
But I always voted as I shot, and as they told me to.

The day before election, just imagine my distress,
When I ketched my wife a-readin'—now, whatever would you guess?—
A free trade publication, and to make it worse she said
She'd read it regular each night before she went to bed.

And do you know that wife of mine just faced me up and down
That farmers slave to make a few monopolists in town.
I always try to get around these warm domestic spats;
But when I praised protection she laughed and answered, "Rats."

I bristled up; it kindled all the sentiments of strife
To think that this free trade stuff should be corruptin' of my wife;
I quit her then and there, before her argument was through,
As every good protectionist makes it a rule to do.

That night we had a campfire, and our Congressman was there;
We gave him "John Brown's Body" when he went to take the chair.
I wore my old blue uniform, to spite the Democrats,
But all the time I wondered what my Mary meant by "Rats."

Our Congressman was eloquent; he made a stirrin' speech;
I could almost see the battle's smoke and hear the bullets screech;
And when he bade us vote as we had shot at Malvern Hill,
We rose with one accord and cried, with one acclaim, "We will!"

We sang the good old war songs and we ate a a mass o' beans,
And we passed the evenin' pleasantly, recallin' bloody scenes;
And we took the straight-out tickets and we pinned 'em on our hats,
But all the time I wondered what my Mary meant by "Rats!"

When I reached home I noticed that my Mary wore a smile,
Which seemed to me as indicatin' storms ahead of bile;
To head her off I said, "You call me early, mother, dear,
For to-morrow will be the liveliest day free trade will have this year."

Next mornin', just at sun-up, as I woke and rubbed my eyes,
A-wonderin' what she meant by "Rats," I saw, to my surprise,
My clothes and hat and shoes, all ranged in order on the floor,
And bearin' each a card I'd swear I never saw before.

My flannel shirt displayed this sign, "Taxed 95 per cent."
My trousers, "Taxed 100"—so this is what "Rats" meant;
My vest said, "Taxed 100," and my shoes, "Taxed 25;"
My coat and hat "200," with "Protection makes us thrive."

I went to fill the basin, and I noticed as I came "Taxed 45 per cent." Great Scott! the towel said the same.
The soap was marked at "20." As I dropped it on the floor
I chanced to see a scuttle full of coal chalked "24."

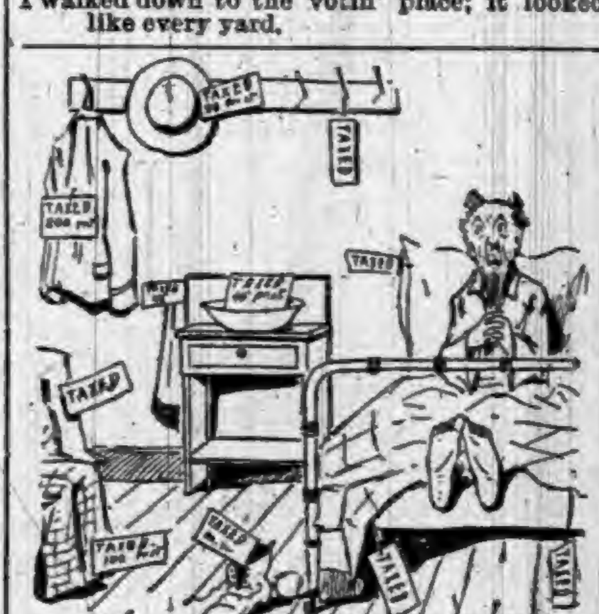
I passed into the kitchen, and it gives me pain to state
That my wife had on a woolen dress stamped "only 58;"
And in shooing out a guinea hen she made a little dive
Which showed a pair of stockings with a card marked "35."

The baby in his little bed was lying fast asleep;
I always held the little chap as most uncommon cheap;
But when I saw them cards on blanket, pillow, crib and sheet,
I felt a lump rise in my throat, I knew that I was beat.

No matter where I went I struck them pesky little signs,
The stoves, the plates, the knives, the forks, window sash and blinds,
The scissors, needles, thread, all bore that terrible per cent.;
Bigosh, I didn't dare to ask what card was on the rent.

That was the shortest meal I ever ate in all my life,
And, as I left the table, in remarkin' to my wife
That I was goin' to the polls, she helped me with my coat,
And said, "I reckon, John, I needn't tell you how to vote."

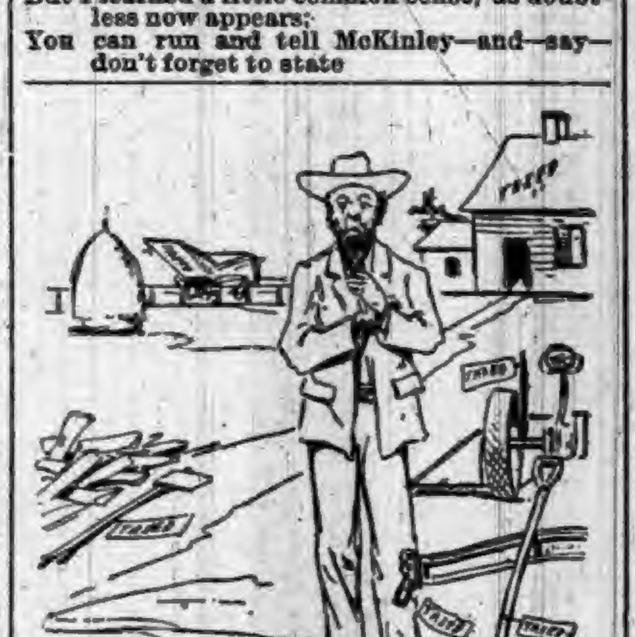
I walked down to the votin' place; it looked like every yard,



Was full of farmin' implements which bore a little card,
And seemed to say, from plow to spade, from thresher down to ax,
"Good mornin', John, and don't forgit the tariff is a tax."

I voted straight—oh, yes, no doubt of that; I straight,
But not exactly in the way expected of my State,
And I showed the boys the little cards provided by my wife;
That night our Congressman took formal leave of public life.

I was one of them "fool farmers" durin' five and twenty years,
But I learned a little common sense, as doubtless now appears;
You can run and tell McKinley—and—say—don't forget to state



That we've voted, all us farmers, and we've voted darned near straight.
—Exchange.

FORTY years ago the party of high taxes was swept out of existence by the demand of the people for a relief from excessive taxation. The lesson of 1852 has been repeated. The Republican party has passed into history as the last relic of that barbarism which taxes the people and proclaims that it is enriching them.

Verdict of the Voters.

Grover Cleveland has been elected President of the United States. He has carried New York, Indiana, Illinois, and Wisconsin, by large majorities, and at the time this is written the Democrats also claim Ohio and California, though it is probable that the official count may place these States, particularly Ohio, in the Republican column. Cleveland's vote in the electoral college, without Ohio, is 276.

Party Strength in Congress.

The complexion of the House of Representatives will be materially changed, all three parties having made important gains and losses. The returns of Congressional districts, while not absolutely complete, are sufficiently full to indicate that the Democrats will have a large majority in the House, but probably not as large as in the present one, which is divided among the parties as follows: Democrats, 235; Republicans, 88; Alliance, 9; total, 332. The next House will contain 354 members, of whom the Democrats will have, as now appears, 217, the Republicans 128, and the populists 9.

The political divisions by States are follows:

States.	Rep.	Dem.	Peo.
Alabama	..	9	..
Arkansas	..	6	..

The Senate, which is now controlled by the Republicans, will pass into the hands of the Democrats next March. The present political complexion is: Republicans, 47; Democrats, 39; Independents, 2; total, 88. The new Senate will consist of: Republicans, 39; Democrats, 44; Populists, 5. When this table is compiled, there is yet some uncertainty as to the result on Legislature in some of the States, principally as between Republicans and Populists, but there is little doubt that the above division will be substantially maintained, in which case the Populists will hold the balance of power if they choose to exercise it.

The Republicans will lose one member from Illinois, one from Nebraska, one from Nevada, one from New York, and one from Wisconsin.

TO BRACE UP the system after "La Grippe," pneumonia, fevers, and other prostrating acute diseases; to build up needed flesh and strength, and to restore health and vigor when you feel "run-down" and used-up, the best thing in the world is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It promotes all the bodily functions, rouses every organ into healthful action, purifies and enriches the blood, and through it cleanses, repairs, and invigorates the entire system.

For the most stubborn Scrofulous, Skin or Scalp Diseases, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, and kindred ailments, the "Discovery" is the only remedy that's guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, you have your money back.

Can you think of anything more convincing than the promise that is made by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy? It is this: "If we can't cure your Catarrh, we'll pay you $500 in cash."

Fresh Intelligence from Every Part of the State—Nothing of Interest to Our Readers Left Out.

Minor State Items.

RICHMOND has a new brush and broom manufacturing establishment.

WILLIAM DEERING, aged 50, was found dead in bed at Warsaw, from heart disease.

FIRE destroyed the Howland Block at Lapel. Loss, $3,000; insurance, $100, on the stock.

JOEL DAVIDSON, a well-to-do Richmond farmer, has gone crazy from campaign excitement.

CHARLES GRAVES, a young man of Corydon Junction, was run over and killed by a train.

THE Peru Electric Manufacturing Company, capital stock $100,000, has been incorporated.

JACOB NOEL, a convict in the Michigan City penitentiary, has fallen heir to an estate valued at $6,000.

JESSE CUMMINGS, son of Ellen Cummings of Terre Haute, a railroader in Iowa, was killed by the cars.

JOEL DAVIDSON, a citizen of Wayne County, is reported to have been driven insane by political excitement.

WILLIAM KORSMEYER, young farmer near Evansville, committed suicide by shooting himself with a shotgun.

THE Moore's Hill railway station looks as if it had passed through a cyclone, owing to a storm of rocks by hoodlums.

DUTCH SMITH, of Muncie, had one of his hands smashed off while coupling cars on the L. E. & W. railway at Tipton.

GARLAND E. ROSE, an old citizen and one of the leading dry goods merchants of South Bend, died as a result of brain troubles.

GEORGE BECK, a Councilman of Huntington, had a Roman candle in his pocket, when it was touched off and seriously burned his leg.

ELIZA ELLIOTT, 14 years old, was struck by an Ohio and Mississippi train at New Albany and died an hour later. The girl was very deaf.

JACKSON HORNER, of Moore's Hill, while intoxicated, took his wife buggy-riding with another man's horse, and got a sentence of two years in the penitentiary.

THE Southern Furniture Company's office, storehouse and manufacturing plant in Evansville were totally destroyed by fire. Loss $25,000; partly insured.

THE combination of Indiana gas companies, organized to fight the piping of natural gas to Chicago, will make no new moves until the decision of the Supreme Court in the injuction case now pending.

A MAN named Johnson was killed in Mine No. 3, belonging to the Brazil Block Coal Company at Coalsville. He had recently gone to that place from Clay City to work in the mine. He was instantly killed by falling slate.

MR. JOHN RINEHART, a young man aged 18, while out hunting, near Seymour, was accidentally shot and instantly killed. He is the son of one of Seymour's prominent citizens and was a young man well-liked by everybody.

BILLY LARKIN, an Anderson man, swallowed a tiny turtle in a glass of beer the other night, just to show off. Then, like the whale that couldn't stomach Jonah, he threw up his job. The turtle is well, but Billy is indisposed.

A LARGE fox-terrier dog of Neil Coleman created a panic at Elkhart by going mad. The animal ran wildly about the streets, bit eleven persons, several seriously, and also attacked a number of dogs. It was finally shot by Dr. Turner.

MRS. MARY MORRIS, a helpless paralytic, aged 67, was burned to death near Kokomo, during the temporary absence of the family. A spark from the pipe she was smoking ignited her clothing, and being powerless to help herself, she perished in the flames.

CORONER DRISCOLL of Muncie, has decided that William Moffett of Yorktown, who died a week ago, met his death from natural causes. A few days since Miss Ida Mann of Indianapolis, to whom Moffett was affianced, went to Muncie as she suspected he met his death in an unnatural way.

NEAR Batesville, while hunting William Sheor, aged 19, got on a stump and in pulling the gun up, the hammer caught, exploding the charge. The ball took effect in the groin and passed out near the spinal column. The young man lingered in great agony a few hours, when death relieved him.

A GAS well on the Storms farm, six miles west of Montpelier, that has been supplying that vicinity, commenced flowing oil the other day, and in a short time the patrons of the line were bothered with oil so much they were obliged to turn off all lights and fires, and could gather a pail of oil at any of the jets or burners in a short time. The schools at Dundee were using gas from this line, and the teachers dismissed the students because they could not control the oil that was flowing into the house.

COV. CHASE has extended executive clemency to the following convicts: Daniel West, colored, of Grant County, a "lifer," who fought with a rival named McMath, while his friend Casey slipped up in the rear and killed McMath with a blow over the head, was the first on the list. Gov. Hendricks pardoned Casey years ago; Charles Pfeiffer of Huntington county, was convicted in 1888 of manslaughter for killing W. G. Morse, his former employer, because Morse prevented him from getting work elsewhere, and also because he believed Morse slandered his wife, was also pardoned: Curlie L. Arbuckle, a bigamist, of Kokomo, dying of consumption, and brakeman Wm. F. Roberts and Joseph E. Brown, of the Pennsylvania lines, convicted of stealing a pair of shoes from the company, completed the list.

JOSEPH WAMBAUGH, proprietor of the Brighton Beach road-house, Indianapolis, was shot while hunting near New Philadelphia. Wambaugh received a load of shot from the gun of trap-shooter Cook, which was intended for a bird. The wound is not serious.

LEVI ROGERS, an old citizen, while standing on the depot platform at Pendleton, was struck in the breast with a package of Indianapolis papers thrown from a fast mail. He was knocked from the platform and picked up unconscious. Internal injuries are feared, as indicated by hemorrhage. His recovery is very doubtful.

THE house of John Lowry, near Idaville, was burned, the roof falling in on the sleeping family. Gracie, a 7-year-old daughter, was burned to death and Mr. Lowry himself and another daughter badly injured. The remains of the dead girl when recovered were horribly blackened. All the personal effects of the family, including money savings, were destroyed, leaving them entirely destitute.

A TERRIFIC natural-gas explosion occurred near Kokomo, on the Chicago pipe-line. Seven men were frightfully burned, two of whom, Charles Newell and Arthur Moon, will die. In removing a plug from the mains the escaping gas ignited, causing the explosion.

At a Trifling Expense.

"This talk about the expense of a European trip is absurd," said the returned tourist. "If a man knows how to travel comfortably without being extravagant he can make a short tour of Europe for less money than it would cost him to go to the seashore. Now, before I started, I figured the matter out and found that I could be gone five or six weeks for something like $250."

"Any man can do that."

"You can prove it by guide books, can't you?"

"Of course. How much did your trip cost you?"

"My trip?"

"Yes; your trip.

"O, well, I didn't exactly stick to the program, you know. I suppose it cost me $900 to $1,000. But I can show you how——"

"Of course, of course. Anyone can do that."—Detroit Free Press.

Ingenuity in Sign Painting.

Sign painters nowadays need not show much knowledge of drawing figures, but very much skill and experience are necessary before one can space letters properly. A poorly spaced sign is a spoiled one, and perhaps the percentage of good "spacers" would not amount to more than one in ten among sign painters.

The plain lettered sign is now most in vogue here, but it offers considerable scope for the exercise of ingenuity and taste in evolving new ideas, fine or quaint forms of lettering, proper backgrounds to the letters, appropriateness of appearance to the business advertised and what not besides.

An Icicle Suddenly Thrust Down Your Back

Would produce a sensation akin to that experienced by the unhappy individual who feels the chill which ushers in an attack of fever and ague and bilious remittent. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, in such an emergency, is what is wanted at once to scotch the enemy which seems to penetrate the very marrow of the bones, alternately freezing, roasting and deluging the sufferer with perspiration. This grand anti-febrile specific is the surest medicinal safeguard that an emigrant to the far West can take with him. Malarial complaints are rife in all regions newly cleared of timber, in mining camps and in low lying river bottoms, where the streams periodically overflow their banks. Immunity from malaria is, however, obtained from the protective agent named, which is also a remedy for indigestion, rheumatic and kidney ailments, liver complaint, constipation, and debility.

Mice Put to Work.

The Scottish American is responsible for the story that a Scotchman was watching the antics of some mice on a recent evening when an idea struck him. He decided to set the little thieves spinning yarn, and it was probably a very astonished pair of mice that found themselves a few days later working a small treadmill in a cage like those in which rats and other small animals are kept, but without the slightest idea that they were paying their board in this way. An ordinary mouse can twist over 100 threads on reels every day, although to do this he has to run ten and one-half miles.

Simply Awful

Worst Case of Scrofula the Doctors Ever Saw

Completely Cured by HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

"When I was 4 or 5 years old I had a scrofulous sore on the middle finger of my left hand, which got so bad that the doctors cut the finger off, and later took off more than half my hand. Then the sore broke out on my arm, came out on my neck and face on both sides, nearly destroying the sight of one eye, also on my right arm. Doctors said it was the Worst Case of Scrofula

they ever saw. It was simply awful! Five years ago I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. Gradually I found that the sores were beginning to heal. I kept on till I had taken ten bottles, ten dollars! Just think of what a return I got for that investment! A thousand per cent? Yes, many thousand. For the past four years I have had no sores. I

The Cholera in Russia.

The Russian authorities report that since the outbreak of cholera in the Russian cities, there have been over 160,000 cases and 77,000 deaths. This mortality of 50 per cent. of the cases is unprecedented in the annals of this scourge.

It testifies in the most striking manner as to the ignorance of the common people in combatting the malady. The Russian cities are totally destitute for the most part of any sanitation and the Russian peasantry are so ignorant, that in many cases they opposed the doctors, under the idea that they were bringing the disease. This shows in the most striking manner that cholera is the result of un-cleanliness and filth. What is true of cholera applies to a great many other contagious diseases. Diphthera especially rages in neighborhoods where there is poor sanitation, especially where there are openings in the sewer. Care should be taken by people in localities that are affected, to keep the digestive organs in the highest possible state of efficiency. To this end, people who are constipated or who suffer from indigestion, should take the Laxative Gum Drops every night before retiring. If they will do this they will escape the infection. Small boxes 10 cents, large size 25 cents.

Marine architects are interested in a discussion whether iron is not better for ship building purposes than steel. The cases of Great Britian and Great Eastern are quoted as upholding that assertion.

Specimen Cases.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with neuralgia and rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shephard, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. The New Great South American Kidney Cure.

The acknowledged superior cure and immediate relief for all derangements, painfulness and decay of the kidneys or bladder, Bright's disease, diabetes or any complaint that hurts or despoils either of these delicate organs. This new remedy has been thoroughly tested by learned physicians and found far superior to any medicine yet discovered for quickly relieving all weaknesses, aches, pains and distresses arising from disease of any part of the urinary passages. It great relief for the old, middle aged and children, male or female. It relieves at once retention and pain in passing water, and it is very effective in relieving prostatic troubles in the old, and for nightly incontinence of water in children, or others, caused by weakness of the bladder. It may be worth to many a hundred times its cost. This is a remedy of great value to ladies, because they are very liable to weakness and pain peculiar to their sex. Beware of Swindlers.

We have exposed, during the last year, many swindlers who advertise, under the name of medicine, vile compounds which only increase human suffering. To all who need a pure medicine and blood purifier, we can honestly recommend Sulphur Bitters.—Editor Sun. 3

The Duluth and Superior Special.

In full keeping with its well known progressive policy the North Western Line (Chicago & Northwestern Railway), has recently inaugurated through train service between Chicago and the Lake Superior region. This new train is known as the "Duluth and Superior Special," and it leaves Chicago daily at 5:50 p. m., arriving at Superior at 8:20 a. m. and Duluth at 8:52 a. m. the next day, making the journey in the remarkably quick time of fifteen hours. The train is made up of baggage cars, standard day coaches and palace buffet sleeping cars of the most modern and approved design, and all classes of passengers are carried through without change of cars. Supper is served in dining car after departure from Chicago, and breakfast is served from a well stocked buffet before arrival at Duluth. To insure yourself a quick and comfortable journey be sure and ask for tickets via the North Western Line. Any ticket agent can furnish full information regarding this railway or it will be promptly furnished upon application to W. A. Thrall, General Passenger and ticket agent, Chicago. 8

MRS. ELMIRA HATCH.

HEART DISEASE 20 YEARS.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

DEAR SIRS: For 20 years I was troubled with heart disease. Would frequently have falling spells and smothering at night. Had to sit up or get out of bed to breathe. Had pain in my left side and back most of the time; at last I became dropsical. I was very nervous and nearly worn out. The least excitement would cause me to faint. I was also much troubled with fluttering. For the last fifteen years I could not sleep on my left side or back until I began taking your New Heart Cure. I had not taken it very long until I felt much better, and I can now sleep on either side or back without the least discomfort. I have no pain, smothering, dropsy, no wind on stomach or other disagreeable symptoms. I am able to do all my own housework without any trouble and consider myself cured.

Elkhart, Ind., 1888. MRS. ELMIRA HATCH.

THOUSANDS

It is now four years since I have taken any medicine. Am in better health than I have been in 40 years. I honestly believe that Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure saved my life and made me a well woman. I am now 62 years of age, and am able to do a good day's work.

May 29th, 1892. MRS. ELMIRA HATCH.

Amos Rakestraw.

One by one the leaves of the forest fall. Drop by drop the waters of the river dry up, and so it is with us. The prattling babe upon its mother's breast; the youth with all his hopes and aspirations; the middle aged in all the strength and pride of his manhood; the decrepit old man, bent down by the frosts of many winters, all, all must meet, alike, the inevitable fate of death.

Amos Rakestraw was one of a family of ten children, five sons and five daughters. He was born in Clark county, Ohio, July 29, 1824. Died at his home, two miles west of Auburn, Nov. 13, 1892, aged 68 years, 4 months and 14 days. He was married Dec. 6, 1849, to Maria Mercer, of Green county, Ohio, where they resided untill the spring of 1863, when they removed to the farm where they lived until his death.

To them were born five sons and one daughter. Wm. H, born Feb. 9, '51; Samuel A., Sept.16, '52; Thomas C., Sept. 13, '55; Joanna, July 13, '58; Geo. W. May 1, '60 and Levi E. August 22, '65

William, Samuel, Thomas and Levi are married and nine grand children are the aggregate of their families.

Amos Rakestraw was a man of most exemplary habits, attending strictly to matters of his own concern. He was an earnest student with more than ordinary thinking power. In 1875 he and his wife experienced religion, under the pastorate of Rev. Edgar Crawford, and united with the U. B. church, but afterwards joined the Presbyterian church at Auburn, since which time he has been a devout and consistent follower of the meek and lowly Nazarene. Three years ago he was the victim of a partial stroke of paralysis on the left side, and last Thursday evening while reading his paper, he was taken with a second attack, which caused his death, at 10 o'clock, Sunday morning.

The strength of the majestic oak is unknown until tested by the tempest and the storm.

Mr. Rakestraw, by his strength of purpose and his integrity, his habits of industry and frugality had accumulated a very sufficient amount of the perishable goods of earth to insure him against the possibility of want or dependence in his declining years. And now, guided by the star of hope, we may hope that the faith which he had in the future has been realized, and that he has passed in safety, the portals, and is now in that city on high, whose gates are hung with hinges of gold and streets are paved with the richest jasper.

There were brief services at the home Tuesday forenoon, and the funeral was at the Presbyterian church, in Auburn, Rev. Mr. Healy officiating. The interment was at Woodlawn.

Columbus Day.

The Columbus celebration at District No. 2, Jackson township passed off pleasantly and was a success in every respect. The flag was raised by the G. A. R's. The entertainment given in connection with the raising of the flag, was opened by an address by J. J. Walters in language which was pointed and appropriate, giving a brief history of the discovery of America. The recitations by the pupils were numerous and well rendered doing great credit to themselves and teacher. At the close of the exercises two trees were planted by the school. The school room was beautifully decorated with flags. The teacher James Farver, deserves much credit for the pains he had taken to make the day an enjoyable one to both scholars and visitors. ONE WHO WAS THERE.

ALFRED TENNYSON.

[From Harper's Young People.]

Somewhere in the second decade of this century a little boy was left at home one rainy Sunday while his elders went to church. He, with some of his brothers and sisters, was on a visit to his grandfather, the vicar of Louth, in England, and accustomed to the familiar pursuits of his own home in Somersby, he felt restless, and appealed to his older brother for occupation. It was suggested the child should write on his slate some verses, and the brother selected as a "subject" the flowers in the garden, which, though drenched with rain, were rich in bloom and foliage.

The little lad sat down and wrote away. When the family returned, he had filled his slate with verses, which, it is a pity, were not preserved, since their author was the late Poet Laureate of England, Alfred Tennyson.

"You can write," was the brother's verdict; and his grandfater, on giving him ten shillings for an elegy on his grandmother, remarked: "This is the first money you have ever earned by your poetry, and, take my word, it will be the last."—a very unfortunate prophecy.

Dedication.

A Remarkable Discovery.

A remarkable discovery is one of the chronic proclamations of advertisers. Cubeb Cough Cure is not such, it is an established remedy with known merit, made on scientific principles by experienced and able chemists. It affords instant relief, and is called the one minute remedy, for it stops coughing at once, does not cure but gives temporary relief to consumptives, and absolutely cures all other affections of the throat, lungs, etc. For croup, whooping cough and colds of children Cubeb Cough Cure is valuable. Don't get Imposed Upon.

Is a good motto to follow in buying a medicine as well as in everything else. By the universal satisfaction it has given and by the many remarkable cures it has accomplished, Dullam's Great German blood, liver, stomach and kidney cure has proven itself unequaled for building up and cleansing your system and for all diseases arising from impure blood. Do not experiment with an unheard of or untried article which you are told is as good, but be sure to get Dullam's. All druggists keep it. $1 a bottle. For sale by Casebeer & Matheny.

A Wonderful Statement.

Proprietors of Dullam's Great German Remedies. Gentlemen:—I have for the past two years been troubled with a serious and very severe liver and stomach difficulty. Have had advice and medicine from our very best physicians and only to be temporarily relieved. Some of my friends persuaded me to try your Great German remedy for the blood, stomach and kidneys and to my surprise after using three bottles I feel like a new man. If you desire you can use my name in print or by reference in any of the Grand Rapids, Mich., papers, or any other papers in the states, to convince the afflicted that it is the best blood, liver and kidney medicine on earth. I feel like a new man. Have lived here over 40 years. $1 a bottle.

What is

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

An Open Letter.

TO THE PUBLIC.—

Only a short time now remains until CHRISTMAS, and naturally you begin to think about what you are going to buy for presents. In addition to a general line of every-day hardware, we have a large assortment of goods that would make good and useful presents; and the prices——?!!? Well, they will be so low as to astonish you.

An attempt to tell you all, or to describe the many things which we will offer you, would be futile; hence, we ask you to call and see for yourselves. No trouble to show goods and give prices. We might mention a few things. Will offer a line of Novelties, ranging in price from 10 cents to 25 cents, each, pair or set. In Silverware, we just "beat 'em all."

We can't do justice to the subject, so will not attempt any further desdription, but again asking you to call and see for yourselves, assuring you of rare bargains, and thanking you all for past patronage and endeavoring by fair dealing to merit a continuance of the same, We remain,

Yours very truly,

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of Its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

1866.

One day in the year of 1866, an aged man was seen making a tour of our streets looking in vain for old landmarks obliterated during his absence of nearly twenty years. He met few whom he knew or who remembered him and he seemed to appeal for sympathy as he stopped, looked about him and in his former home found himself a stranger.

In returning to this spot he had to re establish himself from the beginning precisely as though he had never known it, or it him. There were representations of families he had known, but they were all unknown to him. Time had not condescended to wait his pleasure nor local life, his greeting. The figure was seen a few days and then disappeared. He had come to pass here his remaining days, but he could not reconcile his surroundings. He went away and has never returned.

The changes to him so perplexing had to residents transpired so silently, so gradually that they had passed almost unnoticed and without a shock, and this unconscious acquiescence in time's mutations is a natural law which accustomns humanity to losses otherwise irreconcilable.

Auburn was not in 1866 the healthy place it has in time become. The sanitary improvement has kept pace with its expansion of area, increase of population and accumulating trade and manufacture. The creek bottom heavily flooded then as now, but the receding waters left debris in stagnant pools to rot and evaporate under fervid summer heat till the cool evening breeze that came with sunset, was freighted with noxious miasma, the frightful germs of fever and ague that still held periodical and merciless sway.

Physicians were numerous, but as sickness decreased, one by one went elsewere; some returned for brief periods and again departed, others have come and remained. Of these are J. H. Ford, J. B. Casebeer and D. J. Swarts, who have long been friends in need when we were weak, sick and suffered pain. Age and neglect of the rules of health ever result in infirmity and death and there is no calling stands above medicine and surgery. How we depend upon the doctors when life and death tremble in the balance and how they have oftimes to trust us when they have tided us over our crisis!

Independence of the public and convenience for self were illustrated in the monopoly of street and sidewalk ground for use of grazing, woodpiles, wagons and in one instance an exteasion of a rail fence augmented the area plowed for garden products. Logs encumbered the streets adjacent to the public square east of the court house and the proprietor of the saw-mill seemed indifferent to the convenience of the public and the appearance of the town.

On the other hand, shade trees were being set out in front of residences throughout the place, guarded, but not always effectually by boxing, against the riotous attacks of the commoner cows. This interest was extended to the grounds of the public square on which Wyllys Griswold set out evergreens and shade trees to the extent of a town appropriation of $25, which moneys are seen to have been well expended and are a lasting monuments of Mr. Griswold's public spirit.

Bills allowed by the town board were largely for lumber and for labor in constructing sidewalks. The town's employes at the time were James Johnson, John Moore and Samuel Poffenberger, the latter a son of the sheriff of an early day. Again, under pressure, the swine ordinance interfered with their freedom of the town and advancing a step, horses were brought under ban and restrained from running at large. A broad and substantial walk, at the instance of the school trustees, was built by Father Watt from Main street along Twelfth street to the Academy grounds, greatly to the convenience of the troops of children converging and diverging to and from the schools.

The woolen factory fairly at work was doing a prosperous business and had in operation seven looms, three sets of cards and two hundred and twenty spindles. O. S. Hare was building the comfortable dwelling still occupied by his daughter, Mrs. Sadie Yesbera; U. E Babb, the popular artist was putting up a neat residence; vacant lots were being occupied and several were improving and modernizing their homes. The Ralston building, next south of the Swineford house, was built in 1866, by our old neighbor, Francis Picker, than whom there were few better brick layers before he had the misfortune to lose a hand. The old gentleman has seen his children practicing their father's trade in Auburn and elsewhere with credit and profit to themselves. George, the oldest boy since moved west where industry, plenty of work and good wages have made him practically independent, and Charles has been town marshal and is regarded as a reliable and capable brickmason. Many of our townpeople could take at least a partial lesson from the neatness about the Picker premises.

In the line of business, Messrs Elson & Jennings were still engaged in the grocery trade as also was. A. Robbins. Philip Fluke was operating his tannery. Robert B. Showers was a licensed auctioneer, Henry Wartenslaben combined painting, glazing and clock repairing. W. H. Dills was in the real estate business and contributed political articles to the local newspaper. John Lobmiller competed with Christopher C. Shafer for patronage in furniture and undertaking. James W. Case in partnership with W. H. McIntosh had brought from the east a small stock of goods and entered upon a good trade and George Kessler and Dr. J. B. Casebeer under the firm name of Kessler & Casebeer had an extensive practice dissolved at last when the former went elsewhere.

TWO OF A KIND.

Showing the Anguish of Messrs. Dana and Reid.

[Town Topics.]

SCENE: A cold wave, with Whitelaw Reid and Charles Antipathy Dana floating about in a skiff.

Whitelaw—I hope I shall not shock you, Charlie, if I say damns in a very loud voice.

Charlie—Not only will you not shock me, Whitey, old pal, but I will join you you in your damn.

Whitelaw—'Twas a terrible blizzard, Charlie.

Charlie—Whew! I don't think the icicles will ever melt out of my whiskers Say, Whitey, how in the name of Ben Butler did it all happen?

Whitelaw—Ask me an easier one. I can't speak. I feel as though Cleveland had sat on my palate.

Charlie—Whitey, I've about made up my mind that Cleveland is a bigger man than I gave him the credit of being.

Whitelaw—I think he is, Charlie.

Charlie—He gets votes; ye gods! How that man does get votes.

Whitelaw—And they don't cost him a dollar. Holy father-in-law! how that Cleveland can get free votes.

Charlie—If it is not a leading question, Whitey, for how much did your little vice-presidential escapade let your father-in law in?

Whitelaw—I havn't the figures, but when the returns are all in he'll be lucky if his bank account is'nt short a couple hundred thou

Charlie—That is a goodly sum to blow in a hole, Whitey.

Whitelaw—D. O. says it's a h—ll of a sum.

Charlie—Well, I did all I could to beat Cleveland.

Whitelaw—You did, Charlie. There can be no two opinions about that.

Charlie—I did everything to draw the attention of the people away from the tariff question. I gave 'em the Force bill till they couldn't rest, and never mentioned the tariff. Who'd have thought they were giving me the laugh all the time?

Whitelaw—To be sure—who'd have thought it? Ah, Charlie when those returns came in wasn't it a terrble swipe?

Charlie—In the neck, Whitey, straight in the neck.

Whitelaw—First, New York. He went to the Harlem with a hundred thousand majority, Charlie.

Charlie—And where were the hay seeds and jays then? Snowed under.

Whitelaw—And then Indiana, Benjy's own state, Charlie. Grover raked Indiana.

Charlie—Excuse these frozen tears I weep whenever I think of Indiana.

Whitelaw—But Illinois followed. Whisper it gently, Charlie, for fear the news might kill me. Illinois went democratic.

Charlie—Take me where I can get crape to put on my hat. In spite of me and my daily Force bill Illinois voted for Cleveland.

Whitelaw—Bail out the boat, Charlie. Our grief is sinking us.

Charlie—It's a fearful grind on me, Whitey. I would rather have the Rev. Tom Dixon elected President than Grover Cleveland. I never hated Grant or Henry Ward Beecher as I hate that man, And I thought we could beat him hands down.

Whitelaw—I regarded it as a cinch. I had the tip straight. All that was needed was boodle. And we had that till we couldn't breathe.

Charlie—My friend, Andrew Carnegie, must have cold feet about this time.

Whitelaw—Yes, and Tom Dolan, of Philadelphia. Carter twisted Dolan three times in succession. It's tough, Charlie, when we put down our stuff in such wads, to have a man like Grover Cleveland walk in and do us up without even having to buy drinks for the crowd.

Charlie—There's no sort of justice in it.

Whitelaw—Let us go away somewhere, Charlie, and drown our grief in the flowing bowl.

Charlie—I think I will put a funnel in my mouth and employ a man to pour old bourbon into it untill I drop dead.

Whitelaw—I do not feel that there is any room on earth for me now.

Charlie—Well, I feel that I am crowding people myself.

Whitelaw—A hundred thousand majority to the Harlem, Charlie.

Charlie—And Indiana!

Whitelaw—And Illinois!

Charlie—It's the worst case of razoo on record.

Whitelaw—Charlie, we are not in it.

Charlie—Whitey, if you had been as correct in your political predictions as you are in the last remark you'd have been a wonder.

Whitelaw—I must go home and get a fresh supply of pocket handkerchiefs.

Charlie—Well, you bail the boat for a while, will you? I've got a fresh cry coming on.

Whitelaw—So have I. The thought of Illinois kills me.

Charlie—Well, lets weep over the side of the boat together.

Whitelaw—Good idea. Indiana!

Charlie—A hundred thousand to the Harlem!

Whitelaw—And it never cost him a cent.

They shed tears for six hours, and as the sun sinks into the west their skiff floats around a bend and sails gracefully up Salt River.

Lost Ballots.

(Lagrange Standard.)

It will be of interest to voters, and it is hoped useful in guarding against such blunders in the future, to know how many lost their votes at the late election by blunders in voting. To ascertain this we have looked over the election papers on file in the clerk's office, and find under the head of "state ballots which it is impossible to determine elector's choice of candidates," these entries:

Bloomfield, No. 1 precinct—1 ballot not stamped; 1 ballot stamped twice.

Greenfield, E.—1 improperly stamped.

Clay, S.—1 not stamped.

Lima, N.—2 not stamped.

Johnson, N.—1 stamped twice.

Johnson, S.—1 not stamped; 1 stamped twice in square; 2 stamped in large square and small squares; 1 blotted by stamp in folding; 1 marked from stamp in large square.

Milford, N.—1 ballot with four stamps in large square

Clay, S.—1 not stamped.

Vanburen, W.—1, two stamps on emblem; 1 improperly stamped; 1 nine stamps on emblem; 1 mutilated on emblem; 1 mutilated by folding.

Bloomfield, 2.—2 stamped twice.

Springfield, N.—1, distinguishing mark on big square.

Bloomfield, 4.—1 not stamped.

Vanburen, E.—1 stamped on all the emblems; 1 stamped three times; 1 stamped between eagle and rooster.

Greenfield, W.—1 not stamped; 1 defective.

Here are 30 presidential and state ballots thrown out because of blunders of the voters.

BOILED DOWN FOR OUR INTELLIGENT READERS.

Dreadful Explosion in a Coal Mine in West Virginia—Peary Going to the North Pole—Hearse Horses Run Away—A Runaway Train.

KILLED IN A MINE.

Dreadful Story of Death and Disaster.

A fearful powder explosion occurred at the Blarch coal mine, located at the west end of Collers, W. Va. Twenty-five kegs of powder exploded, causing the instant death of three miners and the serious wounding of eight others, three of whom will probably die.

The explosion occurred as the men were returning from dinner, which was providential, for had it occurred ten minutes later, the destruction of life would in all probability have been something awful. The force of the explosion was awful, the ground being shaken as though by an earthquake. The force of the explosion is shown by the distance some of the men were blown. Wesley Anderson's body was thrown through the air a distance of over 100 yards. It is supposed that the explosion was caused by a piece of fuse which became lighted in some manner and conveyed the fatal spark to the boxes in which the powder cans were kept.

The scene at the mouth of the mine, following the explosion, was one of great excitement. The entire population gathered and the women, supposing at first that more of the men were in the mine than really were, begged that rescuers to go down the shaft. It would have been death, however, to have gone in before the air had cleared.

That some of those who were in the mine were not suffocated to death is due to the presence of mind of James Clark and James Borden, who got the outside door of the shaft, which had blown from its hinges, and replaced it. The mine belongs to H. C. Smith of New Cumberland, W. Va., and William Smith and John McNutt of Wellsville. About fifty men are employed in the mine, which has been in operation since May, 1891.

A Runaway Train.

Hartly (Iowa) special: The conductor of a Milwaukee frieght left his way car and fifteen box cars on top of the grade near here while the crew and engine came in to switch. The wind blew the cars over the hill and they dashed down the grade at terrific speed. Near Everly they struck a freight train, the engine crew of which jumped and escaped. There was a terrific collision. Five men in the way car of the runaway were hurt. Doly Stevenson was killed and his brother James fatally injured. The wreck took fire and was totally destroyed.

Hearse Horses Run Away.

While the body of Joshua Summers was being taken into the cemetery for interment, at Brown City, Mich., the horses attached to the hearse became frightened and ran away. The horses and hearse were thrown into a ditch, the casket thrown through the glass window, and the corpse fell out of the coffin and was badly mutilated by the vehicle rolling over it. The horses attached to the carriage following the hearse also became frightened, ran away, and the occupants, a son and daughter of the dead man, were badly injured.

Bishop Hughes Left for Dead.

Shanghai (China) special: In revenge of Bishop Hughes' attempt to get redress for a former outrage, a horde of fanatics in Ngantinghsien dragged him through a public street, and, after stoneing him, left him, as they supposed, dead. The local officials took no steps to punish the ringleaders.

Peary Going to the North Pole.

Civil Engineer Peary, of the Navy, will be allowed to make his second trip toward the North Pole. The Secretary of the Navy has signed the order granting to Mr. Peary the three years' leave of absence which was asked for him by the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Science.

Counterfeiting.

Acting Secretary Spaulding has issued a circular letter warning all persons against the importation of counterfeit coins and reciting the penalties the law imposes for its violation. Such coin cannot even be given away, except under the risk of a fine of $500.

Should Paupers Vote?

Charles Royster, who was a Republican challenger at the recent election, at Indianapolis, was arrested on ten grand jury indictments charging him with perjury in making affidavite against voters from the poor asylum. He was sent to jail in default of $10,000 bail.

Eight Murderers Will Live Longer.

Annapolis (Md.) special: The Governor has postponed the execution of the eight murderers of Dr. Hill, who were to have been hanged in Chestertown during Christmas week, until January 13.

Murder at Bellaire, Ohio.

Lemuel Piersoll was found murdered in his little house, ten miles south of Bellaire, Ohio, on the Ohio River. The murderers shot him in his bed, killing him instantly. They robbed him of $3,900.

A Catholic League Talked of.

During the papal jubilee, at Rome, an international Catholic conference will be held for the purpose of establishing a universal Catholic league.

A Southern Press Association Founded.

Atlanta (Ga.) special: The Southern Press Association was organized in this city after a two days' meeting of editors of the morning dailies in ten Southern States. The capital stock of the company is $30,000, 50 per cent. of which was subscribed under a charter unanimously adopted. The following directors were elected: E. P. Howell, Atlanta Constitution; J. C. Hemphill, Charleston News and Courier; J. H. Estell, Savannah News; F. P. O'Brien, Birmingham Age Herald; Adolph Ochs, Chattanooga Times; Page M. Baker, New Orleans Times-Democrat; George Nicholson, New Orleans Picayune; T. T. Stockton, Florida Times-Union. Evan P. Howell was elected President; F. P. O'Brien, Vice President; F. Glass, Secretary; S. Patrick Walsh, Treasurer. The annual meetings of the association were fixed for the first Tuesday after the 15th of November of each year, at such place as may be selected by the Executive Committee.

FRIGHTFUL!

An Arkansas Town Is Wiped Out.

Little Rock (Ark.) special: A terrific cyclone, destroying life and property, passed through the southern portion of Boone County. So far as known the storm began on Gaither Mountain and became violent the moment it descended to the lowlands. Property of every description was destroyed that happened to be in the 200 yards path. The cyclone moved in an easterly and northeasterly direction. Houses, trees, fences—everything movable collapsed and was annihilated. Horror was added to the situation by the heavy downpour of rain, which drowned herds of stock.

The following people are known to have been killed: Willian Eastons, Mrs. William Eastons, Easton's three children, Joseph Wagley.

The wounded are: Henry Addephell, Mrs. Henry Addephell, William Daniels, B. Eaton, Smith Hill, Mrs. Smith Hill, Mrs. Henry Spain, Spain's three children, John Walkers, Edward Walkers. One man died of absolute fright and in another instant a woman who was sitting in her house nursing a sick child, was picked up bodily by the wind and deposited in the yard sixty yards away. Neither mother nor child was hurt in the least.

GRAND ARMY MEN.

Meeting of the Council of Administration at Indianapolis.

The following gentlemen composing the Executive Committee of the new council of administration of the Grand Army of the Republic, held their first meeting in Indianapolis recently:

Commander-in-Chief Weissert, of Milwaukee; E B. Gray, Adjutant General, Milwaukee; J. N. Taylor, Quartermaster General, Philadelphia; L. R. Raymond, Hampton, Iowa; H. I. Dieterich, Chicago; A. P. Burchfield, Pittsburgh; Jonathan McKelshay, Louisville; R. H. Cochran, Toledo; H. C. Luther, Providence, and W. H. Armstrong, Indianapolis.

The work was confined to routine arrangements for the next national encampment to be held in Indianapolis. The week begining on September 3, was fixed upon. The parade will be given Tuesday, September 5, and a line of march was selected for it. The first business session will be held September 5.

Deadly Mortars.

The Demoratic jollification at Ellenboro, W. Va., wound up with a terrible accident in which Fred Jonas was instantly killed and Frank Miner had a leg blown off. Jonas and Miner had been firing mortars and two of the mortars were lighted at the same time, neither of them going off when expected. Jonas ran to one of them and stooped over, when it went off, discharging its contents into his body. Miner ran up hurriedly, and in his excitement placed his foot on another mortar, when that exploded tearing off his right leg. Jonas was killed instantly, a hole two inches in diameter in his chest laying bare his heart. Miner's leg was amputated and he was sent home.

Have the Poachers Gone?

The United States revenue steamer Corwin, Capt. Hooper, has arrived at San Francisco after eight months in the Bering sea and Arctic waters. She left the Adams and the Bear at Ounalaska on November 10, and reports all well on board of both vessels. The Bear encountered heavy weather around the seal islands. She lost an anchor and sixty fathoms of chain. Neither vessel saw any sign of seal poachers. The mail steamer Eisle, supposed to have been lost in the heavy storms, reached Ounalaska November 6. She broke her crank twice, which caused the delay.

The Presbyterians.

Thirteen Presbyterian clergymen and laymen of a committee of sixteen, three of whom are unavoidably absent, selected by the last Presbyterian general assembly, have begun, at the Virginia hotel, Chicago, a conference, the object of which is to formulate a plan to secure a more direct relationship between the theological seminaries of the Presbyterian Church and the Presbyterian pulpits. The committee may be in session a week or more as the subject to be discussed is as delicate as it is important. The members of the committee are holding meetings behind closed doors.

Soldiers' Graves Desecrated.

A cowardly outrage was perpetrated by unkown vandals, who desecrated the graves of sixteen union soldiers buried in the cemetery at Clayton, Ind., by painting the gravestones and the flags placed on them by the G. A. R. with red paint. Only a few soldiers' graves were left unmarked, and these were so located that they could not be found. Citizens' graves were not molested. This deed has aroused the indignation of the people there, and the trespassers will be severely dealt with. Every effort will be made to arrest them.

A Bank Swindler.

Hamilton (Ont.) special: During the past few months the Bank of Hamilton has been swindled out of between $40,000 and $50,000 by means of forgeries, one of the culprits being C. H. Davidson, of the nursery firm of C. H. Davidson & Co., of Burlington, who, after committing the crime, left the country. Government Detective Murray was given charge of the case and learned that Davidson was in Mexico. Murray started in pursuit and a dispatch has just been received announcing the arrest of the forger.

May Get Together.

Another movement is on foot to unite the Prohibition and the People's parties. A committee representing both organizations in Chicago called upon Senator Peffer at the Grand Pacific to ascertain his views on the subject. The outcome of the conference was the authorizing of Dr. Taylor, chairman of the Cook County Prohibition Club, to issue a circular to ascertain the feeling of the two parties concerning the calling of a convention during the World's Fair, with the ultimate object of union.

What Does it Mean?

The Rothschilds will send another one million five hundred thousand pounds in gold to Russia next week. Half of this amount has already been purchased and it is expected that the remainder will be secured without having resources to the Bank of England. The Russian policy of hoarding gold, which has been going on for some time, causes considerable anxiety in political as well as financial quarters and is believed to presage some aggressive and warlike action on the part of that nation.

United States Cattle in Canada.

Montreal special: Agitation is proposed to be started here shortly over the admission of United States cattle into Canada. If the Government grants such permission, it is probable that dead meat factories will be established, and next summer will also see United States cattle being exported to the old country, via Montreal. Circulars will soon be sent out to the leading stock raisers of the country asking their advice regarding the introduction of United States cattle into Canada.

A Cavalry Captain Killed.

Captain John G. Burke of the Third United States Cavalry, who became noted recently for his activity in running down the Garza revolutionists, was shot and killed in the United States Court at San Antonio, Tex., by Paul Friche, a United States Deputy Marshal. Bourke was testifying in the investigation that is in progress for the violation of the neutrality laws in the Garza uprising. A portion of his evidence angered Friche, who shot the officer dead before any one could interfere.

Bank Robbery.

Woodstock (Minn.) special: Two masked men entered the bank of Woodstock, Minn., demanding of Casher Perry and Assistant Craig that they open the vault. One took Perry in charge while the other forced Craig to enter the vault. The robber then helped himself to whatever he wanted. The burglars escaped with $1,000 and failed to leave their address. Several parties have gone in pursuit of them.

Hurricane at Baltimore.

Baltimore special: A hurricane of unusual violence swept up the Chesapeake Bay, and played havoc with the buildings along the water fronts, and with the vessels moored therein. The wind reached a velocity of almost sixty miles an hour. The harbor was well filled with vessels of every class, and a great deal of damage was done to them. A number of vessels were blown from their moorings and came into collision.

The Great Homestead Strike at an End.

A special from Homestead, dated the 21st inst., says: At a meeting of the Homestead strikers to-day it was decided to declare the great strike at an end, and permission was given the men to apply to the Homestead works for employment. It is believed that at least 2,000 men will be unable to secure work. The leaders of the strike are being bitterly denounced to-night by the unfortunate men.

The Base Ball League.

Base ball will not be played in divided championship series by the National League next year. The season will open the last Thursday in April and close the last Saturday in September. During this period each team will be scheduled to play 132 games. The league decided this important point at the meeting in Chicago and then adjourned to meet in New York March 7.

A Rich Strike.

Truro (N. S.) special: Great excitement prevails here in consequence of a big discovery of gold at the Caribou mines, worked by the Truro Gold Mining Company, about thirty miles from here. The present discovery surpasses anything yet discovered in Nova Scotia and is expected to turn out the biggest and richest gold mine ever opened in Canada.

Chicago's Loss on Its Water.

The first estimate of the amount lost by Chicago through the irregularities in the water office has been made at $500,000 for the year 1892 alone. The books, according to expert accountant Holbrook, are in a condition of hopeless demorlization, owing to the erasures and lack of system on the part of the clerks.

Laid in Ruins.

The village of Fredonia, Tenn., was almost entirely destroyed by a windstorm. A number of dwellings and a livery stable were blown away. How many people were made homeless or the amount of damage done can not now be learned, but they will be large.

Business Troubles Cause Suicide.

W. S. Dennis, of the firm of Dennis Brothers, of Chambersburg, Ill., who had made an assignment, commited suicide by shooting himself twice through the head. He was aged 35 years and leaves a wife and family.

Fell Dead.

R. M. Long, a prominent resident of Delaware County, Ohio, while weighing poultry at a farm-house near Dover, fell dead from heart trouble. He was 61 years old and leaves three sons and two daughters, all grown.

Quay Indorsed for Senator.

The Republican members of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives of Philadelphia, held a meeting and adopted resolutions indorsing Hon. M. S. Quay as a candidate for re-election by the State Legislature.

Gone Wrong.

H. G. Wilson, for nineteen years Secretary and Superintendent of the waterworks at Bellaire, Ohio, is short in his accounts and has absconded. The amount is about $3,400. Dissipation was the cause.

Blown From the Track.

A passenger train on the South Park Railway was near Kenosha, Col., blown from the track by a heavy wind and toppled over an embankment. Eleven people were hurt, but it is thought none fatally.

Gilmore's Band Disbands.

Gilmore's celebrated band, after playing an engagement at Cincinnati, concluded to disband, as they have been playing to a loosing business since the death of their leader.

FOR A NEW STANDARD.

OBJECT OF THE MONETARY CONFERENCE.

To Discuss Ways and Means of Securing an Enlarged Use of Silver—Movement Initiated by the United States—All Leading Nations Co-operating.

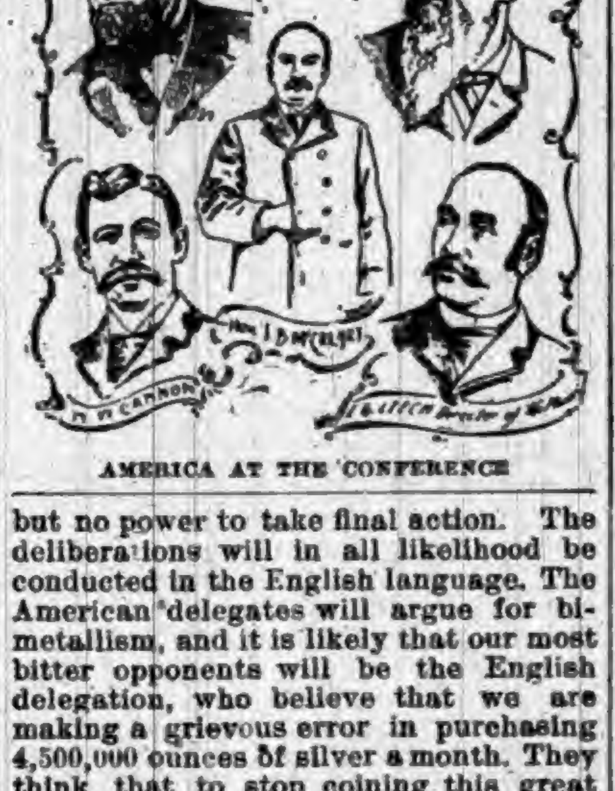
Silver the Issue.

The International Monetary Conference, which has begun at Brussels, Belgium, will doubtless be the most important gathering of recent years so far as its effects upon the fiscal policies of the world are concerned. It will be of especial consequence to the interests of the United States, for this is the chief silver-producing nation of the world, and upon the results of the conference will depend in a large measure the material prosperity of several States of the Union, whose chief wealth consists in their mines of argentiferous ores.

The conference was first proposed by the Congress of the United States, and after consultation with representatives of the leading foreign powers its details were formulated and delegates appointed. These consist, on the part of the United States, of ex-Comptroller of the Currency Henry W. Cannon, Senator William B. Allison, of Iowa; Senator John P. Jones, of Nevada; President E. Benjamin Andrews, of Brown University; Congressman McCreary of Kentucky; and Edward O. Leech, Director of the Mint. These delegates represent fairly all the views of Americans on the subject of silver coinage. Senator Allison takes a middle view on the question. Senator Jones is confessedly a radical free-coinage man. Dr. Andrews has written an interesting volume on "The Gold Dollar," and his views are almost radically against free silver. Director Leech believes that there is too much silver in the market, and Congressman McCreary is inclined to side with Senator Jones, although by no means as radical on the subject.

Duties of the Members.

The duties of the delegates have been clearly defined by the act authorizing the conference and also by the Secretary of the Treasury. They have authority simply to discuss and propose, but no power to take final action. The deliberations will in all likelihood be conducted in the English language. The American delegates will argue for bimetallism, and it is likely that our most bitter opponents will be the English delegation, who believe that we are making a grievous error in purchasing 4,500,000 ounces of silver a month. They think that to stop coining this great mass of silver dollars monthly would drive more bullion abroad, and in that way favorably affect the silver market.



AMERICA AT THE CONFERENCE

No proposition looking to an indorsement of free coinage of silver will probably be submitted by any of the American representatives.

Importance of the Conference.

The conference will have the co-operation of all the leading nations. It is likely to be far more important than any monetary conference of recent years. The conference held at Paris during the Exposition of 1888 was not vested with any authority and was productive of no results. A conference was held at Washington last year of the Pan-American countries, but it related merely to devising methods for securing a common coin, and its work was fruitless, because the scheme was impracticable. The present conference will represent every shade of national views. There will be England and Germany, which are upon a gold basis, and Austria, which is passing through the conditions necessary to bring it to the same basis, silver having been demonetized. France and the other countries of the Latin Union, which maintain a parity between the two metals while limiting the silver coinage, will be fully represented. India, which is suffering financial convulsions because of its silver basis, will have its own representatives, although Great Britain will dictate its policy. Mexico, which is on a purely silver basis and has a large direct trade with Europe, may help in solving the problem.

Many suggestions have been made for the guidance of the conference. The one which has been most discussed among financial authorities is the proposition of Dr. Seytbooer, the eminent Austrian publicist. He has suggested an agreement by which the countries taking part in the conference should limit silver coinage to certain small coins, none to exceed in value the twenty franc piece. It is stated that while silver could not thus be placed on a parity with gold, it might be maintained at a ratio of about twenty to one. The actual commercial ratio is now about twenty-four to one. The coinage ratio in the United States is sixteen to one, in the Latin Union and most European countries fifteen and a half to one, and in India fifteen to one. Dr. Seytbooer's plan is declared by those who have studied it to be too intricate to meet with general adoption. The whole aim of the Brussels conference will be directed toward practical measures, without seeking to revolutionize the existing relations of gold and silver, which could only be done by universal remonetization.

The Foreign Delegates.

The delegates from other countries as far as announced are as follows:

Great Britain—Sir William Houldsworth, M. P., for Northwest Manchester; Bertram Curne, partner in the bank of Messrs. Glynn, Mills, Curne & Co.; Sir Charles Freemantle, K. C. B., Deputy Governor of the Mint.

Government of India—General Richard Strachey, G. P. S., formerly member of the Indian Council; Sir Guilford L. Molesworth, K. C. I. E.

France—M. Tirard, formerly Minister of Finance and President of Council; M. L. de Liron, high official in the Department of Finance; M. de Faville, high official in the Department of Finance.

Switzerland—Messrs. Cramer, Frey and Lardy, Minister at Paris.

RICH FOR ONE DAY ONLY.

Messenger Bagley Takes $100,000 from the United States Express Company.

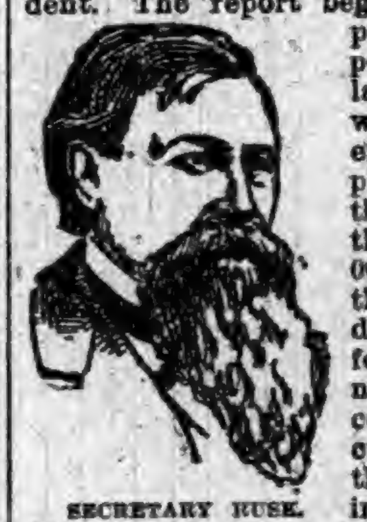
George J. Bagley, a messenger for the United States Express Company, appropriated a package containing $100,000 in paper currency, which had been placed in his care in Omaha Thursday night to be delivered in Chicago Friday morning. Just twenty-four hours after the money had been missed the thieving messenger was arrested in Chicago by Detectives Weaver and Plunkett, of the Central Station, by a brilliant coup. And within forty-eight hours after the disappearance of the cash $99,990 of it was locked up in the safe of the United States Express Company in Chicago. Bagley obtained the money by a brilliantly laid scheme, but once in his possession the weight of the currency was too much for his discretion and he completely lost his head. In fact, he was "scared to death," to use his own words. And his actions subsequently do not belie them.

Bagley began work for the United States Express Company over twelve years ago as a station agent at Davenport, Iowa. By years of service there he became a trusted man, and a year ago last January he was promoted to the position of express messenger and given a run from Chicago to Omaha on the fast train that runs over the Chicago and Rock Island road from Chicago to Denver. This is one of the most important runs in the service, and up to the present time nothing has ever taken place to shake the company's confidence in Bagley.

UNCLE JERRY'S REPORT.

Work of the Agricultural Department Reviewed by Rusk.

The report of the Secretary of Agriculture has been submitted to the President. The report begins with a comparison of the export trade of the last fiscal year with that of former years, and emphasizes the fact that of the more than $1,000,000,000, representing the exports of our domestic products for the last year, nearly 80 per cent. consisted of agricultural products, this not only making the United States the creditor of the world for a sum exceeding $200,000,000—the excess of our exports over imports—but relieving our home markets from a surplus product which would otherwise have reduced prices to a point below the cost of production. For a large share in bringing about the conditions which have made these gratifying results possible the Secretary claims credit for his department.



SECRETARY RUSK.

In regard to imports he finds encouragement for the farmers in the fact that in spite of an aggregate increase there is a reduction in the proportion of imports consisting of products which compete with our American agriculture, for, while in the fiscal year ended in 1889 54 per cent. of the imports were competing, only 44 per cent. of our imports for the last fiscal year did so compete. He nevertheless regards imports competing with the products of our own soil as still far too great. He instances $40,000,000 worth of animal products, $67,000,000 worth of fibers, $27,000,000 worth of hides, $30,000,000 worth of fruits and wines, as articles of this kinds, and cites the imports of raw silk, amounting to $25,000,000 yearly, as an instance of products imported which could with proper encouragement be produced in our own country. He declares these figures to indicate the main ultimate object of the work of the department, which he defines, in brief, as "the closest study of all markets abroad which may be reached by our own agricultural products, accompanied by persistent and intelligent efforts to extend them and the substitution in our markets of home-grown for foreign-grown products."

LABOR LOSES ITS FIGHT.

The Great Strike at Carnegie's Homestead Mills Declared Off.

The great strike at Carnegie's Homestead steel works has been declared off. After a five months' struggle, which for bitterness has probably never been equaled in this country, the army of strikers finally decided to give up the fight. This action was taken at a meeting of the lodges of the Amalgamated Association at Homestead, the vote standing 101 in favor of declaring the strike off and 91 against it. Among those present at the meeting were Vice President Carney, Secretary Kilgallon, Treasurer Madden, and David Lynch of the Advisory Board.

The officials addressed the members, and in plain words told them the strike was lost, and advised them to take steps to better their condition. The remarks met with considerable opposition, but when the vote was taken it showed a majority of ten in favor of declaring the strike off. Those who were in favor of calling the strike off were jubilant, while those who were against it were badly put out.

The Homestead strike has proved one of the most disastrous in the history of the country. It originated from a reduction in wages in the department where members of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers were employed. The hitch was on what is known as the sliding scale. It is a scale which regulates the men's wages by the market price of steel billets. Nearly every mill in this vicinity signed the scale, including other mills of the Carnegie Company. At the refusal of the firm to sign the scale for the Homestead mill, a lockout was declared by the Amalgamated Association, and they were joined by the mechanics and laborers, who struck out of sympathy only, their wages not being reduced. The strikers were determined to keep non-union men out of the mill and adopted military discipline. The story of the arrival and bloody fight with the Pinkertons July 6, the subsequent riotous proceedings, and the calling out of the National Guard, and its departure after three months' duty, is too well known to repeat. For six weeks the mill has been running almost as well as before the strike, but until within the last week the strikers have steadfastly refused to admit defeat.

Punch and Judy.

It would surprise a good many persons, probably, to hear that "Punch and Judy" is a Chinese institution, but there seems to be good ground for the supposition, according to a correspondent of a London paper, who says:

"A few years ago I witnessed at a garden party given by the general then commanding the troops in Hong Kong the exhibition of a Chinese 'Punch and Judy,' which had been brought down from Canton. The general arrangements were precisely the same as those of an English 'Punch and Judy,' the only difference being that instead of the dog Toby there was a wooden figure with clapping jaws, supposed to represent a dragon. The costumes were Chinese, and the piece varied in some respects from that which we see in England, but all the characteristic features were the same. The lesser mandarins were duly knocked over by the big mandarin, with just the same satisfactory whack as that with which Punch disposes of Judy and Jack Ketch, and all the accessories of voices, pipes, and scenery corresponded to those of the English performance."

The correspondent asks Professor Max Muller and the Congress of Orientalists to decide the nice question whether the Chinese or the Europeans are the plagiarists.

THE cat of the postmaster of Danville, Ind., rings the bell when she wants to enter the house.

DEED OF A DEMONIAC.

A CHICAGO LUNATIC'S MURDEROUS WORK.

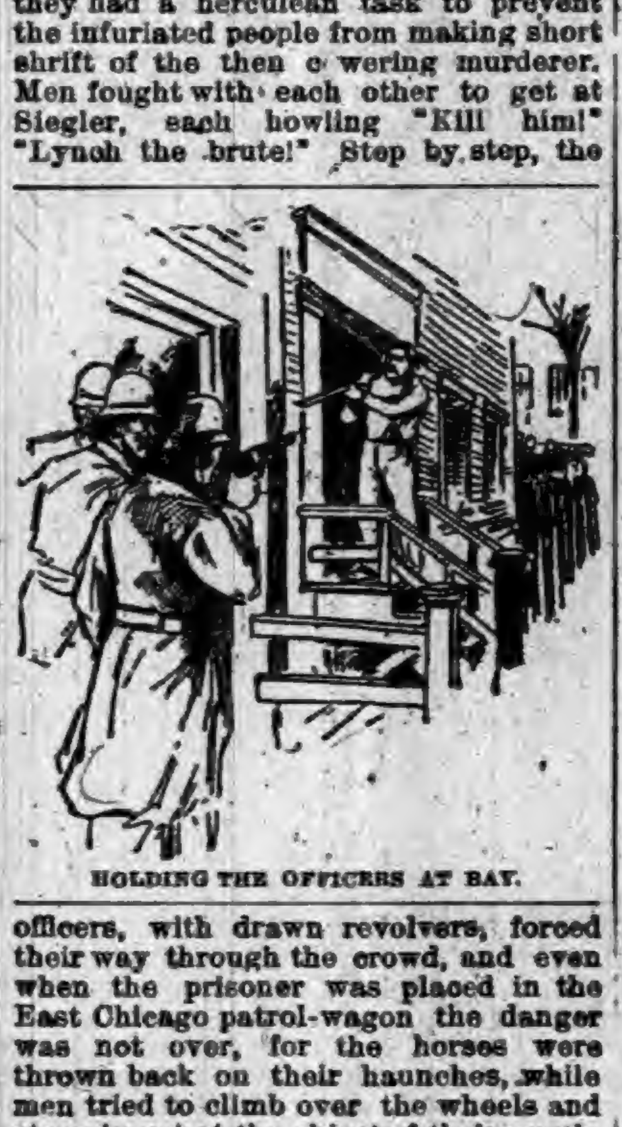
Herman Seigler Kills His Wife's Parents, Wounds Her as Well as a Policeman and Is Checked Only by a Bullet from an Officer's Revolver.

Victims of a Madman.

Herman Siegler, a cabinet maker, living at No. 723 North Paulina street, Chicago, got up early the other morning, went to his brother's house and borrowed a shotgun on the pretext that he wanted to go hunting, returned home, shot and killed his father and mother-in-law, seriously wounded his wife, and filled a policeman's nose full of buckshot, he in return getting a bullet in his abdomen from another officer's revolver.

His work of death was done mainly in the house in which he lived, but after policemen were summoned the battle waged between him from the house and the officers from the street. He emptied a double-barreled shotgun at them a dozen times and bullets from their revolvers flew in his direction as rapidly as fingers could pull the triggers.

Thousands of people attracted by the fusillade swarmed around the house, and when Officer Dan McCarthy finally grappled with and overcame the murderer, they fairly howled for his blood. Some one started the cry, "lynch him!" and it was taken up by excited men and women. Although four patrol-wagon loads of officers were on the ground, they had a herculean task to prevent the infuriated people from making short shrift of the then cowering murderer. Men fought with each other to get at Siegler, each howling "Kill him!" "Lynch the brute!" Step by step, the officers, with drawn revolvers, forced their way through the crowd, and even when the prisoner was placed in the East Chicago patrol-wagon the danger was not over, for the horses were thrown back on their haunches, while men tried to climb over the wheels and steps to get at the object of their wrath. He was finally removed in safety to the East Chicago Avenue Police Station and subsequently to the County Hospital.



HOLDING THE OFFICERS AT BAY.

The result of the morning's bloody work was:

Dead.

Henry Siles, 66 years old, No. 723 North Paulina street; shot in face, arms, and body.

Mrs. Caroline Siles, 70 years old, No. 723 North Paulina street; shot in breast.

Wounded.

Bertha Guthman, 8 years old, No. 245 West North avenue; shot in left hand by scattering shot.

Jeremiah O'Donoghue, police officer; shot in face and neck; not seriously.

Herman Siegler, 37 years old, No. 723 North Paulina street; shot in abdomen: may recover.

Mrs. Herman Siegler, 30 years old, No. 723 North Paulina street; shot in face and neck; will recover.

Siegler's Statement.

Siegler made the following statement: "About 8:30 o'clock this morning I went to my brother William Siegler's house, 893 North Hoyne avenue, to get a gun, as I was told by our Lord God up above to go and get a gun. I was born to realize this country. The Lord said to me, to-day is the day of Judgment, and you have got to be there. I brought the gun home and put it in the clothes closet, and after awhile I took it out. Then my mother-in-law came down stairs. She is a witch. She said to me: 'You have got to die, and I will not go where you want to send me,' and I shot her in the hall. The old man came down-stairs and I was confused, and I fired at the old man and shot him. I then came out on the steps and the patrol wagons came. Then I was dumfounded. I have been sick and been feeling bad for some time." It is strongly believed that Siegler is insane.

IF YOU CAN READ

and write, and are possessed of fair intelligence, you are fully qualified to make a grand success of what we offer you. We have lately published at great expense and labor a perfect wonder in the way of an illustrated Gift Book, suitable to all classes, an ornament to any home, and at a price that brings it within the reach of all, even those of moderate means. Heretofore only those who indulged in luxuries have felt that they could afford a book of this class, as they are sold in book stores at $5.00 and upwards. The book which we offer is not in any way inferior to those above referred to, but is far superior to hundreds of books of this nature that are sold at prices exceeding ours by an enormous per cent. It is selling with a rush wherever shown. Agents have only to show the book and mention the price, and it sells on its merits without further talking. No better Christmas, New Year's or Birthday present can be selected. It will sell, not only for holiday trade, but at all seasons of the year, for the reason that all will want it in their homes, and will have it as soon as they know the low price at which our agents can furnish them. Reader if you need profitable employment, and a business in which you can and will take pride, as well as make money rapidly do not fail to send for circulars containing private terms to agents and full information which will be sent FREE upon application. Old and new agents alike are making handsome salaries—yes, fortunes. Many of those who are making the best records are new at the agency business, having had no previous experience. Make a start—the field is entirely new. No such terms have been offered agents as we now offer on this wonderful book. Special qualifications not necessary, for it sells everywhere at sight. Perhaps you have at some time been unsuccessful at the agency business. If so, there is every reason why you should try this, the PRINCE of gift books, as failure is impossible if you make A START. Write us to-day, study our circulars and directions, then order an outfit and go to work with push and energy. You may make the greatest mistake of your life, if you allow this GOLDEN opportunity to pass unimproved.

MAJOR PENDALLAS.

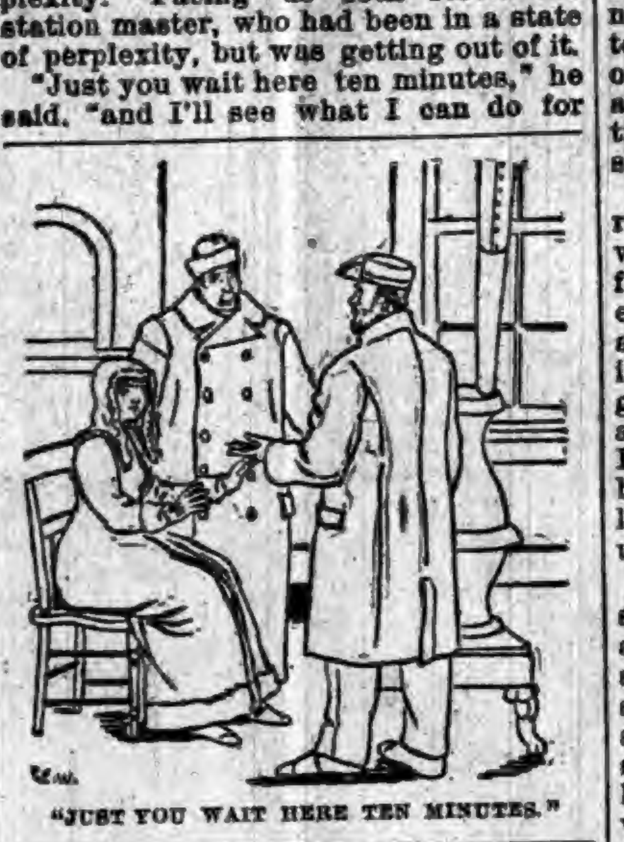
A Christmas Love Story.

BY FRANK R. STOCKTON.

CHAPTER I.

On the 24th of December, 1880, I was standing in a little country railroad station, in a state of perplexity. Near me, sitting in a chair by the stove, was a young lady, also in a state of perplexity. Facing us both stood the station master, who had been in a state of perplexity, but was getting out of it.

"Just you wait here ten minutes," he said, "and I'll see what I can do for you," and putting on a fur cap and an ulster, he went out of doors.



"JUST YOU WAIT HERE TEN MINUTES."

The state of the case was this: Miss Weldon, the lady by the stove, was on her way to join a Christmas party at the house of her uncle, Mr. Dolliver, some seven miles from the station, and I, invited to the same house, had been delighted to meet her on the train. We were good friends, and had studied art together in Paris. When we left the city in a morning train, a little snow was beginning to fall, and as we journeyed northward we found the snowfall heavier and heavier, and we had arrived at this little village of Boynton at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, an hour behind time.

From Boynton to the Dolliver house we were to go by stage coach, but the driver had left more than an hour previous, hurrying away before his ordinary time for starting for fear the road would be blocked up before he could get to his home, a good twelve miles away, and assuring himself that there would be no passengers for him on such a day.

It was reasonable enough that we should be perplexed, for we could not see, nor at first could the station master see, how we were to get to our journey's end that day. If we could wait until next day, he told us, the stage driver would be back in a sleigh. He said he would be sure to come—for Christmas packages, if not for passengers. But we could not wait until next day. It would be better to return to the city in the next down train, if, happily one should come. We could not hope that the Dollivers would send for us, for if they saw the stage pass without stopping, they would be sure we had not come by the train.

The station master was a good man and did his best to get us out of our trouble. He had doubts about another train coming down that day—it was a country road with one track—and he thought it would be a great pity if the Dollivers should be deprived of the company of two of their Christmas guests; a lot of them had come up the day before. Nobody in the village made a business of hiring out vehicles or carrying passengers, but an idea had struck the station master, and he had gone out to see what he could do with it.

In about a quarter of an hour he returned.

"Well, sir," he said, "there is just one thing you can do. There isn't anybody in this village who will go to Dolliver's to-day, for there is no chance of getting back to-night, but the man who keeps the store here, Mr. Peter Chase, has got a horse and sleigh, and if you choose to hire that of him and do your own driving, I think you can get it, if you are willing to pay him something extra, for he'll have to send a man over to-morrow with the stage driver to bring it back, and besides, in rough times like these, people always charge something extra."

I put the matter before Miss Weldon, and she did not hesitate to say that rather than take the risk of being obliged to remain in the village, where there were no accommodations for strangers, she would take the risk of letting me drive her to the Dolliver's.

"It is only seven miles," she said, "and if the horse is good enough, I don't see what there is to happen."

I tramped through the snow to Peter Chase's store, and quickly arranged with him for the hire of his horse and sleigh.

"Five dollars may seem a good deal, sir," he said, "for a trip like that, but this is a pretty deep snow, and we all ought to remember that Christmas comes but once a year. I'll have the sleigh around at the station in ten minutes."

In half an hour a little sleigh, drawn by a big brown horse, came up to the station.

"I would have been here sooner," said Mr. Chase, "but it was a good while before I could find the bells, and I knowed you wouldn't want to take a Christmas sleigh ride without bells."

I did not complain of the delay, although I had been getting dreadfully impatient. The station master had had a telegram from up the line, stating that a down train with a snow plow was on its way, and I was very much afraid that Miss Weldon would conclude to wait and take this train back to the city. So, without loss of time, we bundled in. The Christmas-minded Mr. Chase had brought two heavy fur robes, our valises were packed in behind, the sleigh being of the box variety, and we were ready.

"There is no mistaking the way," said Mr. Chase. "You go straight ahead until you come to the house."

"Which I know perfectly well," added Miss Weldon, and away we jingled.

The snow was still falling, but we did not mind that, and now that we had started off, I was glad that Mr. Chase had waited to find the bells. Their merry jingle suited my spirits well. A jolly sleigh ride with Clara Weldon was more enjoyment than I had counted on for this Christmas.

A young man and a young woman, both of lively disposition, good friends, fellow-workers, and nothing more, are much more likely to have a merry time in a case like this than if they were a pair of lovers, or even if one of them were a lover. True love implies a certain seriousness, and is not infrequently conducive to demureness.

The snow was deep on the road and sometimes drifted, but the sleigh went through it well enough. The horse, however, probably not a very good traveler on the best of roads, made but slow progress. But although he was an animal of deliberate action, possessing, as Miss Weldon thought, an æsthetic turn of mind, which made him object to destroy the virgin smoothness of the snow with his great hoofs, he was strong, and that was the main point. With reason to believe that we should safely reach our journey's end, it did not trouble me that we were making that journey slowly, and my companion appeared to be of my way of thinking. The beauty of the snow-decorated forests, fields, and hills was enough to make our artist hearts satisfied, even if the horse should decline to do more than walk.

It began to grow dark, and we had not reached the hospitable mansion to which we were bound, but there was a beautiful weirdness in the snow scenes, softened by the dusky light, and our hearts and the bells were still merry. But as it grew darker and darker we both began to wish that we stood in the light and the warmth of the Dolliver house. I whipped the horse, who made a few bounds through the snow and then relapsed into his former trot. It was no use to try to hurry him.

Several times Miss Weldon had assured me that she was not in the least anxious, and that she was sure we should now reach the house in a very short time. I think she was about to say something of the kind again, when suddenly she exclaimed in a voice that had a ring of hearty cheerfulness in it, very different from her previous expressions of thoughtful encouragement:

"Here it is. Didn't I tell you? We are at the very gate."

Sure enough, there was the gate with a lamp on one of the posts, and there in the midst of its whitened grounds was the house, its windows lighted and a lamp on the piazza.

When I pulled up to the door, I attempted to bound from the sleigh, but my bound was a poor one, for I found that my legs were somewhat stiffened by the cold. As I helped Miss Weldon to alight, I could perceive that she was not nearly so active as I had generally known her. The door opened before we had time to reach it, and an elderly woman, with a Christmas look about her, which was absolutely warming, stood in the broad portals.

We stopped on the piazza before entering, stamping and shaking ourselves, for we were two figures of snow.

"Our valises are in the back of the sleigh," I said, and, to my surprise, my teeth chattered a little as I spoke. "I think the horse will stand until some one takes him."

We then went in. Suddenly Miss Weldon stopped and looked from right to left, and, turning to the good woman, she exclaimed:

"This is not Dr. Dolliver's house?"

"Of course not," said the other; "did you think it was? Major Pendallas lives here."

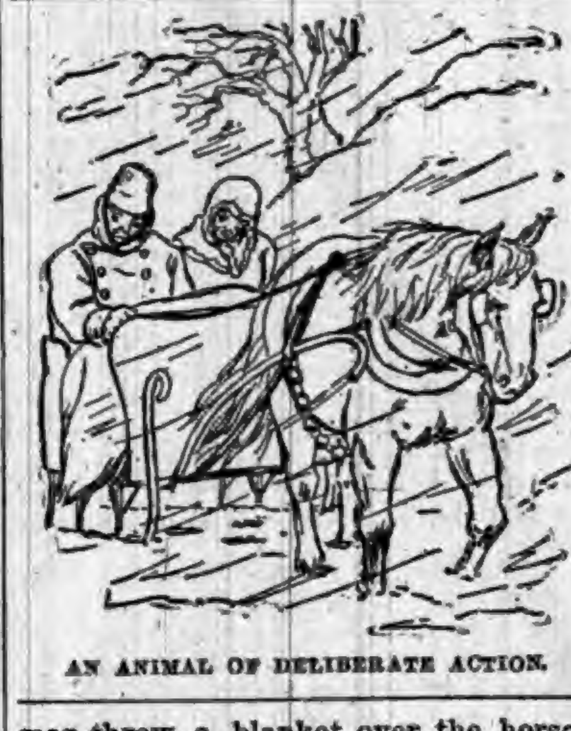
"Miss Weldon and I looked at each other in dismay.

"We have made a mistake," I said. "How much further on is it to the Dolliver place?"

"It isn't farther on at all," the woman replied; "it is not on this road at all."

"It is too bad," I said. "They told us at Boynton it was a straight road, and we could not miss it."

"So it is; but three miles below here there is a fork that anybody might mistake, especially at night, with the roads unbroken. But come in and get warm; you must be half frozen. I'll have a man throw a blanket over the horse," and with this she showed us into a large room with a wood fire blazing on the hearth. She pushed two chairs before the fire.



AN ANIMAL OF DELIBERATE ACTION.

"Sit down," she said, "and get a little warm. If I am not mistaken this is Miss Clara Weldon. Yes, I thought so. It's been a long time since I have seen you. I am Mrs. Bardsley. I keep house for Major Pendallas. Excuse me for a moment."

"What a grand thing this fire is," said I, "and who is Major Pendallas?"

"I never saw him in my life," said Miss Weldon, following my example and drawing up close to the fire, "but I have often heard of him. He used to be in the army, I think, and now he has a stock farm and has all sorts of fine horses and cows. I wonder if he would be willing to send us over to my uncle's? I can't bear to think of starting out again in that sleigh, and with that horse."

I was glad she did not include the driver in her objections, and said I hoped that the Major would be able to do something for us. But at the time I did not give much thought to the subject, for my whole soul was occupied in reveling in the genial heat. I had had no idea that I was so cold.

In about five minutes the door opened and a tall, broad-shouldered man, wearing a heavy pea-jacket, and an unmistakable air of being the master of the house, entered the room. He was middle-aged, had side whiskers and bright blue eyes. We both rose, and with outstretched hand he greeted Miss Weldon.

"Delighted to see you," he said in a hearty tone. "Mrs. Bardsley tells me you have lost your way, but that doesn't matter. I'll make that all right."

Then he turned toward me, and Miss Weldon introduced me.

"Ashmead?" he repeated, as he grasped my hand.

"Yes," I replied. "Henry G. Ashmead."

As I spoke he gave me a quick look, and seemed about to say something in reference to my name, but he checked himself, and urged us to sit down again.

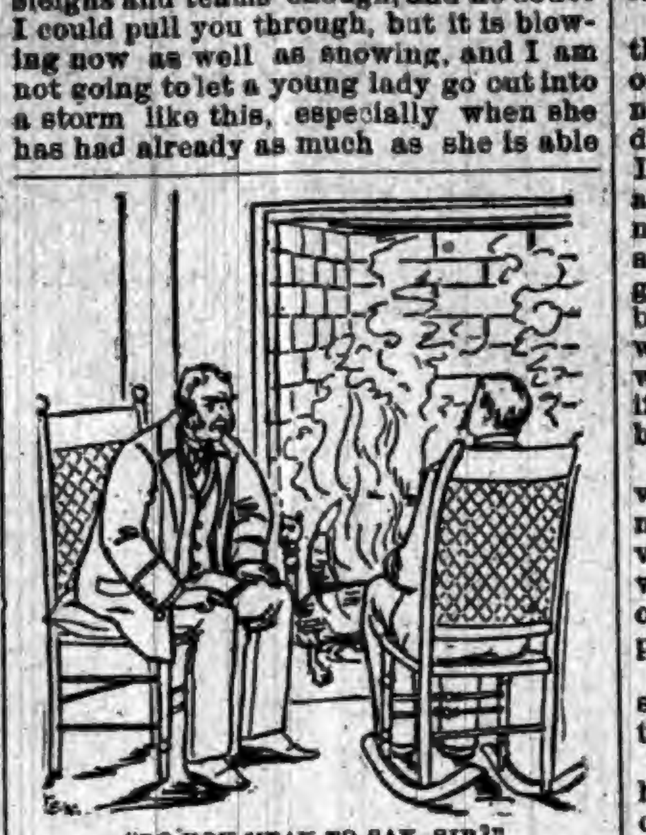
"What you must do now is to get warm," he said, and he put two great logs on the fire.

With a few questions and without sitting down he made himself acquainted with the situation. For a moment he gazed down upon us, and then he said:

"The first thing to do now that you are a little thawed, is to get off your coats and wraps."

"That is hardly worth while," I replied, "for as soon as we are well warmed we must get on, in some way or other, to the Dolliver house."

"Sir," said Major Pendallas, "there is no Dolliver house for you to-night. Here you are, and here you stay. It is three miles back to the main road, and then you would have two miles more to go, and before you reached the Dolliver house there is a long hollow, and at this present moment the snow is probably drifted five feet. If you had taken the right road you most likely would have been in that snow drift now. I have sleighs and teams enough, and no doubt I could pull you through, but it is blowing now as well as snowing, and I am not going to let a young lady go out into a storm like this, especially when she has had already as much as she is able to stand of that sort of thing. Your bags will be brought in, and your horse put in the stable. Mrs. Bardsley will take charge of Miss Weldon. I'll attend to you, sir, and supper will be ready in half an hour," and without waiting for an answer he left the room.



"DO YOU MEAN TO SAY, SIR?"

We looked at each other and laughed.

"That is just what I hoped he would do," said Miss Weldon. "I have had all the sleighing I want for this day."

"Good!" I cried, throwing off my overcoat; "I feared I might have to persuade you."

"That is really absurd," she said, "as if the storm and Major Pendallas were not quite enough."

In five minutes Miss Weldon had been carried off by the beaming Mrs. Bardsley, while Major Pendallas conducted me to a bed-room on the ground floor, in which I found a crackling wood fire. The house was a large one, and seemed to be lighted from top to bottom.

We three sat down to a big round supper table, and as might have been expected the meal was bountiful, hot and most grateful and cheery to the two storm-beaten travelers, who had eaten nothing since breakfast except an unattractive luncheon on the train.

Our host did most of the talking, and we were well content to have him do it.

"You cannot imagine," he burst out, as soon as we were seated, "how glad I am to have you two people here. I expected to spend this Christmas eve absolutely alone, and I should have felt that, for I never did anything of the kind before, and from a boy I have thought more of Christmas eve than of Christmas day. There is less of a strain in it. On Christmas day you feel as if you ought to be awful jolly, because if you don't, you won't have another chance for a year. On Christmas eve one can be jolly without thinking of it. If there are any shortcomings they can be made up next day. Last year my niece was with me and we had plenty of company, but now she's married and cleared out utterly. Gone to Europe with her husband, and intends to stay there.

"But the storm has been good to me. Let me give you a piece of this chicken, sir, and some butter. This is Christmas butter, especially made from the cream of two cows, both granddaughters of the great Cavalier George."

The Major's anticipation of a truly jolly Christmas eve was interfered with by Miss Weldon, who declared, shortly after nine o'clock, that she was so fatigued by her day's experiences that she would be obliged to bid us good-night. When she had gone the Major and I each lighted a cigar and drew up before the big fire in the parlor.

"I can't help being disappointed," said he, "for I intended to get up a lot of games, and have Mrs. Bardsley and her daughter in. They are very respectable people, and at Christmas time we always have them in at the games. But bed is the best place for Miss Weldon after what she has pulled through this day. And I am so rejoiced to have you both in the house that I sha'n't grumble. It doesn't matter in the least that when the sun set to-day I had never seen either of you, nor you me. I know who you are, and you know who I am; at least Miss Weldon knows, and that's enough."

"But you don't know me," I said.
